France and Italy Make a Tariff Treaty.

An Important Addition to the Franco-Russian Compact.

It Promises to Shift the Balance of Power in Europe.

England is Indifferent to It Owing to Her Strong Confidence in the Friendship of America—Carlist Ascendency in Spain.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] LONDON, Nov. 26 .- [By Atlantic Ca ble. Copyright, 1898.] France and Italy, after a decade of tariff warfare, have surprised their friends and enemels by concluding a commercial treaty which promises to shift the balance of power in Europe. But for the friendship of the United States, which emboldens Great Britain to comparative indifference regarding continental combinations, Great Britain would be alarmed at the prospect of Italy deserting the triple alliance and adding her formidable navy to the Franco-Russian compact, which is held to be the inevitable result of the union of the two estranged nations.

The critics here regard the treaty as sequel to the Fashoda incident. France's defeat in Egypt, opened her eyes to the necessity of increasing the number of her friends. Therefore, she hastened to initiate negotiations with Italy, and will give her weaker neighbor the benefit of the minimum tariff. long and vainly sought by the latter. The Italians estimate that under the new arrangement a million hectrolitres of heavy southern wines, which are used in mixing the lighter French wines, will be exported to France, resulting in a great impetus to Italian industry.

In return France expects to remove the danger of having to cope with the Italian navy in the Mediterranean in the event of a German war, and also to nullify Germany's policy of isolating France.

WHERE BRITAIN GAINS.

Free-trade Britain has no subsidies she can offer to retain Italy's support but, in the present position of the world's policies, she is not as solicitous for it as she would have been a year ago. What Great Britain loses in Italy, the Westminster Gazette declares, she gains in the Philippines.

Conversations which a representative of the Associated Press had with politicians here indicate that the interest of Englishmen in the United States eastern tariff is increased by the belief that once embarked in colonial acquisitions, the United States will be compelled, as Great Britain has been, to constantly add to her colonial possessions others which may be thrown on the market, merely to prevent them falling into the hands of her rivals. The inauguration of a "closed door" policy, they think here, would do much potential damage to British interests, and every American utterance tending to foreshadow the "open door" policy has been eagerly seized upon and magnified by the editorial writers.

TROUBLESOME FILIPINOS. The London office of a Philippine capitalist has received a letter from its agent at Manila, dated October 18, in which the agent says:

"The rebels are prepared already to resist annexation. I am in the confidence of their chiefs, and I assure you they are quite prepared to retire to the hills if more than a protectorate is offered. I hope it will not come to warlike proceedings, for it would be a very protracted affair. The Americans would not find the rebels as easy as the Spaniards did, for they formerly had only 400 rifles, while the rebels now have 80.000 rifles and eighty cannon, including several Maxims."

The Manila correspondent adds: "Americans are not allowed to pass the rebel lines without passports. A party of German officers who attempted to do so without passports, were mistaken for Americans and were refused permission. When it was discovered they were Germans, the officers were permitted to proceed."

The manager of this Philippine company, who has spent years in the Philippine Islands, does not attach any importance to the foregoing plans. He says the Americans have magnified the importance and influence of Aguinaldo throughout.

CARLIST ASCENDANCY.

An English Carlist positively asserts that Don Carlos's army will take the field in Spain soon after the treaty is signed. He declares that a loan has been fully financed and that it is divided equally between France and oney would have been secured had it not been for the fact that Don Carlos stipulated that there should be no as sistance from Jews, as he is appre ensive of their obtaining financial ontrol of the monarchy.

Continuing, it was asserted that the Spanish government has known for A Conflict With Them good impression. The Senator and Valencia came on Tuesday, the Arisana that Do Conflict With Them some time that Don Carlos possessed an army organized into battalions and batteries, officered and largely armed, but the Spanish ministers counted or his failure to secure funds. Therefore the Spanish government is said to be panic-stricken, and to be endeavoring panic-stricken, and to be endeavoring to make the Spaniards believe that They Will Not Submit to the Great Britain has agreed to finance Don Carlos, and that he, in turn, ha undertaken to cede the Canary Islands to Great Britain in the event of success.

REFORMS IN SPAIN.

The commission appointed by the Spanish chambers of commerce to consider the question of reforms in Spain met at Saragossa and recommended sweeping military and civil retrench ments in addition to many reforms for the benefit of the workingmen. The commission also pronounced in favo of an investigation into the continuance of the Cuban insurrection, and withholding the rewards promised to Cubar officers.

There is a report in commercial cir cles that Spain will reorganize her entire financial system, and readjust her bonded indebtedness after the treaty of peace is signed. This report disturbs the bondholders of Spain.

FRANZ JOSEF'S JUBILEE. The recent trawic death of the Emoress of Austria overclouds the cele bration in that country of the halfcentury of the Emperor's reign, and prevents the carrying out of the festive features of the programme. The ceremonles will be confined to the churches, schools and army, and Vienna will be decorated and illuminated only by private citizens.

The Austrian Reichsrath assembled yesterday and listened to the addresses of the presidents of the two houses eulogizing the reign of Emperor Francis Joseph. The members, as a rule, wore evening dress and decorations but the Poles and Czech were dressed in gala national costumes. Only the benches of the Socialists were empty the members of that party having refused to participate in the meeting.

About 4000 civic honors will be conferred on December 2, the anniversary of the proclamation, in 1848, of Francis Joseph as Emperor of Austria, after the abdication of his uncle, Ferdinand I. and the renunciation of the crown by his father. Among those who will be honored are all the burgomasters, All the garrisons will attend church, and every soldier, including the retired and bronze-medal men of each regiment, will select the best officer or private for a decoration.

Regular Army, and Enlistment of Natives in Our New Island Possessions - Praise for Volun

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 .- [Exclusive Dispatch.] Secretary Alger's annual report will be made public early next week. His most important recommendation will be that the regular army be increased to 100,000 men, and he will also ask for authority from Congress to enlist natives as soldiers in the Philippines and other new possessions. He will urge the increase in order that the department may as speedily as possible relieve the volunteers now in the Philippines and Porto Rico. He will pay a tribute to the volunteer soldiers, and will say that, while the volunteers enlisted for the war and were willing to serve out two years, the time of their enlistment, they find garrison duty irksome, and many men have business affairs and families to support, which makes it a hardship for the government to com-pel them to remain. He desires to relieve these volunteers as rapidly as possible, but can do so only by in-creasing the regular army to a numerical strength to enable the government to keep a sufficient number of troops in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines to insure order while these islands are under military occupation by the United States. The Secretary's recommendation that he be authorized to enlist natives of these islands as part of the army is made in the belief that there should be acclimated troops in each of the new possessions, under American officers. under American officers.

perican Cause in the Islands Badly Managed at Home-Too Late to Conciliate Insurgents - Timely Reinforcements.

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES 1 NEW YORK, Nov. 26.-[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Sun's Manila special says the London interview of Aguinaldo's representative, Agoncillo, undoubtedly expresses the feeling of many prominent Filipinos, including Aguinaldo himself, and it is just as well that the people of the United States should realize first as last, the probability of a stubborn conflict with the Filipinos before they will accept an American government.

Unquestionably the American caus here has been badly handled at home It is the old hind-sight question. Had our commanders been authorized to make a frank declaration of the American policy at the start, or even a frank statement of the probabilities there is hardly a question that the at-titude of the Filipines would now be much more satisfactory. The enforced policy of reserve on the part of the Americans has produced corresponding reserve, and suspicion on the part of the Filipinos. The unfortunate action of some of our troops on August 13 contributed to this, and added a dangerous feeling of contempt for American courage which many Filipinos now

The Filipino leaders realize the im possibility of their obtaining absolute ndependence, nevertheless they have steadily deluded their people into be lieving that was the sole object of their rebellion. They have utterly ignored the conditions resulting from the American action, and assure their peo ple that they accomplished Spain's overthrow in the Philippines unaided. They understand, finally, their inability to whip Spain before Dewey's victory, and know that they never could have conquered while Spain had any naval strength. With Spanish warships here, the Filipinos were never able to gain the momentum which made possible their recent successes.

This is the situation the Americans must meet. Earlier in the game a Considering these things this is a peculiarly happy time for reinforce ments, and the arrival of the transports is well-timed and will make zona on Friday, and the Ohio today It was well to have the transports ar rive singly as it is believed that cumulative effect is better than that of the arrival of several ships simultaneously. All of the transports re port uneventful voyages. The men are in good health.

The arrival of reinforcements has had a salutary effet upon the men here who realize that there is no pros pect of their soon returning to America, and they are beginning to accept the situation more philosophically Homesickness has undoubtedly had much to do with making the sick lists so large, and a more contented frame of mind is appearing which will soon reduce the number of sick.

Affairs at Manila are reported to be shaping themselves in a way that is satisfactory to the commanding officers of the military posts of the Philippines. The troops are very anxious to come home, but there is not the air of discontent about the camps that was manifest when the men landed at Cavite. The food has been much improved and there is a noticeable change for the better in the sick list. The men are rapidly becoming acclimated, and are now splendid disciplined campaigners.

Conclusive Answer to Be Given Not Later Than Monday.

Probability That Spain Will Yield to America's Proposal to Cede the Philippines-Treaty of Peace is Likely to Be Signed Soon.

ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT 1 PARIS, Nov. 26 .- [By Atlantic Cable.] The Spanish Peace Commission this evening does not know what will be the terms of the answer to the American tender of $20,000,000 for a treaty of cession of the Philippines. Senor Montero Rios, president of the commission will himself write Spain's final reply. presumably upon the lines approved by the Madrid government, but as yet he has not formulated a sentence Up to this evening, the Madrid govrnment had not instructed its commission here to reject the United States offer. Some tentative instructions have been received from Madrid, but today Señor Monetro Rios telegraphed to Madrid for a construction of them of a clearer light thereon, and the commission is now awaiting a reply. Spain will not ask for time beyond Monday. She will then meet the Americans and make a conclusive reply. Speculation continues rife here, as to the acceptance or refusal of the American terms, but a majority of those who are in any degree able to judge believe that Spain will yield, and the American commissioners expect that treaty will be signed. RIOS'S INSTRUCTIONS.

MADRID, Nov. 26.-The Imparcial [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] oday says: "The instructions cent to M. Montero Rios order him again to insist that the absolute rights of Spain in the Philippines should be maintained in accordance with the text of the protocol. However, the department declares that Senor Montero Rice will sign the peace treaty without reserve, as its signature under protest will deprive the treaty of a definite character and leave matters as bad as they are now. We have ministerial authority for saying that the government desires the speediest settlement of these matters, as otherwise they may result in grave dangers in Spain." LAST DAY OF GRACE. [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

sioners will meet the Spanish com-missioners on Monday, the last day of grace, so far as this Philippine proposition is concerned, under express and unyielding instructions to offer $20,-000,000 for the cession to the United States of the entire Philippine group. It is not doubted that between now and the hour of meeting, the Spanish commissioners will devise several other more or less plausible propositions to offer in behalf of the American ulti-matum, but as indicated by the above instructions, their efforts will be unsuc-cessful, and Monday's meeting must mark either the practical cession of the Philippines to the United States or the final break in the negotiations at Paris, resulting in the seizure by the United

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.-Regarding the Cabinet meeting held late last evening, it is said today that in an evening, it is said today that in an informal way an effort has been made to secure modifications of the terms of our ultimatum and incidentally an extension of the time limit beyond next Monday. As to the character or extent of the concessions sought by the Spaniards, the officials here are extremely reticent, but whatever its character, the decision was reached at fast night's meeting of the Cabinet, that they could not be granted. It is regarded as probable that the final reply to the ultimatum will not be submitted to our commissioners before next Monday. *CONFIDENTIAL CORRESPOND - ENCE.

said, and everything appeared to be in good condition. The water was clear in appearance, but had a bad odor. It was analyzed, but with what result he did not know.

He found the camp of the Eighth New York Regiment at Chickamauga in a very insanitary condition. The camps of the Ninth and Twelfth New York were in good condition. In the course of his remarks he stated that the water there appeared to be clear but he was not certain as to its said-brity, because he did not taste it.

"Why did you not taste the water, Doctor?" asked Dr. Connor.

"Why did you not taste the water, Doctor?" asked Dr. Connor.
"I don't know why I should take any risks," retorted the witness.
Dr. Terry said that the Sternberg hospital at Camp Thomas, under the charge of Surgeon-Major Hoff, was in excellent condition and the best of orhospital at Camp Thomas, under the charge of Surgeon-Major Hoff, was in excellent condition and the best of order prevailed. The sick were given every attention and everything that could be done was done for them.

In speaking of the camp at Huntsville, Ala., Dr. Terry said that he met Col. Duffy and both he and the officers and men of his regiment appeared to be in excellent condition. Col. Duffy, he said, did all he could for his men, and there was little sickness.

AFFAIRS IN PORTO RICO.

Report of Alleged Disturbances

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The V Department has received a second dispatch from Gen. Brooke regarding the allegations of disturbances in Porto Rico. It is as follows:
"SAN JUAN, Nov. 26.—Adjutant-

General, Washington: Reports of disturbances at points mentioned are unquestionably false. No disturbances have occurred since Nov. 1. Rumors have been investigated and found false. I am fully advised as to the conditions. Now and then some one is murdered as a result of personal quarrels, as is the case in the United States, not by armed bands. Have all known or alleged leaders of bands arrested so far as I can learn, and they will be tried a an early date. "BROOKE."

EVACUATION OF CUBA.

Satisfactorily—Blanco Going.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]
WASHINGTON Nov. 26.—Gen. M. C. Butler of South Carolina, member of the Cuban Evacuation Commission, arrived today from Havana in response to a telegraphic summons from the President, and this afternoon he had a two hours' consultation with the President at the White House.

Gen. Butler gave it as his opinion that all the Spanish troops will have departed ten days before the date fixed departed ten days before the date fixed in the agreement. Ha says the Spaniards have met the American commissioners with reasonable fairners, and that there has been little friction. Some of the claims they have made for compensation for Spanish property, have been ridiculous and they will, of course, be abandoned in the end. Gen. Butler denies all the reports of dissension among the members of the American commission.

Gen. Butler is of the opinion that the milltary government of the island must be continued for sometime, but that it should only be as vigorous as may be necessary to preserve order. He thinks the Cubans are ambiguous for self-government and anxious to avoid riction with the American authorities. If military control is exercised with discretion, he believes there will be little trouble. One of the most troublesome features of the situation is the criminal class, and the difficulty of determining in the case of prisoners who are incarcerated for political offenses and who for crime.

There has existed in Havana in the past an oath-bound organization of the order of the Italian Mafia, known as the Nenigo, which was a source of terror to the inhabitants. One of the few commendable acts of Weyler was the deportation of about seven hundred of the members of this organization to the members of this organization to the of Ceuta. But fears are turn or that the order may be revived by some of those who were not departed.

Gen. Butter describes the sanitary condition of Havana now as a pesthole filled with unmentionable lith, squared and destitution. The Spanish authorities have, however, agreed to indugurate the work of putting the city into sanitary condition, with the aid, of the municipal authorities, and work to this end is to begin at once. Gen. Futler paints a dark picture of the destitution among the poorer classes, and says it will probably be necessary for us to furnish some aid to the etawing wretches.

GILLETT'S WHEREABOUTS Remors That He Fled to Avoid Ar fest—Queer Business methods: [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 26.—The where-abouts of Grant C. Gillett, the big Kansas cattle feeder, whose failure was announced yesterday, are still un known. Probably twenty-five different Kansas City live stock commission houses are endorsers of Gillett's paper which is said to be scattered through the banks of the country from Denver possibly any loss to a single holder. Of the cattle in the feed lots, something over ten thousand head were purchased from one Denver firm, that possibly any loss to a single holder. Of the cattle in the feed lots, something over ten thousand head were hurchased from one Denver firm, that of Dake & Keeler, to whom Gillett is said to have given a mortgage of $208,000. These cattle are three-year-old steers, and cattlemen assert a low estimate of their present value is $30 a head, or about $10 a head more than the interest in the cattle held by the Denver firm. Another lot of cattle is about sixty-five hundred head, which Gillett and another dealer own in Oldahoma. These cattle are said to be mortgaged for $125,000 and are said to be worth a third more than the amount against them.

A remerkable thing about Gillett's methods of doing business was that he kept no books and took no one into his confidence. All the details of his enormous deals were carried in his head, and this complicates matters. Gillett is dubbed as a careless financier, and those who know him best now lay that sheer luck carried him through many of his heaviest deals. Manylocal stockmen declare that he would not run away even if he knew his debts would wipe out his herds and ranches, because he believes that luck will always attend him. Nevertheless there was talk today that he had mortgaged cattle twice and left to avoid arrest. The deal that forced Gillett to the wall was a $125,000 loan held by a Kansas City live stock firm. The money was advanced to him on $500 head or feed-ing cattle in Oklahoma, and the mortgage fell due last week. The Kansas City firm declined to extend the loan Gillett tried hard to get money, but for the first time in his career he was unable to get backing.

Close up to the heels of that came a dead that fire head with the had more than the dead of the head had to get money, but for the first time in his career he was unable to get backing.

Close up to the heels of that came dead that he had with Valle and Gates dead that he had with Valle and Gates, the Arizona cattle magnates. Giffett had baid $10,000 as earnest money, on 4000 cattle, in the Panhandle of Texas, which Valle and Gates owned on the famous "Ja" ranch. These cattle were worth $120,000, and Gillett was unable to raise the money to take them. He saw his $10,000 go to pay a liability for the loss to Valle and Gates. As soon being pressed by one or two of his the loss to Valle and Gates. As soon being pressed by one or two of his as it was learned here that Gillett was creditors, others sent their representatives to his ranch to protect their loans. Meanwhile the plunger took his leave. Eastern holders of Gillett's naper which has been passed through the hands of the Kansas City firm, began telegraphing, and today few of the Kansas City houses are trying to sell live stock paper.

SAN JOSE Nov. 26.—The Board of Education met this evening, abolished all the kindergartens, dismissed five special teachers, and reduced all salaries of teachers in the High School one-half and all grammar teachers 10 per cent. BOOTS," OF THE TENTH PENNSYL VANIA RETURNS FROM MANILA.

hirteen Years Old, Four Feet and a Haif Tall, and Carries a Cer tified Discharge by Reason o Returning to Go to School.

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES. SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—[Ex-lusive Dispatch.] "Boots," the mascot of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers and a veteran of the Philippine expedition, came back to America today on the City of Paris. Among the incidents of his campaign in the islands, he records an interview with Admiral Dewey, a trip on the Olympia to Hongkong, participation in the siege of Malate, and a march into conquered Manila.

"Boots," whose real name is Rob ert MeDermott, is but 13 years old and six inches short of five feet tall, but he wears the blue of the army and the stern determination of one who has seen service. He carries a regularly certified discharge from his Boots" was enrolled in Co. B mascot, on July 12, 1898, to serve two years, or during the war, and that he is honorably discharged by reason of his returning home to attend school. "Boots" tells a story of his adventures since leaving the Coast, which will make the average American boy glow with envy. He left here on the Zealandia, and when three days out fell down a hatchway and broke his arm. Coupled with seasickness he suffered much and bravely. regimental surgeon set his arm, and by the time of arriving at Manila, he had regained its use. "Boots" settled down at Camp Dewey with his company and fared as it did. In the trenches before Malate he carried water, ammunition and otherwise made himself a blessing. When the bullets flew like hail, he was not "Dev came so afraid. As he says: quick a feller didn't have a chance

o dodge 'em, an' yer couldn't see em tell dey wuz past." When Manila surrendered, "Boots' was in the van of troops entering the town. During the fight previous, he captured a Spanish rifle and outfit, and was ready to do valorous exe cution if necessary. He still has them in his possession, with other trophies of battle.

"Boots's" meeting with Admiral Dewey is best told in his own characteristic language. On August 13 he found out that the Olympia, then in the harbor at Manila, was to go to Hongkong shortly. He determined to go with it. "I gets in a sandpan," he says, "wid a Fillerpeener, an' boards de ship. Dere wuz a Chinese guy tells me der admiral's in his cabin, and I goes in. He wuz sittin' at a fine table wid the captain, an' I salutes. I said: 'Admiral, I want to go to Hongkong,' an' he says could. I salutes again and ducks.

"Boots" describes graphically the rip to Hongkong, his stay there and lourney back to Manila. He was hirteen days on the Olympia, and was made much of. He says that disease began to attack the men in such numbers that Col. Hawkins conluded that it would be best to send him home. When the City of Para was ready to leave, "Boots"

"By some of the strange emotions of telepathy I felt on that night that an outward movement had been deter-mined upon and decided to connect the after and forward engines ship; yet I feared to be caught in an operation of nearly an hour, but I was told that the full speed of four engines and one half boiler was greater than two engines and full boiler power, so I risked it. Much has to be risked in battle. It appeared that at every hour I was oc-cupying my mind with this ques-plon. Cervera had planned his attempt to escape.

"Another curious incident followed their army's retreat to the hills west of Santiago, when our army was closing about them. The insurgents took possession of Spanish blockhouses to the number of six and burned them. That was the number of ships in Cervera's fleet, and h hought it was a signal to us heir intended movement, so until the following day. little fact determined the result."

Murdered and Robbed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—Aged "Grandma" Wynn, the richest resident of Brooklyn, Ill., and owner of half the town, which lies across the river from here, was murdered Friday night or early Saturday morning by robbers, who cut her throat and left her dead in the front yard, after ransacking the house. Mrs. Wynn, who frequently had considerable money in the house, lived entirely alone.

She was a kindly old lady with many virtues. Her only falling was a desire to live by herself. She managed her own estate personally, collected her rents, banked her money and invested her savings without consulting any one. Mrs. Wynn was estimated to be worth from $90,000 to $100,000. ST. RUMORED CONCESSION.

ecretary Ojeda Says the Americans Final Declaration Has Been Communicated to His Governered Monday Afternoon.

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] NEW YORK, Nov. 27 .- [Exclusive Dispatch.] Notwithstanding all . that has been said as to latest positive insistance from Washington that there must be no modification of the ultimaregiment. The document recites that tum to Spain, special Paris advices this morning state that an additional con cession was made to her at the last moment, our commissioners acting under instructions cabled from the State Department. The exact character of the instructions are not made public. Secretary Ojeda of the Spanish commission said last night in Paris; "Our interchange of notes with the American commissioners has now ceased. We have communicated the final declara tion of the American commissioners to our government, and now await an answer which will be delivered Monday at

AMERICAN SHIPBUILDING.

The "open door" policy as bearing upon American shipbuilding, is creating considerable discussion at Washington. It is said to be apparent that the American shipbuilding interest is opposed to the open-door policy, if it it is to be one to deprive American shipbuilding of the opportunity to revive American commerce with the construction of ships at prices greater than would have been paid for similar ships abroad. American shipbuilders are reported to be forming a combination to divide the vessels among them that are to be authorized by the next session of Congress. The apprehension at the Navy Department is that those builders will hold the bids so high as to compel the government to pay much more for the ships than the government of Great Britain is paying for vessels of like di mensions. It is not definitely learned whether the American shipbuilders in tend to control the "open door" policy so as to limit the advantages to be enjoyed in the possession of the Phil ippines to American registers, at the same time they are forcing the United States to pay too high prices for bat tleships and cruisers.

WARNING TO BUILDERS.

From the best source in Washington it is learned that should the shipbuilders or their attorneys become too bold and demand too much, there are intimations already that the navigation laws will be changed so as to discourage the use of foreign flags by offering all inducements to foreign bottoms, and that the navy will undertake, at New York, Norfolk, League Island, and other stations the construction of new ver seis. The Maine, Texas, Cincinnati and Raleigh were all constructed at navy yards, and were well built. If the American shipbuilders strike too hard it is said the navy yards may again try construction, thus affording the shipbuilders an opportunity to make their excessive prices to private pa

THAT SPANISH ANSWER.

Spanish instructions were wired to Paris from the Madrid government yesterday as to the answer they are to make on Monday to the American ultimatum. Unhappily they comprise neither acceptance nor rejection of the American terms. They are not even clear. A Spanish delegate correspondent stated in Paris last night that it had been necessary to telegraph Madrid for elucidation of certain points and the reply has not yet been received. It is a matter of some satisfaction to be able to say that Spain completely abandons the recalcitrant position which she has heretofore maintained, and approaches within a easonable distance to the American

STARTIANG STATEMENTS.

The report of the Newfoundland com nission, now due in London, will con tain some startling statements regard ing the French breaches of the treaty of Utrecht in respect to the French shore of Newfoundland. They imply, if not actually say, it is impossible for the present state of affairs to continue without provoking a dangerous situa tion in the colony. This means another difficult discussion between England and France, for the bounty supporting the French fishery in New foundland waters is almost the sole training-ground of seamen for the French navydx

"We learned to know ourselves; Europe and all the world learned to know us; and it completely reunited the American people. 'Our warships," he added, "were too heavily armed. A rapid-fire 6-inch gun is a weapon, is a man's gun. Schley did not regard Japan as likely menace to our western coast her interests were westward, not eastward He had always favored the annexation of Hawaii: believed in it before Dewey took Manila, and doubly indorsed it now. An interesting feature of the dinner at the Lotus Club last night in honor of Schley was that the party drank to him from a loving cup made from a 6-inch shell taken from the Spanish flagship Maria Teresa, after Cervera's attempted escape from Santi

SUPPRESSED PROCLAMATION. It was said last night that the legal adviser of Gen. Miles, who is a rela tive of the adjutant-general of the army, prepared a proclamation while Miles was in Porto Rico announcing the intention of the American army to overthrow the Spanish authority on the island. It was printed in large numbers for distribution. It was an illadvised document, and if it had been sent out broadcast would, it is claimed, have caused the recall of Miles.

The latter discovered the plan and stopped it in time to prevent its distribution. He then dictated another which met with the approval of Washington. It is claimed this was a schem to break down Miles and bring about stand, the question arises as to whether or not Corbett and Considine will consent to produce copies of the telegrams which they sent to Corbett's brother in San Francisco, and Considine's brother in another western town, within three days of the fight. It is not probable, but if they do, they may create a situation still more interesting than the present one. I am told the club has secured documentary evidence to prove that Corbett had an agreement with McVey to get into the ring when he did in order to save Jim from defeat. The statement that McVey, Corbett's trainer, has gone to San Francisco is

NO BUBONIC PLAGUE

SAN FRANCISCO'S CHINATOWN IS NOT INFECTED.

Dofinite Statement Made by Board of Health Officials and the City. Bacteriologist.

WEIRD SUPERSTITION ABOUT THE HALL OF JUSTICE TOWER.

Arizona Horse-thieves Convicted Col. Tupper Granted a New Trial. Whaler Fearless Returns. Elsie Williams Guilty, [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—The bulocal Chinatown is the definite Statement made conjointly by Health Officer Callwey, City Bacteriologist Spencer and Dr. Williamson, a member of the Board of Health. The report that the dread disease had appeared in San Francisco grew out of the fact that the Chinese Consul asked the health de-partment to investigate the death, alleging to be mysterious, of Leong Chun Chew. So many exaggerated and Chew. So many exaggerated and alarming rumors were developed from this request that a corps of health inspectors was promptly sent into the Chinese quarter to watch for any suspicious developments. A police quaran tine was established about Chinatown as a precautionary measure, and an autopsy was performed on the remains of Leong Chun Chew, to ascertain whether or not the bacilli of the bubonic plague was present.

Dr. Spencer, the city bacteriologist, assisted by City Physician, Hereford and Dr. Hereford made an extensive autopsy, cutting into all the vital organs, and every suspected portion. They found no traces of bubonic plague even under careful microscopical examination, but the discovery that the Chinese had died of acute Bright's disease, complicated with edema of the lungs, and signed a death certificate to that effect. The discoloration of the remains was accounted for by the fact that the deceased was an inveterate oplum smoker. A thorough investigation of Chinatown by the same physicians and the sisted by City Physician Hereford and A thorough investigation or China-town by the same physicians and the health inspectors showed that there is no contagious disease at present in Chinatown. The quarantine of the quarter was thereupon removed. The Board of Health decided, however, to institute a vigorous campaign of clean-ing, whitewashing and chloride of lime ing, whitewashing and chloride of lime throughout Chinatown.

The canard was started by the Chinese themselves, who were mystified by three deaths they could not understand, but which were due to pneumonia. Even the merchants of Chinatown concluded with their less intelligent countrymen that the bad luck was caused by building the hall of justice tower too high and too near Chinatown. The tower, they said, had aroused the evils of the air by disturbing these imps, and consequently the Chinese would be stricken with plague. When within a week a fourth death occurred—that of Leong Ghun Chew, and when the opium smokers' remains showed discoloration, the Chinese were sure the black plague was upon them, and they communicated with the authorities in the hope that the new municipal building would be razed to the ground, and bad luck be razed to the ground, and bad luck be thus expunged from Chinatown.

PHOENIX (Ariz.,) Nov. 26.—[Exclu-ive Dispatch.] The information sive Dispatch.] The information reaches here that three out of five Mexicans who murdered William Segna at Weaver, Yavapai county, last Sunday night, have been arrested, and wil have their preliminary trial Monday at

The details of the crime reveal one of the most cold-blooded murders recorded. The Mexicans effected an entrance into Segna's place of business, and, shutting the doors, proceeded to stab their victim to death. His outcries attracted a number of people to The murderers inside stopped their bloody work long enough to have two of their number step to the door and notify the bystanders that they would be killed, too, if they did not go away. After completing their bloody work, they were seen to leave the premises. They secreted themselves in the vicinity, and began a course of intmidation against those who were disposed to in-form the authorities of their whereabouts. Sheriff Ruffner and deputies effected the capture of the men by walking in upon them at the house at which they were stopping.

O'DONNELL SURRENDERS. Indicted for Assisting a Prisoner t Escape from Jail.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.1 MODESTO, Nov. 26.-Thomas O'Donnell, attorney, today surrendered himself to Sheriff Purvis. He was in-dicted last year by the grand jury for assisting a prisoner to escape from jail while acting as his attorney. Since that time O'Donnell has been wandering in Oregon, Washington, Montana and British Columbia

He finally tired of being a fugitive trom justice, and came back to surrender. His bail was fixed at $2000, which has not yet been furnished. The offense alleged is passing files into the County Jall, where James Philipps, a horsethief, sawed through his cell bars and escaped, but was captured the next day. He then pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twelve years in San Quentin.

Terry Building Contractors Alleged

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—Accordthe Senate Committee now probing into the affairs of the Board of Harbon Commissioners, a golden harvest was reaped by contractors for work on the ferry building. The acount lost to the State on alterations, changes from the State on alterations, changes from original plans, and extra work is given at $66,847. Representatives of the contractors dispute the correctness of these figures, and assert that they will show that the expert nvestigators lost their reckoning in the maze of items. On the other hand, it is claimed that, while there may be slight errors, the amount given is approximately correct.

The Senate Committee resumed its work today at the room of the harbor board, Senators Dickinson, Prisk and Boyce conducting the investigation. James W. Reld was the only witness called. Reid and W. B. Faville have been conducting a systematic investi-gation since September 6. Faville was called East recently, and their report, which covers the work done and amounts paid and deducted for changes and omissions on four contracts, was presented and explained by Reid, who will be cross-examined on Monday.

MANILA, Nov. 26.—Aguinaldo, nsurgent leader, has addressed a s and communication to Maj.-Gen. Otis, the American military commander, on the subject of the Spanish prisoners in the hands of the insurgents. He has declined to release the clericals and civilians, arguing that both carried arms voluntarily against the insurgents. Aguinaldo then refers Gen. Otis to the ocal papers published since the insur rection for "irrefutable proof" of his assertion that the clericals were the nost active and vengeful agents in sacrificing the lives and honor of inno cent natives.

Continuing, Aguinaldo quotes the inernational rule of reprisal, claiming the right to delay the prisoners in the hope of causing Spain "to liberate the Filipinos and cease torturing and chooting natives whose only crime has been the love of liberty.'

As to his saying, in a former letter that international laws must recede be-fore the just wishes of the people, Aguinaldo asserts that he meant under the existing circumstances recognized laws.
"must accede to the wishes of those fighting for the recognition of the bulk of said laws."

The insurgent leader also maintains his right to detain the prisoners until the Vatican recognizes the rights of the Filipino clericals and civilians, or unti they are exchanged.

Marine Guard of the Cruiser Boston Sent Ashore by Capt. Wilder in Response to a Request From Minister Conger-The Union Jack Raised Over Ting Hai.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.-The United States navy has landed marines in A dispatch was received at the China. A dispatch was received at the Navy Department today stating that the captain of the Boston had landed his marine guard at Tien-Tsin. The dispatch was taken immediately to the White House by Acting Secretary Allen.

Secretary Hay was called into consultation, with the result of reassuring the officials and allaying the first feeling of apprehension. It seems that the marines were landed, not because of any information of rioting or attacks uson American missionaries, but solely to act as a guard for the United States legation at Peking.

The Boston was dispatched to the mouth of the Pei-Ho River several weeks ago, at the instance of United weeks ago, at the instance of United States Minister Conger, to provide a guard for the legation. The Minister represented that nearly all of the legations of the European powers were provided with marine guards, and he did not care to be exceptional in this case. After lying at Tangu for a while the Boston worked her way up the river to Tien-Tsin, about the head of navigation for vessels of her class, and distant about fifty or sixty miles from Peking. It is believed at the Navy Department that the marines will be sent forward from that point in launches or small river boats.

Capt. Frank Wilder, the commander of the Boston, who reported the landing to the Navy Department by cable, did not state how many men were in the guard, but the force is not believed to exceed two dozen men.

The presence of these foreign guards is not welcome to the Chinese government. When the landing was first proposed, its representatives sought to dissuade the United States government from inflicting this humiliation upon it. The effect was to cause a suspension of the execution of the purpose, but as has already been stated, most of the European legations have provided themselves with guards, and the Chinese having become reconciled to their presence, no longer object in our case. Advices that reach the State Department do not indeate an immediate outbreak in China. But the reactionary policy of the Empress Dowager has caused a very uneasy feeling, and may afford one or more of the European powers who have been active in eastern affairs a pretext for making a coup with results affecting the interests of the United States.

For an hour before the plunge, a large force of workmen tore away chock after chock which supported the vessel, and they finished their task almost to the minute of the prescribed time for the launching, leaving only one chock to restrain the monster, and this was the support that little Miss Lucile Gage, daughter of the Governor-elect of the State, had been assigned to remove by means of a guillotine and the inevitable electric button. At a given signal the little miss pressed the button and the crash of breaking timbers announced to the thousands of anxious spectators that the vessel was about to leave the ways.

The American navy is the most efficient, not because of the ships and their armament, but because its officers are selected with more care and more thoroughly trained than those of any other nation. We hear a good deal about the 'man behind the gun.' But the officer behind 'the man behind the gun,' is who does the business. They are taken, not from the aristocracy, because we have none, not from a favored class, but from the people, the robust people of the whole laind. During their maval training they are subjected to higher tests, physical, mental, moral than are required by any other country. Those who came out of the ordeal successfully have no fear. who came out of the ordeal successfully have no fear. When you say Cavite, when you say Santiago, you say Annapolis. There is another reason for our superiority. Our discipline, while strict to a nicety is more humane than that of any other navy. Our men are traited as if they had souls and not like dumb cattle. "The Wisconsin will have a mascotno pungent billy goat, but a badger a badger in bronze to be placed on the forward turret of the ship. the necessity for firing a shot save in practice, or of burning powder, save in salute."

Gov.-elect Henry T. Gage made the following response to a toast to the ladies and gentlemen from Wisconsin:
"Mr. Toastmaster, ladies and gentlemen and fellow-citizens of Wisconsin: California, with her great agricultural, mining, manufacturing, industrial and commercial interests; with her cheering hopes and enlarged possibilities for the future in consequence of the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, an accomplished fact, and the inevitable further extension of our territory in the near future, the result of the indomitable courage of our soldiers and sailors in the late war, bids her fellow-citizens of Wisconsin a most cordial and hospitable welcome. It is our greatest glory that we are a part of the indestructible Union; that we share in its achievements by sea and by land; that its flag is the sacred and common property of all, and that in defense of its honor all are ready to sacrifice fortune and life.

"The grand battleship that today for the first time embraced the waves, constructed by the skill of California-mechanics, bears the proud name of the great State of Wisconsin, and in her future career, in defense of the flag and the Union, she will be another bond between the two great States. Ladies and gentlemen from Wisconsin, we thank you for this visit, and our best wishes go with you to your far-off home. [ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26 .- The battleship Wisconsin, designed in the Bureau of Construction and Repair of the Navy Department, is a sister ship of the Alabama, building at the Cramp's yard in Philadelphia, and also of the Illinois, building at Newport News.

The dimensions of the Wisconsin are as follows: Length on load water line, 388 feet; beam extreme, 72 feet 2½ inches; draft on normal displacement of 11,525 tons, 23 feet 6 inches; maximum displacement, all ammunition and stores on board, 12,325 tons; maximum indicated horse power (estimated,) 10,000; probable speed, 16½ knots. Normal coal supply, 800 tons; coal supply, loose storage, 1200 tons; full bunker capacity, 1400 to 1500 tons. Complement of officers, 40; seamen, marines, etc., 449.

The main hattery will consist of tleship Wisconsin, designed in the Bu-

ment of officers, 40; seamen, marines, etc., 449.

The main battery will consist of 4 13-inch breech-loading rifles in Hichtorn balanced turrets, oval in shape, and placed in the center line of the vessel; and 14 6-inch rapid-fire guns, The secondary battery will consist of 16 6-bounder rapid-fire guns, 2 Colt guns, and 2 field guns. She will carry 4 torpedo tubes. The 13-inch guns have an arc of fire of 135 deg, on each side of the center line; and the 6-inch, an arc of 90 deg, on the broadside, with the advantage of those on the upper deck of a direct fire ahead and astern. Any injury to, or near, either of these 6-inch guns, will be confined to its own compartment, as a 1½-inch steel splinter bulkhead separates each of these guns from its neighbor.

The armor belt, which extends from the steep to select the transport of the second control of t guns from its neighbor.

The armor belt, which extends from the stem to abaft the turrent is to be 16½ inches thick at the top, and 9½ inches thick at the bottom, except at the forward end, where it will be tapered to 4 inches at the stem. This belt ered to 4 inches at the stem. This belt armor will extend from four feet below the normal load line to three and one-half feet above it, and will maintain the full thickness amidships between the turrets, and for the distance occupied by the engines and boilers. Diagonal armor 12 inches thick, connecting this belt armor and barbettes and extending from the slopes of protective deck to top of the side belt, on each side, is worked to give protection from a raking fire. Abaft the after turret, the protection will be completed by thickening the protective deck to 4 inches on the slopes, with 2% inches on be in constant and safe communication with all parts of the vessel. An after conning, or signal tower, is also provided, having an inside diameter of 6 feet, and a thickness of 6 inches. The turrets will be operated by electric power: also the ammunition hoists, and the dynamo and autiliary blowers for ventilating purposes. There will be some eighty odd auxiliary engines in the vessel, thus adding greatly to the efficiency of the ship, in the celerity and certainty with which the work can be done. The cranes for handling the boats are operated by steam; also the deck winches, pumps, windlass, and steering gear (this latter is located beneath the protective deck, and several feet below the water line.) The introduction of these auxiliary engines is brought about mainly by the variety and nature of the work to be done, and the demand for the latest and best in every branch of mechanics represented in a man-of-war. Manual labor is every branch of mechanics represented in a man-of-war. Manual labor is therefore reduced to a minimum; a con-dition of affairs which must result in a greater interest and development of the crew in their special duties as now required in a modern battleship, where fighting and all that leads up to thorough efficiency in that line of art is not handicapped by the constant drudgery so universal in the old-time vessels in our navy.

The height of free board forward of the vessel's hull proper, is twenty feet, and at the stern, 13½ feet. The floor of the pilot-house is 45 feet high, thus placing the eye of the steersman for ordinary cruising, about fifty feet above water. The sight holes in the conning tower for use in close fighting are 34½ feet above the water. The bore of the forward 13-inch guns, will have an elevation of 26½ feet, and the after 13-inch, 19 feet, above the surface of the water. The 6-inch guns vary from 15 to 22½ feet, and the 6-bounder from 30 to 40½ feet above water, according to their location on the vessel. The smaller guns are mounted in the military tops, at heights of from 59 to 79 feet. This great height above water of both main and secondary batteries will enable the vessel to be fought in any weather; a quality always sought for, but obtainable only in vessels of good size, and considered of immense advantage. tainable only in vessels of good size, and considered of immense advantage by all naval authorities. She is also provided with bilge keels, placed be-fore and abaft the midship body only fore and abaft the midship body only, so as not to interfere with docking her. These keels have a maximum denth of three feet, and will largely tend to lessen her motion in a seaway, and so contribute to her steadiness as a gun platform, so essential for correct gun fire. Four powerful electric searchlights are also provided; two on top of the forward chart house, and two on each side of the after military mast: also having an elevation of 25 feet above the water, and commanding a complete all-around range. There will be two sets of triple expansion, twinscrew engines, each in its own sepscrew engines, each in its own sep-arate water-tight compartment; the collective indicated horse power will be collective indicated horse power will be 10,000, with 120 revolutions per minute, stroke, 4 feet. There are eight single cylindrical boilers, each 15½ feet in diameter by 9 feet 11½ inches long, having a total grate surface of 685 square feet, with 21,200 square feet of heating surface; pressure, 180 pounds. These boilers are placed, two each, in four separate water-tight compartments. The smoke pipes are two in number, and stand abreast of each other.

Fears of a Combination Between the Naval Constructors May Force the Government to Build Its Own Warships in the Future

IBY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.1 WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 .- [Exclusive Dispatch.] Whether shipbuilders are forming a combination, trust or pool for the purpose of securing large Navy Department apprehends that such a move may be attempted soon, and is preparing to guard against it. Irving M. Scott, president of the Union Iron Works of San Francisco told your corespondent the other day that the trust story was a bare-faced lie. All the same. Secretary Long is considering Mare Island, so they will be able to do government shipbuilding, and Mr. is doing this solely fears the organization of a trust. At the present time only the yards at New York and Norfolk approximate the condition to build large war vessels, ditions to their machinery to enable them to enter upon the construction of battleships or cruisers of the larger class. It is felt by prominent officials of the Navy Department, that for the protection of the government, not only the navy yards at New York and Nor folk, but those at League Island and Mare Island should be put in condition to build modern war vessels, if for no other reason than the knowledge that they can be so utilized will operate to prevent excessive bids by private builders. Within the next ten years, it is certain the government will either construct or have constructed a large number of additions to its line warships. Heretofore it has been found cheaper, owing to competition between firms, to have the vessels built by private parties rather than at government navy yards. Within the last decade operations of the eight-hour laws and other causes tended to make the cost greater under government construction than when constructed at private yards. In view of the evident intention of shipbuilders to combine to enhance the price of construction of vessels, it is felt that actual competition by the United States itself is essential in order to prevent the govern-ment from being forced to pay exces-sive prices for ship construction.

The National Business League has sent to President McKinley a long letter relative to the establishment of a Department of Commerce and Industries. The letter, which is signed by Ferdinand W. Peck, Erskine M. Phelps, A. H. Revell, John W. Ela, E. G. Keith and other members of the Executive Committee of the league, trges favorable action on bills for the establishment of the department which are now pending in Congress.

I a very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines, the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this carticular remedy than of all other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children.

owns. Keddie made a twenty-five yard run on the left. Leavitt made a bad iumble, and the ball went to Stanford. At this point 'Stanford lost the ball on downs, and Nevada, by a series of rushes and bucks, carried the ball to Stanford's, three-yard line, from where Chism scored the third touchdown. Keddie falled to kick the goal: Score, Nevada, 16; Stanford, 0.

Stanford kicked to Moorman, who ran in twenty yards, and lost the ball on a fumble. After Stanford lost on down, another fumble by Nevada, and a fumble by Stanford, without material gains, Nevada by rushes carried the ball to Stanford's goal, where Evans made the fourth touchdown. Keddie kicked the goal: Score, 22 to 0.

During the remainder of the game Nevada retained the ball almost entirely in Stanford's territory. The game ended with the ball on Stanford's twenty-five-yard line, and the score at the close stood, Nevada, 22; Stanford, 0.

STANFORD TEAM'S ARRIVAL. [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] RENO (Nev.,) Nov. 26.—The Stanford foot ball team, second eleven, arrived this morn ing at 8 o'clock. They were met at th ing at 8 o'clock. They were met at the depot by a committee from the Nevada University, who received them with the Nevada 'varsity yell. The boys alighted from the train, apparently in fine form, but after standing on the platform ten or fifteen minutes in a Nevada November morning, walting for carriages, they got a hump in their backs. It sharpened up their appetites for the hot breakfast to which they were treated by the Nevadans. Great interest was manifested here in the game, all places of business being closed.

A HOPELESS WRECK Constructor Hobson Makes His Report on the Maria Teresa.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 26 .- Constructor Hobson arrived in Washington today from Norfolk and came direct to the Navy Department. He has just re-turned from his trip on the Vulcan to Cat Island, the scene of the casting way of the Maria Teresa. He brought with him the report of Capt. McCalla, who was in charge of the expedition sent on the Vulcan to endeavor to save the vessel. The report is merely an elaboration of his story of the journey and its results, already contained in the telegraphic report to the department. Where it touches upon the condition of the Teresa, makes the wreck appear even more hopeless than Capt. McCalla's telegram. This statement was strongly reinforced by Constructor Hobson's verbal report to Acting Secretary Allen today.

Capt. McCalla's resumes his duties as captain of the Norfolk navy yard. Constructor Hobson goes to Annapolis to take up the direction of his course in naval architecture. He was desirous of returning to Santiago and endeavoring to raise the Colon, but the department had made other arrangements that made this impracticable. with him the report of Capt. McCalla

CONCERNED OVER THE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS AT PARIS.

Comments of the German Press Are Uncomplimentary to the United States.

HOME-COMING OF THE KAISER.

HE FINDS THE NATION IN A SEETH-ING POLITICAL FERMENT.

An American Citizen Imprisoned.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] BERLIN, Nov. 26—[By Atlantic Cable: Copyright, 1898.] The German press this week has busied itself a great deaf about the Philippine question and the peace negotiations at Paris. Nearly all the comments have been uncompli-mentary to the United States, which is regarded with "excessive greed and political indecency in formulating new demands." President McKinley being also accused of "inconsistency," and "lack of backbone" in not withstanding the increasing demands of the imperial party.

A number of the German papers have now adopted a strain indicating to obtain a portion of the Spanish Asiatic possessions for Ger-

The Kreuz Zeitung, which has much influence at court, and in army circles, says: "Germany is materially interested in the outcome of the peace negotiations, more particularly with respect to the Sulu archipelago, where Germany and Great Britain where Germany and Great Britain possess the same kind of commercial privileges, granted to them by Spain in 1877, in which Hamburg and Bremen are largely interested.

"American annexation of this group

"American annexation of this group besides being a matter of strategic importance, would mean, in view of America's prohibitory tariff policy, the destruction of both the German and British trade. In short, an understanding with Great Britain for joint action and intervention is absolutely indispensable. The theory of an American sea cannot be accepted by any of the European nations." Mr. Kasson, therefore, has been indulging in 'day dreams."

PARTICULARLY PAINFUL.

The Deutsche Zeitung, an organ of The Deutsche Zeitung an organ of the Pah-German party, says: "It is particularly painful that with the Caroline Islands, to which will propably be added the rest of the islands, a piece of Spanish goods is disposed of to which we had the historical preemption claim."

emption claim."
The Deutsche Zeitung concludes with urging the government to selze the occasion to acquire a portion of the Carolines, or at least secure compensation in Samoa, and also obtain assurance of the future of Germany's commercial interests in the Philippines and Sulu Archiepelago, guarantees" it says spitefully, "which will hold water even against American interpretations."

WILL NOT INTERVENE.

In spite of the newspaper comments, the correspondent of the Associated Press is informed on good authority that Germany still does not contemplate interference, active or otherwise, with the American claims, at least as long as no concerted action is proposed or carried out jointly by the European powers. This statement tallies with assurances given by the Foreign Office here.

So far as the United States Embassy assurances given by the Foreign Oline here.

So far as the United States Embassy is concerned, no proposition of any kind has been made by the German government. In fact the German to secure special benefits from America or Spain during the peace negotiations, are solely an expression of the wishes of part of the German people, and they in no way bind the government, which is now more than ever desirous of fostering the good will of America.

The Cologne Gazette publishes a letter from a correspondent at Maniia, asserting with "keen regret" that half of the United States land and naval force there is composed of Germans, and there is composed of Germans, and giving a far from flattering picture of American rule at Manila.

The Manila correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung draws an even more gloomy picture, dwelling upon the alleged prevalence of drunkenness and other excesses among the American troops.

POLITICAL FERMENT.

Emperor William has returned home to find Germany in a seething political ferment. All classes of society seem ferment. All classes of society seem permeated with the spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction. In Liberal and Radical circles there is a feeling that there is too much of the personal element in the government of the country, and that this personal rule is doing much mischief. This feeling has found expension in a strong article in the mischief. This reeling has found expression in a strong article in the Vorwaerts, which discusses the matter in its usual caustic and able way. It says: "There is an imperial chancellor and there are imperial Prussian Ministers. But who hears of them? Where is Prince Hohenlone? What is he doing? No one knows. We hear day after day of the acts of the government.

and there are imperial Prussian Ministers. But who hears of them? Where is Prince Hohehlohe? What is he doing? No one knows. We hear day after day of the acts of the government. The Emperor is everywhere and the chancellor is nowhere."

The meeting of the Reichstag is looked forward to with apprehension. The recogning of that body was announced today for December 6, and domestic problems will have to be faced which will require artful and liberal statesmanship to solve satisfactorily. The anti-Semites are clamoring for measures against ews. The Junkers demand legislation to arrest the growth of the Polish population and to oppose the steady march of the Slav races westward. The Socialists are clamoring for recognition and extension of the rights of the working class. The Radicals are insisting on a whole programme of reforms. The Danes in North Schleswig are bitterly resenting the expulsion of Danes. The Alsatians are opposing a dictatorship in Alsace-Loraine, and the Agrarians are goading the government into a reactionary tariff pokey.

Such is the stormy sea of conflicting demands and interests which the German government has to navigate during the coming session of the Imperial Diet.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] POTSDAM, Nov. 26.—All the Prussian Ministers welcomed the Emperor and Empress of Germany on their arand Empress of Germany on their arrival here this morning, on their return from the Holy Land. The Imperial Chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe, expressed the sincere pleasure experienced by the Ministers at the safe return of Their Majestles.

Later the Emperor detailed to the Ministers the results thus far obtained by his journey, and the results expected, with which he expressed himself as being satisfied.

The Emperor also gave the Ministers his views of the present political situation in the Mediterranean.

AN AMERICAN IN PRISON. BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Frank Knaak of New York has been arrested on the charge of lese majeste, said to have charge of lese majeste, said to have been committed in a wine shop. Mr. Knaak was arrested while sitting with his wife in a fashionable restaurant. It is alleged that he refeared in an offensive manner to the Emperor, and a person who heard him immediately summoned a policeman. Although Mr. Knaak had several witnesses who denied that he had made the alleged remark, he was thrown into jail. The officials of the United States embassy have done everything possible to bring about his release, and a large amount of bail has been offered. J. B. Jackson, the first Charge d'Affaires, has had two interviews with Herr Richtnofen, the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the subject.

WATCHING ANARCHISTS.

The Little Butte mine is keeping its own mill constantly pounding and sending ore to the Eureka and Red Dog mills, also. The property is proving a valuable one to its owners, as all old residents here can recall the time, not very far distant, when they thought Lee Allen, who was then developing it and spending lots of money. Was virtually throwing his money away. The property is present owners, and is every day proving more valuable.

The Red Dog mill at Johannesburg cleaned up 18000 last Sunday morning from a run of ninety tons of ore from the Butte mine. A great many thousands have been taken from this mine, and it seems to be as good a producer as ever. Mr. Wilson, who now owns and operates it, is a thorough mining man of large experience, who keeps his own counsel and quietity ships cut a brick of this size every few weeks.

Tupper Gets a New Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—The Supreme Court has rendered a decision granting a new trial to C. I. Tupper, convicted in Los Angeles some months ago of having attempted to free "Kid" Thompson, a train-robber, then imprisoned in the Los Angeles County Jail. The court found that during the trial of Tupper, the presiding judge left the courtroom, permitting the case to be carried on in his absence, and upon this ground the judgment was set aside.

[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.] LONDON, Nov. 26 .- [Associated Press Cable Letter. Copyrighted, 1898.] The recent comparatively mild weather which has rpevailed in Great Britain has been interrupted by a thorough blizzard in many parts of the country, especially in the north, where the owdrifts have been several feet deep. snowarits have been several rest deep.
Three men perished in the snow in the highlands; a train was blown off the rails near Tralee, Ireland; numbers of fishing boats have been lost; many fishermen have perished, and the Irish mail boats and cross-channel mail enviled were interrupted or seriously service were interrupted or seriously delayed. Trains have been snowed up at several places and generally the nowstorm is considered to have been the worst for many years. The severe weather reached as far south as the Mediterranean, where a French transport bound for Tunis, was obliged to return to Toulon in a damaged condi-tion. She also reported that some of the recruits on board of her were killed or injured during the storm. QUEEN'S CRANK VISITOR. Queen Victoria, who has been enter-taining extensively at Windsor this week, received a visitor from a man named Matthews, described as an American, who presented himself at the castle with a bundle of papers un-der his arm and asked to see Her the castle with a bundle of papers under his arm and asked to see Her Majesty. He said he had just come into a large property through the death of his grandfather, and he wanted to consult with the Queen about it. The authorities found that he was a harmless crank, and they sent him back to London.

a harmless crank, and they sent him back to London.

The dislike of the Queen for the late William E. Gladstone was well known, but since the death of the great statesman, Her Majesty has given several proofs of her kindly regard for Mrs. Gladstone, the widow. She has written frequently to the latter inquiring very compassionately regarding her health, and expressing the hope that her between the same of the same services.

There is some discussion this week There is 'some discussion this week as to whether the Queen will again go to the south of France next spring, in view of the Anglophobic feeling excited by the Fashoda dispute. Outburst upon the part of the French newspapers are having a certain effect, and letters are appearing in the English newspapers urging that pressure be exercised in the proper quarters to induce the Queen not to go to the Rivera, but to go to Florence instead.

INFANTA EULALIA'S BAZAAR

INFANTA EULALIA'S BAZAAR. The Countess Casa Valencia, wife of the former Spanish Ambassador of that name, has written to the newspapers appealing for funds to be devoted to the relief of the wounded Spanish soldiers and widows of the slain. As generous contributions already received will not suffect to meet the widespread will not suffice to meet the widespread nisery existing among this class unfortunate Spaniards, a three days' bazaar will be opened at Downshire House on December 1 by the Infanta Eulalia. The proceeds will be de-voted to the Spanish fund for the re-lief of the wounded and the widows.

KITCHENER'S RECEPTION. At Cambridge on Thursday last, Gen. Kitchener was accorded a great re-ception when he received the freedom ception when he received the freedom of the borough, and was admitted to the degree of doctor of laws, which was the occasion for an outburst of time-honored, rollicking, undergraduate spirit. The students mustered a great force, sang patriotic ditties, and dangled a life-size effigy of a devrish ever the balcony, in front of the general, who, with the university "big eral. who. with the university "big wiss" had to undergo good-humored chaff. Later, the students celebrated the day with an enormous bonfire in front of Market Hall, the fire being replenished with garden fences, tradesmen's shutters and a recently-erected municipal band stand.

HOLLAND'S QUEEN'S WILL. The young Queen of Holland, who recently displayed her strong will by recalling a whole issue of postage stamps because her portrait on them made her look too girlish, is again showing her spirit in the question of her betrothal to Prince William of Wiede, an officer in the German army, which has been practically settled upon. The official announcement of the betrothal has been kept back on account of certain difficulties in the protocol, the question being whether the Prince should be vested with the the Prince should be vested with the rights and prerogatives of Prince Consort, or retain his present rank. Unless the former plan is adopted, neither the laws of Holland or the foreign courts will recognize him as a member of the Dutch royal family. The Weide family insist upon the title of Prince Consort, but Queen Wilhelmina says Queen Victoria's precedent is to be followed, and the title of Prince Consort is not to be conferred until eighteen months after the marriage. The wedding has already been fixed to take place at the Hague next spring.

It has leaked out that the betrothal of the young Queen to the Prince of Weide is of romantic origin. The Prince's older brother married the Princess Pauline of Wurtemburg, who Prince's older brother married the Prince's Pauline of Wurtemburg, who was Wilhelmina's intimate girlhood friend. Once, when they were staying together and indulging in dreams of the future, they vowed, according to the story, that they would only west two brothers. The Prince's Pauline afterwards married the elder Prince of Welde, Prince Frederick, and Wilhelmina determined to keep her vow and wed his brother, Prince Wilham, who is four years younger than Prince Frederick. This it is added, explains Queen Wilhelmina's Indifference to other suitors, which has caused so much comment. Other reports, however, say that the real reason for the selection of Prince Wilhelmina is that his mother is a Princess of The Netherlands, and that therefore, he is likely to be more acceptable to the people of Holland than an entirely foreign prince.

STORY OF CANNIBALISM. Advices from Brisbane, Queensland contain a story of Cannibalism in the German group of Sulu Islands. It appears that a Queensland trading cutter, the Sea Ghost, with three white traders and a crew of seven natives, was boarded by the treacherous passives of the island of Baku who Lizzard on October 14, was concluded today.

The judgment of the board's commission was that the ship was in good seaworthy condition, and that Capt. Griffith was in good health at the time the disaster occurred, the stranding of the vessel being caused by a wrong course being steered after the Mohegan had passed Eddystone light. The commission, in addition, ex-presses admiration of the efforts that had been made save those on board the steamer.

The commission also found that the great loss of life was due to the extinction of the electric lights on the steamer after she went ashore.

[A. P. EARLY MORNING REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A special to the Tribune from Washington says some interesting facts about American commerce with Great Britain are contained in the October statement of "Trade and Navigation of the United Kingdom," just received by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. This shows that despite the small purchases which the people of the United States are making from Great Britain, sales to the country increase. Nearly all of the classes of the goods for which American producers are seeking market, the October importations into the United classes of the goods for which American producers are seeking market, the October importations into the United Kingdom from the United States were in excess of those in preceding years, while the exports of manufactures from the United Kingdom to the United States were in most cases smaller than those in earlier years. Imports of bacon from the United States in October, 1898, were 474,840 pounds in value, against 363,884 pounds in October, 1897; those of hams, 502,635 pounds, against 197,588 pounds in October of last year; of butter, 34,997 pounds, against 197,588 pounds in October of last year; of butter, 34,997 pounds, against 197,589 pounds; lard, 206,137 pounds; against 166,756 pounds; flour, 640,144 pounds, against 521,592 pounds; oats, 178,827 pounds, against 123,732 pounds; copper, unwrought and part wrought, 129,677 pounds, against 36,611 pounds; lallow, 35,660 pounds, against 34,931 pounds; lead, 41,037 pounds, against 36,714 pounds; wood, sawn, split, planed or dressed, 114,657 pounds, against 37,714 pounds; wood, sawn, split, planed or dressed, 114,657 pounds, against 175,723 pounds.

On the other hand the exports from Great Britain to the United States are in nearly all classes similar to those in October, 1897, despite the fact that they were abnormally smaller in that month because of the excessive importations in the months just preceding the enactment of the revenue law in July of that year. Exports of wool to the United States in October, 1898, were valued at 13,611 pounds, against 7,548 pounds in October, 1896; woolen tissues were 693,600 yards, against 29,200 in October, 1896, the total for October, 1898, against 489,400 in October, 1898, were valued at 13,611 pounds, against 7,939 pounds in October, 1898, were follower, 1898, were 500 yards, against 29,200 in October, 1896, the total for October, 1898, against 489,400 in October, 1898, were 3161 pounds, against 7,939 pounds in October, 1898, were 361 pounds in October, 1896.

The exports of hardware from Great Britain to the United States in present year, 153, pounds in Value, against 3375 pounds in October of last year, and 4961 pounds in October, 1896. Of tin plates the exports to the United States in October, 1898, were 3330 pounds against 53,110 in October, 1897, and 118,764 pounds in October, 1898. These of black plates for tinning, 75 pounds in October, 1898, against 142 pounds in October, 1898, and 1679 pounds in October, 1896. Earthen and chinaware exports increased slightly over October of last year, but were materially less than in October, 1896, being 41,954 in October, 1898; 32,209 pounds in October, 1897, and 61,178 pounds in October, 1896.

In one respect the exports from Great Britain to the United States showed a marked increase, and this is in the class of articles required in the great industries of the country. Of jute, yarn used in manufacturing, the exports to the United States in October, 1898, amounted to 102,000 pounds, against 600 pounds in October of last year, and 13,900 pounds in October, 1896; while those of jute piece goods, used largely for bagging for grains and cotton, increased from 5,363,300 yards in October, 1897, to 11,104,500 in October, 1898. Of linen yarn the October, 1898. exports to the United States were 105,600 pounds, against $2,800 pounds in October, 1897, and 56,800 in October, 1896. The exports of "silk, twist, and yarns," also used in manufacturing, amounted in October of the present year to 112,747 pounds against 55,508 in October of last year, and 40,639 pounds in October, 1896. Pig iron exports to the United States in October of this year were 1205 tons against 1183 in October, 1896. Machinery for use in textile manufacturing exported to the United States in October, 1897, and 987 tons in October, 1896. Machinery for use in textile manufacturing exported to the United States in October of this year was valued at 25,329 pounds against 21,710 in October of last year, and 23,896 in October of last year, and 24,896 in October of last year.

In two essential particulars, however, the exports of articles for use in manufacturing showed a marked decrease, these being in woolen and worsted yarns being in October of the present year 700 pounds against 1700 pounds in October, 1896; while in worsted yarns the October, 1898, exports were 9500 pounds, against 38,300 pounds in October of last year, and 47,800 pounds in October, 1896. of the corresponding month of last year, but in many cases fall below Oc-tober, 1896. As Well as the Safest and Cheapest. The new medical discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, digest the food instead of making the wornout stomach do all the work, sive it a much needed rest, and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result. You get nourishment and rest at the same time because these tablets will thoroughly digest all wholesome food taken into the stomach, whether the stomach works or not. A cure is certain to result because the digestive organs are given a chance to rest and recover their natural vigor and tone. The tablets are then no longer required. To show the manner in which the remedy acts on different people and how quickly and effectually it cures stomach troubles, we present a few recent cases.

nk Depositors in Philadelphia Will Be Paid in Full. [ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Thomas W. Barlow, receiver of the People's Bank, has notified the depositors of that institution that the remaining 10 per cent. due them will be paid on and after December 5, 1898. This payment will close every uncontested claim against the bank, including the de-against the bank, including the deposits of the city and State.

The People's Bank closed its doors March 25; after the cashier, John S. Hopkins, had committed suicide. The liabilities were about $1,500,000, while the assets were less than a million dollars.

At the time of the suspension President McManes pledged himself to paythe depositors dollar for dollar, and the announcement of Receiver Barlow shows that he has kept his word.

A Navajo blanket, hung over an opening in the rocks was observed to move slightly, and the soldiers fired a volley into it from their revolvers. A ten-year-old boy was discovered dead in the cavity; a three-year-old girl slightly wounded in the left hip and a baby uninjured. The baby died the same night, but the little girl was taken safely to Camp Verde and placed in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Wales Arnold, who were located at the post, Mr. Arnold being a trader. T. F. Banta, editor of the Prescott Pick and Drill, was at that time a member of the troop charging the Indian camp. He looked carefully after the little girl, who was named Lula Verde. She thrived under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Anold, and proved a bright, capable girl and an excellent housekeeper. #### THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

OF THE SECRETARY OF AG-RICULTURE ON THE SUBJECT.

pansion Will Work No Injury to the Trade in the United States Opinion of the Opposition.

ISPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES. WASHINGTON (D. C.,) Nov. 19 .-Newspapers that oppose territorial expansion for the United States have taken to printing long articles showing that the acquisition of Porto Rico and the Philippines, and "free trade with Cube" will be the state of the state with Cuba," will ruin the sugar industry of the United States, "Prominent members of Congress, who are deeply interested in our sugar industry" are quoted day after day in eastern mugsump newspapers as saying that the sugar business will go to the dogs if this country takes in any sugar-pro-

The trouble with these arguments is that they are all wrong. The administration is as solicitous about the welfare of the sugar industry of the United States as anybody else, and it is not plotting to kill off what it has is not plotting to kill off what it has been at great pains to build up. The bresent administration has done more for the upbuilding of the beet-sugar industry than any other administration ever did. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has this for his main hobby, and he points with delight to the fact that this industry is growing with astonishing, rapidity in the States of California, Illinois and Michigan.

The Tmes correspondent had a long

"You say to the farmers of California that they need have no fear that the beet or cane-sugar business of this country will be ruined by competition from any source. In the first place, we need a good deal more sugar than we are producing. I suppose that we are importing today pretty nearly eighteen hundred thousand tons of sugar. It is going to take our farmers some little time to make arrangements for producing that amount.
"But let us look over the capacity of these new islands for producing sugar. Hawaii, which has just come in, is producing about 280,000 tons per year. The product cannot be increased much there, and will hold at about that figure for years and years.

creased much there, and will hold at about that figure for years and years. Maybe it will drop off a little; I should not wonder if it did in time. Cuba is now producing about 100,000 tons per year. She can produce a good deal more than that. I have just received a report from one of my agents in the Philippines, in which he says that those islands are now producing about 100,000 tons of sugar per year. That may be increased in time, but not very soon. The Philippines develop slowly. Porto Rico produces something like 40,000 tons of sugar per year. Now, you see, all of those islands together are producing only about one-quarter of the amount of sugar that we must import every year. From this it appears port every year. From this it appears that there is plenty of room for all that can be produced at home and in the new islands for some time to come.

"Hawaiian sugar comes in free; it has come in free for years under treaty, so no change has been wrought the annexation. Sugar from Cuba, rto Rico and the Philippines ought to the United States has to Porto Rico and the Philippines brought to the United States has to pay a duty; the duty is there now, it actually exists. No power on earth but an act of Congress can remove that duty. The President could not remove it if he wanted to. Do you suppose that Congress will be very apt to take that duty off? No matter what becomes of the islands, is there any way of getting rid of that duty on surfar except by act of Congress?"

Now that is what Mr. Wilson thinks of the sugar problem as it stands before the American people today. He certainly is in a position, as a member of the Cabinet, to know what he is talking about. In contrast to his views, here are those of the Baltimore Sun, which fairly represents opposition to expansion as that sentiment exists in the East:

"A member of Congress, who has a way has a surface would smash a hole through half with the contrast to his views, here are those of the Baltimore Sun, which fairly represents opposition to expansion as that sentiment exists in the East:

VAUDEVILLE MONOPOLY. An Alliance Formed by Western

Play Houses.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.] ST. LOUIS, Nov. 26.—It was announced here tonight by the management of the Columbia Theater Company of St. Louis that an alliance had been formed in Chicago today that would practically monopolize all the high-class vaudeville attractions that come west. The following statement in effect was made by the Columbia management.

combine are the Columbia Theater in this city, and the Great Northern in Chicago; the Orpheum circuit, with Chicago; the Orpheum circuit, with houses in San Francisco. Los Angeles, Denver, Kansas City and Omaha; the Hopkins circuit with houses in New Orleans, Memphis, Atlanta and Chicago, with affiliations in Cincinnati and Milwaukee, and the Kohl and Castle circuit, with three houses in Chicago. This combination is the strongest ever effected in vauleville.

This combination is the strongest ever effected in vaudeville.

It is said that the papers consummating the deal were signed in Chicago today, but that no announcement will be made of the fact until after the election of officers tomorrow. As a result of this combine, contracts with vaudeville companies can be made for from twenty to forty-three weeks. This will enable the parties to it to secure the finest talent from abroad to be had.

MRS. NEBEKER'S DEATH. Taken Violently Ill at El Paso of

Thursday Night.
[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.] California, Illinois and Michigan.

The Tries correspondent had a long talk with Mr. Wilson the other day about beet sugar, and asked him what the effect, of the acquisition of sugar-producing territory would have upon the sugar business of the country. In his blunt, earnest way, Mr. Wilson said: parents, at 8 o'clock last night. De ceased was a resident of Santa Monica, Cal., where her husband is a member of the firm of Bassett & Nebe ker, lumber dealers.

Mrs. Nebeker had been in El Paso but a few weeks, and was, until Thursday night, apparently in the best of health. #### THE CITY CANDIDATES.

When I ran for city office in Los Angeles, you bet
I was on familiar speaking terms with every one I met;
Politeness was my stock in trade, when lection time was nigh.
And I lauded every sucker that I met, clear to the sky.
You bet it takes agility
Combined with versatility,
To run a city canvas with remarkable ability;

There never was a candidate who hustled at the gait took when up for office at L. A. in '98.

For there was Neighbor So and So, and likewise Deacon Brown.
Besides a thousand others that I'd meet around the town;
I formed myself into a talking delegate of one,

And hustled like a stoker for to make a brilliant run.
When once my tongue got wagging,
'Twas hard to keep from nagging A voter whose good fellowship I thought was worth the bagging.
Oh, I found I'd got to hustle and be strictly up to date.

up to date, If I won that city office at L. A. in '98!

And so I chased from morn till night— sometimes till early morn— Until I felt so tuckered that I wished I'd not been born;

blew it in—My backers said a candidate must flash a heap of tin; That it would cast reflection, And lose me the election,

Inless I came out flush to show they'd made was smart enough to do it, and I always paid the freight

The First Ward populace would get a sermon from my text.
But when the fight was over,
I was counted as a rover,
My rival was the lucky dog who reveled in the clover. My rival was the such, the clover; the clover; for "de push" gave me the marble heart, and left me to my fate, and left me to my fate, That fall I ran for office at L. A. in '98.

He had an intimate friend in El Paso, who had been urging him to make a move in that direction for some time, and there are circumstances indicating that when the affairs of Cole's heart became so complicated that he couldn't sleep o'nights, but had to walk the streets, he made pictated that he couldn't steep o'nights, but had to walk the streets, he made up his mind to migrate to the land of mescal and frijoles. He had many friends in this city; but not to one of them did he give a hint of his intention to run away. One of his intimates said tonight that Cole never intended to marry the young lady, Miss Beynice Rochat, of this city, who supposed herself engaged to him and made arrangements for the wedding Wpdnesday evening. Cole disappeared mysteriously, but it is not true that his wedding clothes were found lying on, his bed as if he had laid them out to put on, as some of the papers renowted. There were no indications in his room that he had made any preparations to be married, and it is evident that Miss Rochat was deceived as to his purposes.

a mortgage on his love, as well as Miss Rochat.

Cole is a nephew of W. D. Larrabee of Los Angeles, and has parents living in Denver, Colo., from whom a letter came for him today. His sudden leavetaking made some trouble for the electric rallway officials, but his business affairs were all straight. Miss Rochat and her family are much depressed by the way things have turned out and they have much sympathy. What they would like to have, however, is an explanation. No detectives have been set on Cole track and nobody is making any effort to hunthim up or down. He left all his clothes here and took none of his effects. Nearly a month's salary is due him from the railway company. Some of his acquaintances believe that he is insane.

A reply, sent in accordance with regulations governing the case, was, that as there was no fund in the home applicable to transportation of deceased members, the matter was at the disposal of local authorities. The rule governing the case, which is printed on all furlough cards when issued, is as follows; "In case of accident, sickness, or death of a member on furlough, the home is not authorized to incur any expense for medical or funeral expenses."

BERT C. REED DOOMED. All hope of Bert C. Reed's recovery has been abandoned. He was frightfully injured on August 14 by a high dive from La Jolla cliffs, his head striking the bottom in shallow water. He suffered total paralysis from the shoulders down, and since that time has not been able to use his body of limbs in the slightest degree. Though entirely without pain, he has been forced to lie like stone for weary months. Meantime his strength, which was great when he was hurt, has been slowly ebbing away, until now he is but a shadow of his former self. It is thought that he can live only a few days longer. have been determined and it now remains to be settled as to where the ultimate drainage point of the system shall be. The grades are such that the system would more naturally drain to a point near Fifth street and the western city boundary. Opinions seem to prevail in favor of continuing the trunk sewer to a spot near the Cerritos channel, which is regularly swept with tide water. At the end of the trunk sewer it has been proposed that a large drainage box be $700.

Hong Kee, whose real name is Ong Ye Thin, was placed on the witness stand and after giving tes timony which corroborated statements he made right after the difficulty oc-curred, said he thought his assailants had robbed him, but that he had found the money. In other words, he testified simply with the intention of acquitting his countrymen. At the conclusion of his testimony, District Attorney West made a motion to dismiss the prisoners, as the evidence against them was not sufficient to convict. As stated several days ago the efforts of the highbinder company to compromise the case between the Chinamen had been successfully carried out. The first charge, that of assaulting Hong Kee with a deadly weapon, the Chinamen will answer in Justice Craddick's court on Monday afternoon, and from indications it will be the same sort of a farce as today's trial. The abused washman will not testify against them. Wing Gong, the leader of the gang, has not yet come from his place of hiding, but it is presumed that he will appear in court on Monday in order to save the forfeiture of the $100 bail in which he is held for his appearance. The only consolation the officers can get out of the affair is that they have Wong Ching Chi, the pistol smuggler, behind the bars of the County Jail, and American instead of Chinese witnesses to testify against him.

He draws his pay in gold for attending meetings, which he regularly deposits in a safety vault. The ac-cumulation, it is said, already amounts to considerably above $100,000. It is Mr. Sage's delight to send for this coin and have it brought to his office three or four times a year. He has it carried into his inner sanctum and there goes through the enjoyable (to him) performance of counting it all over and playing with the yellow

Mr. Sage is now 82 years old. Estimates of his fortune vary from $60,000,000 to $100,000,000. He and his wife are the only ones left. What is to become of his great fortune is a question which interests many people. Every once in a while the street "hears of trouble" between Mr. Sage and George Gould. The latest is that the old millionaire took George to task for a deal in connection with Missouri Pacific which resulted in a gain of $2,000,000 to the Gould estate at the expense of the Sage estate. The street looks on this as something of a joke and says that Mr. Sage's money went to build the new tellane palace in Paris. If this tellane palace in Paris. If this be true, the palace will stand as a noble monument to Mr. Sage's generosity.

Ever since Joe Hunter was held to drawer for complicity in the murder of Wong Sing Hay, there have been faint rumors regarding something closely resembling a fight that took place shortly after court adjourned on the day of the examination. While all parties to the transaction have been reticent regarding the details, enough has leaked out to indicate that Attorney John C. Jones, Hunter's counsel, and Detective Brighton must have had quite a lively set-to.

An affidavit has been made by a High School pupil named Harry Lyman, who resides with his parents at Glendale, that will probably be of some importance when the motion for a new trial is argued in the Clark case next Tuesday. Lyman states positively that he and a companion saw Joe Hunter, just after 8 o'clock on the evening of the murder, immediately after the Chinaman's horse and wagon had been sent down the road. since Joe Hunter was held to

HEALTH OFFICER PREVENTED AN

Abated Nuisances Along the River That Polluted the Water Supply of the City-Quiet and Effective

For more than a month Dr. L. M. Powers, the City Health Officer, has been engaged almost daily upon work, to the general sanitary condition of the city cannot be estimated. How much good has been done by his work will perhaps never be known, for what he has prevented in the way of disease would not be known unless the worl had not been performed and the dis-ease prevented, had been reported. Nearly two months ago reports were generally circulated that the river water, which is supplied to the people of the city for domestic purposes, was polluted above the point where it is taken from the river by the presence along the river banks of many slaugh ter houses, pastures, privy vaults and other sources of contamination. Analy-sis of the water at that time showed that there was great danger of disease from its use, and about the same time there was a marked increase in the number of cases of typhoid fever in the city. Whether this increase in this disease was due to the use of the water from the river is not known, but manded that the practice of casting refuse material and filth into the river be stopped. All along the river, on every prominent tree, he posted notices of warning to all persons, calling at-tention to the law governing such mat-ters. These circulars bore the caption "warning," and below was quoted sec-tion 374 of the Penal Code, as fol-"Every person who puts any water closet or privy, or the carcass of any dead animal, or any offal of any kind in or upon the borders of any stream, pond, lake, pond or reservoir from which water is drawn for the supply of the inhabitants of any city, city and town, or town of this State so that the drain-age from such water closet, privy, carcass or offal may be taken up by or in such stream, pond, lake or reservoir; or who allows any water closet, privy or carcass of any dead animal or offal of any kind to remain in or upon the borders of any such stream, bond, lake or reservoir, within the boundaries of any land owned or occupied by him, so that the drainage from such water closet, privy, carcass or offal may be taken up by or in such stream, pond, lake or reservoir, or who keeps any horses, mules, cattle, swine, sheep, or live stock of any kind, penned, corralled or housed on, over or on the boarders of any such stream, pond, lake or reservoir so that the waters thereof shall become polluted by reason thereof; or who bathe in any such stream, pond lake or reservoir; or who stream, pond lake or reservoir; or pollutes the waters of any such stream, pond, lake or reservoir, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction "Every person who puts any water pollutes the waters of any such stream, pond, lake or reservoir, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof is punishable by imprisonment in the County Jail not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding $1000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Dr. Powers has said nothing to his subordinates of this important work and, in fact, did not announce that he had performed it, the facts being learned from another source. He will continue the work all winter or until the river becomes so high from the rains as to make it unnecessary.

School to Be Settled Out of Court.

For several months the city has been endeavoring to secure a title to sufficient property to enable it to abandon the alley on the site of which the new Macy-street school rests, and thereby prevent the removal of the school building. For the purpose of ascertaining the location of the school the City Engineer was directed to determine whether the building was on an alley. He reported that it was, and the property-owners in that block at once brought suit to compel the removal of the school building from the alley. That suit is now pending in the courts, but in the mean time the Finance Committee has been endeavoring to-secure a settlement which would obviate the necessity of moving the school building. Frequent meetings have been held with the owner of the lots adjoining, William Mead, and several efforts have been made to com-promise the matter. Until yesterday the matter was not settled.

Yesterday the Building Committee held another conference, and submitted a report which was satisfactory to all concerned. The report, which is self-explanatory, follows:
"Your Building Committee, to whom was referred for joint consideration with the Board of Education, the removal of the Macy-street schoolhouse from its present location in public alley, or the purchase of adjoining property so as to provide for the retention of the school building in its present location, beg leave to report that upon full investigation of the matter, and with a view to providing additional land for the use of the scholars who attend that building, we recommend that the lot adjoining the school building upon the north be purchased from William Mead that an agreed price of $1100, upon the conditions that Mr. Mead secure a quit claim deed from adjoining property-owners to all of that portion of the alley to be abandoned; that the alley abandoned revert to the city: that said Mead settle sany claims adjoining property-owners may have by reason of the abandonment and change of said alley; that the alley now entering the block from the west be abandoned, and a new alley opened along the north line of the lot to be purchased from said Mead; that Mr. Mead dismiss without cost to the city the suit now pending for the removal of the school building, and that the school board pay out of the common school fund one-half of the entire cost; that the remaining one-half be paid from the general cash fund."

disease was due to the use of the water from the river is not known, but in the City Health Department it was considered that this was the most probable cause of the disease and at once the work of reducing the danger from that source was begun.

More than a month ago Dr. Powers went alone up the river afoot and closely observed the condition of the river banks. What he found has caused him to make trips up the river as often as thrice a week since. On his first trip and during several subsequent ones, he found a condition which in his opinion was just right for the producton of an epidemic of disease in this city from the use of the water of the river. In numerous places along the river there were long wallows, at others there were small pastures, in which the cattle often stood in the river most of the day. At still other blaces he found that slaughter-houses cast all their refuse material into the stream and in many places privy vaults were drained directly into the river.

Returning to the city after a long trip, Dr. Powers held a consultation of Them on Right Side of Ledger.

The deficit noted in the water fund will entirely disappear when the recommendation of the Finance Committee of the Council is acted upon tomorrow. That committee recommended the transfer to that fund of $5000 from the current-tax fund. Another important transfer recommended was that of $4140 from the cash fund to the street-lighting fund.

There is every proba-bility of the license being reissued, as it has been shown to the commission ers that in revoking the license they have punished a man who had nothing whatever to do with the robbery The saloon was in the name of W. ## DEMANDS TURNED DOWN

Only Two Deputies in the Water Overseer's Office to Receive Pay. Some months ago, when the apporionment of funds to the several city departments was made provision was made for the reduction of the force in the Water Overseer's office on November 1 from five deputies to two. It was thought that the head of this depart-ment would understand the matter, and dispense with the services of three of but it seems that he did not do so. Yesterday at the regular meeting of the Finance Committee demands were presented for the payment of the salaries of five deputies in this department at the rate of $75 per month each. As three of these demands were not justified by the ordinances, attention justified by the ordinances, attention was called to the matter by the committee. Water Overseer Casey was called upon and he stated that he had supposed that so long as he remained within his apportionment there would be no objection to the employment of the three extra deputies. He was informed that the demands would not be approved, and if the three extra men were to be paid it would have to be by requisition which would have to pass the Council in regular form. The Finance Committee refused to approve the demands. Soon afterward requisitions were filed in the clerk's office for the three extra men, and these requisitions will have to take their regular course.

AT THE COURT HOUSE AN OFFICIAL FIGHT.

High-school Pupil Testifies He Say Joe Hunter Just After Starting Wong Sing's Wagon Down the importance in the Wong Sing Hay murder case has been made public ing what information they can-the one side working with a view to obtain a new trial for Harry Clark, and the other with a determination to un-

Joe Hunter's connection with it. It will be remembered that Joeft Al Barrell's saloon for home be ween 7:30 and 8 o'clock on the night of the murder. From the testimon; given at his own examination it was about 8 o'clock. He saw no laun dry wagon standing about the house at that time, and the alternative presented to the jury's mind Harry Clark had turned it loose before Joe Hunter's arrival at home

An affidavit has been made, that probably will be used in the motion for a new trial in the Clark case wherein a youth named Harry Ly man makes a very important state ment, if true. Lyman resides a Glendale, and attends the High-School in this city. He is 18 years of age and states that on the evening of Max 31 he came to Los Angeles in compan with one Frank Borthick. They trav eled along the San Fernando road past Joe Hunter's houre, which is about a quarter of a mile north from Al Barrell's saloon, at about 8 o'clock about a quarter of a fine hold from Al Barrell's saloon, at about 8 o'clock or a few minutes after that hour. At that time affiant states that he saw a laundry wagon to which was hitched a gray or white horse, going in the direction of Glendale, and about two hundred or three hundred yards north, and towards Tropico from Joe Hunter's house. There was no person in the wagon that could be seen, and before Lyman met the horse and wagon it had turned out of the road to the left.

Lyman further states in his affidayit that when he reached a point opposite to Joe Hunter's house and near the road running down from the house to the San Fernando road, he saw Joe Hunter turn out of the road leading from the house to the Glendale rail-road, and the last he saw of him was about a road from where the road runs down from the house to the San Fernandour the San Fernandou about a rod from where the road runs down from the house to the San Fernando road, and across the railroad Lyman says he recognized Joe Hunter, and his companion, Frank Bor-thick, spoke to him and said, "Hello, Joe," and the latter responded by calling out, "How d'ye do?" At that time Harry Clark was not seen by af-

The reason given by Lyman in his affidavit, for not having mentioned what they had seen before was that they were afraid of being subpoemaed as witnesses, and that so hick went away to Boulder Creek, in returning to Glendale from the city on that same night at about 9:30 o'clock he met Joe Hunter's horse and buggy going toward Los Angeles at or near the fertilizing works, about one and a half miles south from Al Barrell's saloon. He could not, however, distinguish who was in the buggy.

Assuming the statements contained in the affidavit to be true, they tend to corroborate what Harry Clark stated in his confession—if it can be so styled. Although neither Lyman nor Borthick saw him. that would be accounted for by Clark being hidden by the elevation whence he had gone—to look up and down the road, as he said, to see that the way was clear for Joe Hunter to lead the horse down from the house and turn it loose.

An item of interest in connection with the additional light thrown upon the murder since the conviction of Harry Clark, has been the whispering around the Courthouse during the past week of the difficulty—to give it a very mild name—between Attorney John T. Jones and the detective, Brighton. That trouble, which very nearly culminated in another killing, took place after Joe uble, which very nearly cuiminated in another killing, took place after Joe Hunter had been held to answer is certain, but all the parties concerned either as principals or as onlookers, are reticent about the affair.

Judge Williams often told be that he have been a dead attorney on New High street.

All this took place quicker than it takes to tell, but the scrimmage from all accounts provoked no interference until there was the probability of a gun play. The men having been separated, some one told Brighton that he owed Jones an apology, and he did apologize for a nasty term he applied, and said he didn't mean that, and would take it back, but nothing else. That ended the affair.

Attorney Jones, upon cross-examina-tion in the Hunter examination, it was apparent that there was no love lost be-tween them. If the row, the particu-lars of which are in substance nar-rated above, may be taken as indicative of the acuteness of feeling now exist-ing over the developments of the Wong Sing Hay murder, then surely lively times lie ahead.

culiarity of Spanish Grammar. The contest over the will of Stephen Silvany continues to drag out its somewhat wearisome length before Judge Ballard, in Department Two. Yester-day Francisco Quijada, the beneficiary under the document alleged to be the last will of the deceased bootblack, was upon the witness stand, and some in-teresting information was elicited.

Under this last will all of the estate is left to Quijada, save one house and lot left to his young son who was Sil-vany's god child-or, at least, the father so contends. It appeared that the boy is the illegitimate offspring of the woman with whom Quijada had been living, and to whose house Silvany was removed by Quijada, against the advice of the attending physician, and despite the protest of the nurse. It was also shown, too, that L. C. Flores, named in the last will as executor without bonds, kept a gambling room in the rear of a Main-street saloon. In the course of his testimony, Quijada stated that Silvany had told him he intended making a will in he favor, and that conversation took place before the 7th of January of this year. On the latter date, Sam Praeger, who is a notary, was in the house, but Quijada, did not ask him to draw the instrament. The alleged will bears a date just prior to Silvany's death.

"Did Silvany know your wife?" asked Attorney Montano of the witness in rebuttal.

"Which one?" naively queried Quijada, in return. In the course of his testimony, Qui-

A laugh went around, in which the

Mr. Montano that as far as was known Silvany was not a married man.

The court was somewhat adrift while these explanations were being made, and volunteered the opinion that there were too many Spanish scholars in court. He said that his early education had been neglected so far as Spanish was concerned, and when they were talking about it he was up a stump.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Miscellaneous Driftwood Thrown Into the Courts.

MOOT POINT. The mother of a girl now at the Whittier School applied yesterday upon habeas corpus to have her daughter released, on the ground that she had attained legal age. The girl's name is Mary de Frivi, and when she was committed at Fresno about two years ago the committment showed her age to be 16 years. The mother contended yesterday that while that was true loosely speaking, as a matter of fact, her daughter was at that time several months over the age given, and to substantiate her assertion told when the girl was born and baptized. Judge Allen continued the matter until Saturday, December 3.

AN INSANE'S GUARDIAN Tolfair Creighton yesterday petitioned the court to appoint him guardian of Mrs. Marie Deboi, who is now an inmate of Highland. The estate consists of personal property, and is valued at $260, on deposit in the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank.

AN ACCUMULATED DEBT. Charles C. Haskin has brought suit against Aleander Carpenter, as executor of the last will of F. J. Carpenter, deceased, et al., to recover on a note for $4000 drawn on July 16, 1895, by the executor of the estate, and secured by a mortgage on lot 9, block I, in the Cohn subdivision of the Morris Vineyard tract. The sum with interest, now amounts to $6075,34, and for this amount judgment is asked with $500 as attorney's fees. AN ACCUMULATED DEBT. Charles

A MINOR'S ESTATE. Ara A. Wilson, widow of R. N. C. Wilson, deceased, has petitioned the court that she be appointed guardian of her son, Donald William Wilson, who, being over 14 years of age, joins in the petition. There is no estate of the minor, but the appointment of a guardian is necessary in probate of the father's estate.

RENEWING A JUDGMENT. Rich-Ardson Bros. have begun suit against Spencer R. Sewall to recover $4191.66, being the amount of a judgment rendered in the Superior Court of this county in favor of the plaintiff on November 29, 1893.

THE SPENCER CASE. Grace Brun THE SPENCER CASE. Grace Brunson Coleman has filed an action against Mrs. Annie P. Spencer et al., to recover $1500 principal, and interest, on a note drawn on February 15, 1897, by defendants for $1600. The note was secured by a mortgage on eighty-nine tots in the San Gabriel Land and Water Company's subdivision. Mrs. Spencer's property having been tied up in the litigation in which she was involved, made it extremely difficult to negotiate a loan.

THE CLINKERBEARD DIVORCE. THE CLINKERISEARD DIVORCE.
Judge Smith yesterday granted a decree to P. E. Clinkenbeard divorcing him from Mrs. E. Clinkenbeard, on the statutory charge. The plaintiff was a conductor on the street cars, and was away from home until after midnight each night. The custody of the minor child was awarded to the father.

The New Issue In Temperance

"WHISKY MEDICINES."

THE VOICE,

The Leading Temperance Paper Sounds the Call to a New Crusade in the Following Article.

'ANOTHER HEAD ON THE HYDRA."

"It is time attention was drawn to a form of alcoholic traffic that that seems to have been overlooked by those engaged in the crusnde against the rum power. If, as is believed and taught, alcohol is most danger-ous when it fights in ambush, if it is most James Bartley, the Randsburg to be dreaded when it finds its first entract to the system in the pleasant sauces and to kill Mrs. M. L. Ferguson, will have dishes of the home, then the form of alcoholic traffic in question is doubly dangerous, Yesterday the defense put in what for it comes in the guise of medicine and attacks a system prepared by weakness to easily surrender to the assault. In many PATENT MEDICINES which are largely consumed throughout th country by all classes of people there is a percentage of alcohol which puts them on a level with beer, rum, and whisky as intoxicants. It is the smallness only of the dose prescribed which prevents a prompt recognition of the intoxicating effects of these so-called medicines by those who use

"It is safe to affirm that they are MEDICINES IN NAME ONLY.

Their chief value lies in their alcoholic effect as a stimulant. In fact, those who know attribute the benefits ascribed to this class of medicines wholly to the stimulative effect of the alcohol they contain. They are used of the alcohol they contain. They are used largely by persons not in the habit of drinking liquors, and the little dose taken three or four times a day is as stimulating to these people as his regular "finger" of "bit-ters" is to the regular liquor drinker. WHAT CAN BE DONE?

"What ought to be done at least is to compel every patent-medicine manufacturer to put on the wrapper of his bottle the quantity of alcohol it contains. That would at least leave people to exercise their own judgments. More than that no paper truly in-terested in temperance reform should print the advertisement of any alcoholic medicine. It should be the duty of every temperance organization and branch of it in the country to look into this question, agitate it, and deal honestly with the facts, just as earnestly and as honestly as other facts hav been dealt with.'

Appreciating the gravity of the issue raised by the strong statement of facts made in the foregoing article, we wish to call general attention to the fact that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription NO ALCOHOL, NO WHISKY, NO INTOXI-CANT OF ANY KIND.

These medicines are equally free from pium and other narcotics

They are, in the strictest meaning of the words, temperance medicines. Of no other nedicine, put up especially for woman's use can it be truthfully affirmed, as of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that it con tains neither alcohol nor opium or othe arcotic in any form.

While the negative features of Dr. Plerce's nedicines may only interest some of the readers of this article, the positive features of these medicines must be of interest to very one. The great value of "Golden Med cal Discovery" in the cure of diseased o deranged conditions of the stomach and digestice and nutritive organs is testified to by tens of thousands who have found health and healing in this great remedy. The "Discovery" increases the action of the blood making glands, and by curing the disease which corrupt and cripple the stomach and digestive and nutritive organs, it enables a full and pure supply of blood to be sent to every part of the body.

WOMEN KNOW ITS WORTH Women, who are always appreciative of enefits, have been especially appreciative of the benefits following the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Its wonder ful cures of irregularities, inflammations "that God-send to women to name it women." It is entitled to wear the "blue ribbon" of merit, as well as the blue ribbon

THE BIBLE OF THE BODY. Perhaps no greater gift was ever offered than the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains 1008 pages, and has over 700 illustrations, and is the life work of its author, Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. This book has been well called "The Bible of the Body." It is to the body what the Bible is to the soul, "a samp unto the feet and a light unto the path." It deals with the great questions of physical life so simply that all may understand, and so purely that it is essentially the one medical work for the home library. The book is published in two forms, one bound in paper covers, and the other in strong cloth binding. Send 21 onecent stamps for the paper edition to cover expense of mailing only, or 31 stamps for the loth-bound edition. Address Book Depart ment, World's Dispensary Medical Associa tion. Buffalo, N. # SIREN OF THE BANYAN TREE that those delightful isles have become a part of the United States, recalls many a story and legend of the one-time owners of that wave-kissed land. No people were so full of poetry and love of the beautiful when discovered by Captain Cook, but civilization has made them barbarous. No longer do the beautiful maidens, robed in the flowing drapery of ancient Greece, chant love songs by the shore of the moonlit sea, no more do the brave youths swim in through the surf from a nearby isle to greet them.

A Curious Legend of the Sandwich Island Natives.

Recent Events Recall the Quaint Story-Its Results.

One of the curiosities of vegetation is the banyan tree, which from the parent stem sends down its hundreds of tentacle-like branches to take root in the luxuriant soil. Thus, her voice rose above the sound one tree will, if allowed to live long enough, cover an acre of of the gentle waves and reached ground and provide a shade as dense as London's black fog on a calm day. This mystery of vegetation, this marvel of who had long sought her love. reproduction, has ever been almost worshiped by the simple The sound tortured his lovesick natives of the lands in which it grows, as an evidence of the soul and involuntarily his lithe great Unknown's power and love. It is indigenous to the Hawaiin islands and grows there in great luxurience. Under its mighty shade the wedding feasts were celebrated, for because the banyan was so productive it was thought that it would give some of its power to the newly wedded pair and that many children would bless them. The love of children even today marks the boundary line of civilization. The most ultra-civilized people have the fewest children. One current legend still repeated by the Kanakas to the curious tourist who succeeds in winning their confidence is the following: Once upon a time, long ago, there was a most beautiful maiden dwelling on the Big Island. Her hair was like the black thunder cloud in darkness and quantity, coverieg her perfect form like a mantle. Her eyes were like the moss-surrounded pool of the trickling mountain stream, her voice as gentle and sweet as the zephyr that comes with the rising moon,

The recent annexation of the Hawiian Islands and the fact and her laugh like the ripple of the sea on the coral. Her lips bore the blush of the new rose and curved like the hunters bow. She was a poem sung to sweetest music of the lute and great was the strife among the young men to win her. But her heart was free, and would not submit to capture. Like the paradise bird she winged her brilliant way o'er field and mountain and loved only liberty and nature. Many an island gallant paid her suit and many were the fierce and often bloody conflicts over her charms.

One night as the moon rose from the sea in a robe of silver, Haide sat alone by the shore, chanting a lullaby which she improvised. The sound of the ear of Konko, the brave chief limbs carried him toward her.

She noticed him not, but continued her song. Her passiveness to his burning words of love meddened him and translimbs carried him toward her. love maddened him and transformed him into a raging demon. "If thou wilt not be mine, no other shall have thee," he cried, and plunged his knife into her beautiful bosom. The song ceased, the spirit of the maiden fled, and long Konko sat there, motionless with horror at his deed. Finally he plunged his still dripping blade into his own heart and sent his soul to follow her's—his beautiful Haide.

The maiden was sent by the Great Spirit into the branches of the banyan tree to dwell. Whenever a man lies down to rest in the moon. light under a banyan, her spirit laughs, and when he sleeps he dreams of love, and it so racks his soul that he dies. Thus does the Great Spirit revenge the death of Haide, the Beautiful, and teaches a lesson to despairing swains who kill their loved ones.

Prof. Ben-Bey has been a great student of Hawati and the mystic land of the Far East, and was told this legend by a Kanaka while both were standing under a banyan tree in that island land. He thought there must be some ground for the legend from a medical standpoint and proceeded to break off some branches and let the sap run into a dish. This he treated and experimented with until he evolved a medicine from the banyan, where dwelt the soul of Haide, that cures absolutely all kinds of nervous debility, nervous depletion, sexual depletion, sexual neurasthenia, spermatorrhoea, prostatorrhoea, prostatitis, emissions, losses by night or day, impotency, partial or complete, restores function and strength to debilitated organ, prevents prematurity or quickness—in fact the most wonderful discovery of this or any age, for the cure of those suffering from sexual troubles. This wonder worker is called Ben-Yan. The acidental discovery, the romance which led to it and the perfection of its work on the human system, makes this of great interest to she public and the medical profession. This great remedy can be had only from the Ben-Bey Company or its authorized agents. It can be obtained nowhere else and of no other physician or company. Thus has the suffering of beautiful Haide brought relief to civilization's fils

HOW THE ARMY WAS PROVIDED IR DURING THE WAR.

Quartername -General Ludington Gives Some In eresting Statistics Report-A Great Deal Accomp whed in a Shor

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.-The annual report of Quartermaster M. I. Ludingreport of Quartermaster M. I. Luding-ton reviews the operations of his office to the close of hostilities with Spain. Treating of the war as affecting the quartermaster's department, he says to properly clothe and equip this large number of soldiers for active and im-mediate operations in the field was a problem of vast proportions. Many difficulties were in the way. Contracts were promptly entered into for all the were promptly entered into for all the articles of clothing and camp equipage for which there would be an early demand, great care being taken to prevent the supply of articles of inferior quality. Flannels of the standard quality used for making army blouses and trousers were not to be had in the market, and it was necessary to have them manufactured. In the mean time the department, as far as possible, endeavored to procure articles conforming as nearly as practicable to exist.

the department, as far as possible, endeavored to procure articles conforming as nearly as practicable to existing standards, but had to resort at first to some extent to the purchase of dark blue trousers so that the men might be quickly supplied.

The prompt supply of the large number of tents required by the increased force was a problem of difficult solution and called for extraordinary endeavors. At the beginning of the war there was but little cotton duck to be found in this country entirely suitable for military purposes, the supply having been depleted by the large demands for tentage for the Klondike region and the extensive purchases by the Navy Department.

With all the perplexing difficulties confronting the department in the matter of clothing and equipage, in the short period of three and one-half months an army of 275,000 men was equipped with such supplies, and the army in Cuba, consisting of 16,000 men, leaving their tentage belind, arrived at their camy at Montauk Foint, N. Y., and found a complete new outfit of tents and clothing ready there for them.

transportation during the war. He says:

"From April 1, 1898, to the breaking up of Camp Wikoff, the aggregate movements of troops by rail amounted to 17,863 officers and 435,569 men. Low rates were secured by the quarter-master's department in making these movements, generally not exceeding 1 per cent per mile for passengers, and in many cases much less, and about one-half the prevailing tariff rates for freight in excess of 150 pounds per man carried free.

"From the declaration of war to June 30, 1898, this department chartered for service on the Atlantic and Gulf waters forty-three vessels with a total tonnage of 104,201 and a carrying capacity of 1287 officers, 22,335 men with their arms, ammunition, equipments, medical and subsistence supplies and 6746 animals. There were also chartered four water boats, with a total capacity of 820,000 gallons, three lighters, two tugs and one barge, also two barges purchased.

"Fourteen ships were chartered to June 30, 1898, on the Pacific Coast, having a total tonnage of 41,152, and a carrying capacity of 629 officers and 13,059 men, with their complete outfit of camp and garrison equipment, arms, ammunition, medical and subsistence stores for a voyage of over 7000 miles.

"To meet the needs for light-draft vessels, for towing and lighterage at Santiago, two fine ocean tugs were chartered early in July, 1898, the Underwriter and the Gladisfen. There were also chartered for service in the movement of troops and supplies at Montauk after the return of Gen. Shafter's army from Cuba, one large steamship for the transportation of sick and wounded, and five small steamers, three barges and two flat boats. These vessels, since the abandonment of Camp Wikoff as a camp, have been dispensed with. and solicitude, exising the little life into perical completeness; guiding the little footsteps, the little bands and the gradually expanding mind—alt this is part of the burden of motherhood. Yet an expectant mother is happy with it all in blissful anticipation of the dear, soft nestling little bit of humanity which is all her very own.

If the mother is physicially weak or aling, the burden of motherhood is far heavier than it ought to be. The greatest lightener of the burdens of maternity which science has ever discovered is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was devised by an expert specialist for the express object of strengthening and healing the organs which make motherhood possible.

Taken before the baby comes, this wonderful "Prescription" relieves the ordeal of all danger and nearly all pain. It gives both mother and child a permanent increase of constitutional vigor.

The properties and uses of this wonderworking "Prescription" are more fully described in one chapter of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," which will be sent free, paper-bound, on receipt of twenty-one one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only, or cloth-bound for thirty-one stamps. game at Fiesta Park yesterday afternoon was not all that could be desired. The crowd was for the most part in sympathy with the soldiers and only warmed up during those intervals when the boys from the Seventh succeeded in zetting the ball and playing it for cains.

The gridiron was in fine condition and very fast. The high wind of Friday blew down the north fence of the park, but this was propped up for the occasion and a detail of soldiers, armed with bayonets, served the double purpose of keeping out the small boy and restricting the spectators to the vantage ground of the bleachers.

The soldier team had several good individual players, and in point of avoirdupois had slightly the advantage of the college eleven, but before the play had progressed far it was apparent that the superior ability of their opponents to play together would more than offset these advantages.

The members of the university team were stiff and sore with the effects of their battle-royal of last Thursday, and their game lacked some of the snap and ginger shown in that contest. Christy, the big guard, was missing, as were also Knoles, the right halfback, and Spence, left end. The men played well together, however, the interference being the best the team has shown this season.

The university won the toss and Funk kicked off forty-five yards for the soldiers. Patterson got the ball and downed it on the thirty-yard line. The university, by line plunges and end runs, carried the ball down the field and at the end of four minutes's play Wilson was shoved across the goal line for the first touchdown. Rhinehart kicked the goal.

Three subsequent times during the first half the cardinal and gold of the 'varsity went across the soldiers' goal. The soldiers made several good rallies and Rhinehart kicked one goal. The soldiers made several good rallies and Rhinehart distinguished himself by making a sixty-five-yard punt.

The socore at the end of the first half was 22 to 0 in favor of the university. The second half was very similar to the first, except that the soldiers, by a series of good line plays, planted the ball on the university eight-yard line and but for an unfortunate fumble would probably have scored.

The university made two touch-downs and kicked both goals. The final score was 34, to 0, in favor of the University of Southern California.

THE ELECTRIC BELT KING.

Dr. Sanden is Known as Such All Over the United States --- At the Head of a Business Amounting to a Million Dollars Yearly.

DR. SANDEN has made the Electric Belt an article of merit, commended and used by the brightest men of the country today. Aside from the Dr. Sanden Belt, the words "electric belt" mean a piece of webbing with a few pieces of copper and zinc, sold at from $1 to $5, and having not a particle of electric current. Dr. Sanden, however, has educated the people to the appreciation of the worth of an Electric Belt which is honestly made, having a complete body battery and proper electrodes for conducting the electric current.

Such is the Dr. Sanden Belt,

With its 10,000 cures, extending from Maine to California, and having its name praised in every hamlet in the country. You, reader, have seen letters published almost every day from grateful patients and know that Dr. Sanden has succeeded in constructing the article that is as near perfection as the present-day knowledge will permit. He has missed nothing that would add to the curative power of his now famous appliance, and offers it to sufferers for what it is and has done, backed by that and needing nothing else to back it.

What Dr. Sanden Gives You:

A Record of Over 10,000 Cures.

I was more than a year making up my mind to purchase one of your Belts, for I considered it a fraud, but I was greatly pleased to find that it has been of vast benefit to me.

Being 74 years old, I find that I did not have proper circulation, and my nerves were in such a run-down condition that it produced general debility. Your Belt has caused me to feel better in every way. I sleep better, my back does not pain me, and the circulation and nerves are natural. This is the first time I have ever permitted my name to be used in a testimonial, but I do so now as merit and benefit received calls for it.

Wednesday evening a number of people assembled at the home of a Summit-avenue young lady, to witness her marriage to the man of her choice. The allotted time arrived, so did the guests and a large number of presents, but the groom falled to put in his appearance. The father of the prospective bride hastened to a telephone, after patience had ceased to be a virtue, but the young man was not at his accustomed place of business. Search in every quarter failed to find any trace of the groom, so the guests partook of the wedding supper that had been prepared, and departed to their homes. The young lady in question is well known in Pasadena, and is employed as a stenographer in Los Angeles. The young man held a very responsible position with a large corporation, having its headquarters in this city. He left his position Tuesday, wthout notice, and has not been seen since. Rumor says he repented of his choice and took the overland for the East.

DYNAMIC FORCES.

IN THE DOMAIN OF SCIENCE, INDUSTRY AND ELECTRICITY.

Wave-propelled Boat.

F. L. LINDEN, a resident of Naples, Italy, claims to have built, and operated a boat which navigates against the waves or in any direction counter, to them, as well as with them, by no other force than that derived from the waves themselves. The principle which the inventor has sought to embody in his boat is that of the swimming of fishes, which, being a zoölogist, he has had abundant opportunities of studying. For many years he has been convinced that the swimming motion of fishes might be imitated mechanically, and his experiments finally crystallized in his novel craft. He attaches powerful resilient floats under the water in a line with the boat in such a mannier that the free ends of the floats, which are made of elastic material in the shape of the webbed feet of aquatic birds, are directed rearward. The boat then moves constantly and spontaneously forward through the waves, by reason of the impact of the water upon the elastic floats, the operation of the latter being supposed to correspond essentially to the action of a fish's tail. The resistance encountered in the water by the floats causes them to bend out-

Prof. Koch pronounces the highest prof. Koch pronounces the phylaction use of the virulent "black-water" fever. He gives two reasons for condemning the very general practice among persons coming from temperate to tropical latitudes, of saturating their systems with quinine, taken in regular, and often excessive doses. Bicycle Race Judging.

THE placing of riders in a bicycle race is often most difficult, and it is rarely that a cycle race meeting ends without more or less dissatisfaction with the verdict of the judge. In close and fast finish, when two or ends without more or less disastistaction with the verdict of the judge. In a close and fast finish, when two or more men cross the tape within inches of each other, the skill of the most reliable judge may fail to convince every one that his decision is correct. An instrument for setting every decision beyond question has been tried with great success on cycle tracks in Australia. The place of the tape on the track is taken by a slot about two inches wide. In this slot five strips or leaves of metal—aluminum by preference—stand on edge. They are graduated so that the fifth, counting in the direction in which the fiders are moving, rises slightly higher than the fourth, and that than the third, and so on. As the contestants near the goal in the last lap, these leaves are automatically raised, so that the fifth is about five-eighths of an inch above the surface of the track, and the rest in proportion. The five strips are freshly painted with enamel. The first wheel that crosses receives on the tire an impression of the five strips, and its passage causes the fifth trip to fall out of action. The second wheel is marked by three, and so on. When the riders pull up an examination of the order in which they have reached the winning post, that having five bars being obviously the winner, the rest being placed according to their markings. The enamel marks last for a long time, even in wet weather. The machine is said to be not liable to get out of order, and is easily made ready for use. When not wanted it may readily be covered over and removed, so that it presents no obstruction to the use of the track. a close and fast finish, when two or of the webbed feet of aquatic birds, are directed rearward. The boat them moves constantly and spontaneously forward through the waves, by reason of the impact of the water upon the elastic floats, the operation of the latter being supposed to correspond essentially to the action of a fish's tall. The resistance encountered in the water by the floats causes them to bend outwardly, but as soon as the waves have momentarily subsided the floats spring back to their initial position. This generates a force which is directed to the fast ends of the floats, and drives the boat in the direction of the impulse. Thus, in the words of the inventor, "by means of a continuous motion of alternate arching and backward springing, the boat is put in motion, and in a direction from the free to the fast end of the floats. The floats are attached to the boat at bow and stern. It is said that with this boat a speed of two and a hair miles an hour has been attained, the direction taken by the boat being entirely independent of the quarter of the wind. The experimental boat is about 13 feet long, and 3 feet beam, having a displacement of about four hundred and forty pounds. Mr. Linden says that the speed and effectiveness of his boat, will be increased with its left, without an increase of the area of the propelling floats. To secure the maximum effectiveness the floats must arch themselves in approximately the same curves as the caudal fins of dolphins and other fishes.

Wires are now being drawn over all the antique quarter of the city, and branches are being carried into the Moorish quarter, where neither Europeans nor Jews are allowed to reside. Even the tiny Moorish stores (more like cupboards than places of business) in the main streets are losing their picturesque dinginess, and their proprietors find it to their advantage to be able to push their night trade in the cheerful light of the electric lamp. From the known conditions of an underground electric conduit this was difficult to underconduit this was difficult to understand, but as the test progressed, it was seen that the current came from two sources, a distant trolley line, and the electric-lighting mains of the vicinity. All along the elevated railroad structures there was a small leakage which came from electric-lighting sources, but coming down the west side of the city. Mr. Knudson came on a full-fledzed trolley current. This was eventually traced up the east side to the Brooklyn Bridge, and thence to the trolley roads in Brooklyn. The fact that electricity could thus wander in appreciable quantities far from the region of its employment has not been generally realized. Mr. Knudson's tests showed that an overhead trolley line using rails and water-mains for its return service, can spread its influence for a distance of a mile or so in any direction through conduits and clevated railway structures, or other lines of metal. Tests at the New York terminus of the bridge showed that its superstructure was in some places as much as three volts "positive" to the rails of the adjoining cable railway; but the danger of the currents thus indicated to the anchorages from possible electrolysis was believed to be calmost negligible.

In cases where the treatment had to nartake of a more general character the manipulation of the subject was to be graduated from the delicacy of the touch of a Japanese masseur to the pounding of a skillful "slugger." The leading idea in the treatment was to induce a flow of blood to the partitreated whereby improved nutrition, and consequently normal conditions would be induced. This method has, to all intents and purposes, been practiced for many years in application of static electricity, and many American physicians have made it a specialty. A new form of the treatmen is said to have made its appearance it San Francisco, where a practitioner claims that he can make a sick man hale and well in double-quick time by the use of a "healthshaker." The machine consists of a platform on which the subject stands, and an influence machine consists of a platform is made to oscillate rapidly by means of an electric motor, while an electric jet from the machine is industriously being projected through the patient's body. The motion is said to be excellent for the liver, and the inventor claims that ten minutes of such shaking is better than half an hour's work in the gymnasium. It is even suggested that the course might very advantageously be taken as a preliminary to a sea voyas.

WHY THEY DON'T VOTE.

THE TIMES recently commented editorially upon the fact that several members of the Reformed Presbyterian Church at Newburgh, N. Y., were undergoing trial for having voted at the Presidential election of 1896, in violation of the church law. Some doubt was expressed in the former article as to whether such a church law does actually exist. From further information, it appears that such is, indeed, the case; or, at least, that the doctrine of the church in question requires its adherents to refrain from voting for any officer who is required to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States. Nor is any member permitted to accept any civil office in which he is required to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution.

The church is a lineal descendant, it seems, of the old "Covenanter" church of Scotland, and not an offshoot of the Presbyterian church, as might be inferred from its name Its adherents claim, indeed, that it is the root of the Presbyterian family

"The Covenanter church in the United States requires as a condi-tion of membership the acceptance of the position known as that of political dissent. This means that her members may not accept any civil office or trust in which there is required an oath of allegiance to the present Constitution of the United States; nor vote for any officer who is required to take such an oath. This position is disloyalty to our country, but in the spirit of patriotic loyalty to our Lord.

This condition of membership in Covenanter church rests upon wo things-a scriptural doctrine, and s the Mediator, is the divinely- ap-ointed King of Nations, and that lis law, as revealed in the Bible, is e supreme rule in political affairs The undeniable fact is that the Constitution of the United States con ains no recognition of the Lord ous Christ as the nation's king:

More recently, another and still more startling theory has been propounded, to the effect that the growth of plants may be increased by mind power. A short time ago THE TIMES treated this subject editorially, and perhaps in a rather sarcastic manner. This has called forth a reply, in the Mexican Herald, from Dr. O. P. Rice, who appears, from the letter, to be the author of this new and marvelous disovery. Dr. Rice says:

"Please permit me a small space to reply to the good-natured and laughable ridicule by the Los Angeles Times in yesterday's Herald, of my previous account of increasing the growth of wheat by mind. On Friday night, at a meeting in the Eighth Ward, Street Superintendent Drain made a manly and straightforward answer to the stories that have been whispered about the streets regarding the conduct of his office, which was convincing to any man of reason and common sense. It is a fact, thoroughly well known to all observers, that the streets of this city were never before in so good condi tion as they have been under Mr. Drain's supervision, and it is also a matter for congratulation that since his incumbency of the office he now holds there has been an absence of the petty scandals which, under other administrations, characterized the conduct of the street department. Mr. Drain has made a thoroughly good officer, and richly deserves to be returned to that office, so long as he is content to hold and conduct it under his present methods.

On account of the election of C. J. Kellogg as Public Administrator, the County Supervisors are called upon the appoint a successor to that gentleman, as a member of the Board of Horticultural Commissioners. This is an important office, as a small mistake made by the incumbent may cost the fruit-growers of this section millions of dollars before the damage can be repaired. THE TIMES would suggest that, before making an appointment, the Supervisors should consult with some of the leading fruit-growers of the county. It might be well to hold a meeting of fruitgrowers, for the purpose of talking the matter over.

The damage done by the high wind on Thursday night to a large number of derricks in Los Angeles is another proof of the necessity for more careful regulation, by the city quthorities, of the oil industry. We all knew that these derricks were offensive, from an esthetic point of view, but it was not generally supposed that they were dangerous. There were, however, several narrow escapes from loss of life on Thursday night, while the damage to property was quite large. The derricks over abandoned wells should come down at once, and steps should be taken to see that the others are built so as to resist an ordinary gale that joyful moment.

Our esteemed fusion contemporary, the Herald, is trying to make out that carefully refrains from speaking, in a loud tone of voice, about that monumental folly, the California irrigation law, of which Mr. Wright was the sole parent. There are times when silence on a certain theme weighs tons, and the Herald probably concludes that this is several of them, and well it may.

It is high time for the city of Los Angeles to make a change in the City Engineer's office by electing to go around among so infernally Frank H. Thropp, Representative-elect of the Twentieth Pennsylvania Congress District. Although this will be his first term in Congress, Mr. Thropp has for some years exerted considerable influence in shaping the tariff legislation of the country. He was one of the organizers of the American Protective Tariff League, and, as vice-president of that organization, has zealously labored to foster the principle of protection in national legislation. Mr. Thropp was born in the historic village of Valley Forge, Pa. He comes of the best old Quaker stock, and is a splendid type of American manhood. He is a son-in-law of the late Col. Thomas W. Scott, president of the Pennsylvania Railway. He started in life as a civil engineer, but subsequently embarked in the iron business. For some years he has been the owner of some large iron furnaces at Everett, Pa. The counties in Mr. Thropp's district are Bedford, Blair, Cambria and Somerset. EATON WELCOMED.

GUEST OF HONOR OF THE SCANDI-NAVIAN-AMERICANS.

A Reception Tendered to the Republican Nominee for Mayor-Rev P. A. Edquist Discusses Swedish Virtues-Drain Talks on Clean

The Scandinavian-American Republican Club gave a reception last even-ing in I.O.F. Hall in honor of Fred Eaton, Republican nominee for Mayor, and the other candidates on the Repub-

Of all the rallies held by the Republicans since the municipal campaign began, none has been larger nor more enthusiastic than last nevening's gathering. The reception was not a mere political demonstration; it was a social event, and the most representative citi-zens of the Scandinavian colony, with their wives and daughters, were there to welcome Mr. Eaton and to seek personal acquaintance with the other nom-inees. The candidates were all intro-duced. In addition to their responses duced. In addition to their responses, there were addresses by others, and an enjoyable programme of music.

Rev. P. A. Edquist, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church, warmly indorsed the Republican municipal ticket. He praised the enterprise of uniting the Scandinavian citizens of Los Angeles in a strong organization.

dorsed the Republican municipal ticket. He praised the enterprise of uniting the Scandinavian citizens of Los Angeles in a strong organization.

"The Swedes of Los Angeles and its vicinity," he said, "and a few Norwegians have started a movement for unity. There are fully 3000 Scandinavian citizens in this region. The Swedish Republican Club deserves credit. In unity there is power. What can be done can be done best by organization. "Some important things must be remembered. The politician asks people for their votes, but as soon as he is elected he forgets the poor creatures. The fittest man is seldom placed in office, but the man gets the place who wants to prostitute it to his own ends. Honest government is a blessing sent by God for which it is worth as good citizen's while to expend his best efforts. To obtain the best results good citizens must unite.

"It is no disgrace to be a Swede. The only man who thinks so is the gliddy fellow who landed thirty days ago, and who now says he can't talk Swedish. Love for his people is the first characteristic of a noble man. Swedes as a rule are made of excellent stuff. The blood of slavery has never beat in their veins. They have been free men since the days when paradise existed, and some Swedes say that it was situated in Sweden. The Norsemen were brave as lons and never knew how to retreat. The Vikings defeated the Britons and discovered America 500 years before Columbus was born. I never have been able to understand why they did not keep it—perhaps it was because they were too honest to take a good not keep it—perhaps it was becaus they were too honest to take a good thing which belonged to somebody else thing which belonged to somebody else.

"The Swedes. reared among mighty mounitains and beautiful flords, cling to their ancestral homes. Only one in a million has the revolutionary spirit; only one in a hundred is illiterate. Such blood is worth infusing into the American people. The Scandinavians never care to raise the red flag, nor to promote strikes. They come to the United States to stay and to build up the greatest nation on earth. In Minnesota the Swedes have elected John Lind one of their own race, Governor, and John Nilson has been elected by the Swedes of Kansas as Superintendent of Public Instruction. The Swedes will take their part in American civilization."

will take their part in American civilization."
Fred Eaton talked of the status of the water question, and told of his refusal to accept excellent positions with the Pomeroy-Hooker and West End water companies, because he preferred to stand by the people's interests.

"The present school accommodations are wholly inadequate," said Mr. Eaton. "There are 19 half-day schools in the city. There are grammar schools built for 20 children which now contain 500. The High School was planned for 600 students: it now contains 1272. In many schools teachers have charge of twice as many children as is proper. If I am elected Mayor I shall lead an agitation in favor of building more schools and before my term is over I hope that there will be more seats than children instead of not enough room for all."

John Drain discussed his own record as Superintendent of Streets.

"Officials and private citizens from all over the United States have visited my office." said Mr. Drain, "and have told my they never saw cleaner street than in Los Angeles. That applies only to the graded streets. The cleaning of asphalt streets came under my direction only two days ago. In that time we have been handicapped by the breaking down of the machines and by the storm, but we will soon get things into running order. I believe in handsweeping and we are going to have that here.

"It has been said of me that I am owned by the Alcatraz Paving Company and that I am concerned in its ownership. It has been reported that the president is my brother-in-law. I have not a dollar invested in that company. I have no relatives in the street-paving business. The Alcatraz Paving Company has succeeded in getting the contracts for important pieces of street work in Los Angeles, such as the resurfacing of Main and Spring streets, simply because it made the lowest bids."

simply because it made the lowest bids."
Frank H. Olmsted, nominee for engineer, told of his experience as a civil engineer. He told of his work on the Chicago drainage canal, and referred the audience to any Los Angeles engineer as a witness to his capability and trustworthiness. Walter Haas, nominee for attorney, reviewed the water litigation and promised vigilance in guarding the city's interests. Among the others who spoke were Ben E. Ward, nominee for Assessor; William A. Hartwell, Treasurer; Lafayette Martindale, Clerk; William A. White, Tax Collector; Edward A. Carson, Auditor, and L. H. Gates. Chairman J. H. Hermanson introduced the speakers with aptremarks.

Wild and Wooly Prognostications

About the Senatorship.

[San Francisco Examiner:] The latest story about the United States Senatorship is that Col. D. M. Burns is to be the man. How far this may be true is simply a matter of guesswork. Since Mr. de Young wrote that a dark horse is to be the winner, everybody has been cudgeling his brains endeavoring to think out who the man can be that the editor of the Chronicle seems to know something about.

Mai. McLaughlin's name is on the tip of every tongue, but, the major says he won't accept the Senatorship under any circumstances, and his word ought to be taken as good, for the reason that he could have gone to Washington instead of Perkins two years age had he desired to do so.

he desired to do so.

Col. Burns says he is not a candidate for the Senate and has never consented to the use of his name in that connection. It is known, however, that a good many Assemblymen and Senators have tendered their votes to the colonel.

It is now considered almost a certainty by the politicians that Mr. de Young will not allow his name to go before the Legislature. His friends say he has grown tired of receiving complimentary votes. But his favor will be of value to the candidate he supports. His paper has consistently advocated Republican principles in the past few years, and many people believe that he is entitled to more consideration than he has received. Four years ago Col. Burns gave all the votes he controlled to Mr. de Young. Perhaps this winter Mr. de Young will aid the colonel to a seat in the United States Senate. It is now considered almost a cer-

Senate.

Anyway, it is believed that the editor does not entertain ambition to succeed Senator White. But it is puzzling the politicians trying to find out whom politicians trying to find out whom he will get back of.

Mr. Grant has gone south. One of his scouts hurried up to the Palace on Monday and notified him that somebody had knocked a few rails off his nolitical fences. So Grant went home to make the necessary repairs.

Mr. Bulla is still in the city. He is satisfied with the position of affairs and confident that if the Senatorship goes below Tehacheol he will be the

for him.

Gen. Barnes is apparently making a standstill fight. He has the support of Senator Morehouse.

Mr. Preston is rapidly healing. His fight and his injured ribs are said to be getting on nicely.

It is talked about town that Van R. Paterson got into the battle too early and that A. P. Williams got in too late.

But who is the dark horse? Is it Col. Burns, or is Mr. de Young going to come out of the fog at New Year's and make a winning run? Or is the next Senator to be some one so far entirely overlooked by the people who do politics on the outskirts?

If it be true, as the Nogales Vidette asserts, that the man who was killed in that place by Temple, the railroad man now in custody in Mexico, was an American citizen, the Mexican govern-ment is placed in the peculiar position of holding one American citizen for having killed another American citizen on American soil.

the Fruit Trade Journal of New York:
"Now that the California oranges are about to come into market, the dealers are again making appeals to packers not to ship unripe, sour fruit, no matter what the temptation may be. Such conduct on the part of packers, and coming when it does in the early part of the season, and when dealers are anxious to have good stock for the holiday trade, is apt to kill the markets, and when California oranges are ripe, juicy and luscious the purchasers will not have them, having been prejudiced by their first purchases. Let the packers hold back all shipments until the fruit is ripe and sweet, and they will gain a reputation for California fruit that is not heretofore enjoyed, and reputation means money in the markets."

WAR APPROPRIATIONS

ARMY AND NAVY TO BE MET.

Work on the Estimates as to the Amount of Money That Will Be Needed-No Extra Session.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.-Repre sentative Cannon of Illinois, chairman of the Appropriation Committee of the House, has arrived, and today the sub-Committee on Deficiences will begin the consideration of the estimates for the extraordinary expenses of the army and navy grow ing out of the war, and the preparation of a bill covering these deficiencies from the period from January 1, 1898, to July 1, 1899.

Mr. Cannon will push the prepara-tion, and the consideration of the regular appropriation bills as rapidly as possible, but he sees no reason now why any of them should fail and thus necessitate an extra session. He expects that the urgent deficiency and the District of Columbia bills will pass before the holidays, and that work on the other regular bills will have recorded to the deficiency and the second will have progressed so far during the recess that they can be brought into the House after the recess as rapidly as that body is ready for

The committees having jurisdiction over bills not prepared by the Appropriations Committee, Agricultural, Consular and Diplomatic, Army and Navy, etc., will also get to work immediately after session begins.

Mr. Cannon thinks it is useless to attempt to work during the holiday recess. There have been two occa-sions during the last twenty years when the House has refused to adjourn for the customary recess, but on each it was impossible to keep a quorum of members in town, and little was accomplished. Both he and Mr. Dingley, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, share the opinion that to try to hold the House here during the recess would be impracticable and unprofitable.

With the enactment of the regular money bills necessary to carry on the governmental machinery at this session of Congress, Mr. Cannon sees no occasion for an extra session, so far as legislation for our new possessions is concerned. He believes unripe or hasty legislation for the government of the islands would be infinitely worse than military rule. Under military governorship there is a perfect elasticity. Changes can be made to fit new conditions as fast as they arise. A year's delay before attempting permanent legislation would give ample time for the study of all the conditions surrounding the govern-ment of the islands, both by the military authorities and committees which might be provided by Congress which might be provided by Congress. Congress could then, Mr. Cannon says, deal intelligently with the subject.

The grand total of the appropriations for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1899, including all the extraordinary war expenses to January 1, but not war expenses to January 1, but not including the deficiencies for extraordinary expenses from January 1 to July 1, 1899, is $893,231,615.

There are no figures as yet, upor which the appropriations for the com-ing session of Congress can be based, but Mr. Cannon says they will be considerably below the figures for the last Congress.

Baby Edison's Cradle.

[Chicago Chronicle:] When Thome A. Edison's second daughter was born his technical assistants in the laboratory at Orange presented him with plans for a cradle intended to save Mrs. Edison much of the worry and trouble usually experienced by moth-persons of peculiar importance, if that is any consolation. Preachers generally are not supposed to be so burdened with lucre as to offer great temptation to the discriminating cracksman.

The kind of "demand" dealers in the East are making for green oranges is shown by the following paragraph from the Fruit Trade Journal of New York:
"Now that the California oranges are "Now that the California oranges are "read that the composition of the wizard ambling up and down the room in the dead of night, occasionally stepping on a semi-submerged tack, was too much for them, so the "automatic electric baby-tender."

It was an ordinary cradle with ingenius devices for the child's comfort attached. Immediately above the spot genious devices for the child's comfort attached. Immediately above the spot where the baby's head would lie was a diaphragm, somewhat like a telephone receiver. If the infant should start crying, at the very first wall communication was established between the diaphragm and an electric clock. At the same time the cradle was set rocking by means of a small motor.

clock. At the same time the cradic was set rocking by means of a small motor.

If the remonstrance continued beyond a certain time the clock released a lever and an arm, attached to the side of the cradle (operated by what is called a bell-crank lever.) carrying a nursing bottle, was swung over the baby's mouth.

If hunger was not the trouble and the walls continued, another arm on the opposite side swung over the child's mouth with paregoric. At the same time the electric current was turned into a set of magnets placed around the cradle, and any pin which might be causing the trouble would be at once removed.

If the yells continued, the "thirty-third degree" was applied. Two arms, lying flat in the cradle under the baby, were slowly raised and the child turned over. Then an electric spanker fastened to the footboard proceeded to do its work with neatness and dispatch.

However, Mr. Edison persists in regarding the baby's joy cradle as a joke.

BUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION REC-OMMENDS APPOINTMENT.

Eighth Annual Meeting of Southern California Association Closes After a Two-days' Session in the Sixth and Hill Streets-Old Offlcers Are Re-elected.

After considerable discussion on the part of the 315 delegates in attendance at the eight annual convention of the Southern California State Sunday school Association, in the First Cor gregational Church, Hill and Sixt California State Sundaystreets, yesterday, it was decided that the employment of a Sunday-school field missionary should be recommended Executive Committee.

not less than $1200 per year. It was the salary feature of this clause which proved a point of contention, some of the delegates not being willing to pledge their schools to aid in the support of the field worker. It was finally decided that the convention, instead of instructing that such a person be employed should recommend his appointment, and in this form the report was passed, without a dissenting vote.

Old officers of the association were reflected, and three out of eight members of the Executive Committee will continue to serve. The officers as reelected are: Rev. H. H. Rice, president, Pomona; Prof. G. W. Gooch, vice-president, Ontario; U. Sid Lemon, secretary, Santa Ana; W. E. McVay, treasurer, Los Angeles.

The second day's session of the convention opened yesterday morning with a Bible reading by Rev. A. J. Frost. Most all of the morning meeting was devoted to ten-minute talks on "New Plans for the Next Year's Harvest." In the afternoon, following the opening of the meeting with prayer, Judge J. F.

Mrs. Emma Cash of Los Angeles followed with a paper on "Worm of the Still at the Root of Our Plants." Rev. R. S. Cantine talked on "How to Reap." after which Rev. E. A. Healy responded to written questions, propounded by the various delegates. Mr. Healy said at the outset that in case he was unable to answer any of the questions asked he would so state. In reply to one, "Does the soul sleep in the grave or ascend to heaven?" he said; "If you'd like to see as well as hear this

HUDYAN DOCTORS.

Dear Doctors:—Having just completed the last course of your Hudyan I wish to inform you that I am perfectly cirred. My case was variously diagnosed as cancer of the stomach, in digastion, stricture of the or hisparts, etc., but I fell certain that the above suphagus, etc., but I fell certain that the above many the stomach had your diagnosts of Chronic Camorrect and stamped was the correct one. For years I have had chronic malaria, and I presume it was the man-ediate cause of my stomach trouble. Before commencing the use of your Hudyan I had foss of appetite, tenderness in the stomach, blouting of the abdomen, constant thirst and nausea and vomitting after eating. Add to the above symptoms of severe meatal depression, and you will readily see that my sufferings were not mild. I felt that Hudyan, the remedy discovered by your physicians, was indicated in my case, and, against the advice of my physicians, who had been treating me seven months without giving me any relief, I decided to try it. My physician himself is surprised at the result—he confesses that there is a great deal of virtue in your Hudyan, though he is unable to discover wherein it lies. As I stated above, I am now perfectly and, I believe, permanently cured of my Catarrh of the Stomach, and I wish to again thank you, gentlemen. If any of your patients afflicted as I was desire any additional information in regard to my ease, I will be pleased to communicate with them.

Dear Doctors:—I write to inform you of the results of Hudyan in the case of my daughter, a young lady just past 18 years of age. In her childhood she seemed to enjoy perfect health, but about the time of her first menstruation she showed many signs of decline and we feared that she was going into consumption. She began to lose flesh gradually, had a constant headache and backache, the bowels were very constipated, her face was as white as the paper I am writing on and her condition was indeed a pitiable one. The menstrual flow was attended with severe pain, the limbs became cold and

HUDYAN DOCTORS.

Gentlemen:—It is now four months since I began to use your Hudyan. I wrote to you before and informed you that I was progressing favorably and expected to be cured, and I can now assure you with the most grateful feelings for yourself and your remarkable Hudyan that I am well—perfectly cured; in every sense of the word, a man again. Those who have suffered as I have, and longed for relief as I have, know what that word man implies, and they can appreciate my feelings when they consider that I have experienced the two extremes of a strong and a broken-down man. When I got your Hudyan I was broken down mentally, physically and in every way; couldn't sleep or eat—well, think properly, or enjoy life. Of course I tried many doctors, patent medicines and electric appliances, guaranteed "cure-alls," before I used your Hudyan, but they did me no good. I had tjot been using Hudyan more than three weeks since I began to feel like my strength returning gradually, until today and for the past month I have felt as strong and vigorous in every way as I ever desire to be. In my case your Hudyan has been a grand success, and I cheerfully recommend it to suffering mankind. May Hudyan prosper. Yours truly.

It is called the "Tea and Tiffin Bungalow," and is kept by a ligh-caste Parsee lady, Mme. Pheroze Langrana. A famous Britishofficer, some of the nobility, and Sir Edwin Arnold, participated in the opening. Queer menus and fine curries are a feature of the enterprise.

The "Bungalow" is beautifully fitted up in oriental style, and, though in the very heart of fashionable London, the visitor might easily fancy himself in Madras or Simla. The effect on entering is delightfully picturesque, and pence.

In this space are many little bamboo tables, each one screened off by similar green silk curtains, thus forming nooks in which one can have a cozy chat with a friend over tea or "tiffin," in a kind of semi-privacy impossible in the average restaurant. These little tables are always decorated with flowers, ferns and smilax.

The dark-skinned proprietress looks very picturesque and beautiful in her Indian saree of coral-pink silk and long scarf-like headdress. The attendants are not Indian, but are said to be English gentlewomen in reduced circumstances. However that may be, they look very unlike the typical English waitress. In their long sea-green safeen they glide noiselessiy over the oriental rugs, and, as an imaginative London literary man expressed it, they hover around the visitor like houris around the faithful in paradise. Nothing so sordid as the presentation of a dinner bill is associated with these young ladies. There is a small boy in buttons, with the manners of a Chesterfield, who attends to that necessary formality.

The menu is strictly Indian, and the proprietress, who prepares the mysterious dishes with her own hands, makes a specialty of curries, and it is safe to say that no such curries were ever eaten before outside of India. There is a saying anong Angio-Indians that "there is only one good recipe for curry and every old Indian officer has got it." It appears that Mme. Langrana has also got it.

It is evidence that the investigation going to consume a long time, there is an immense amount of minutia which bears on the value of the plant, and this must not only be covered by Mr. Mulholland, but by City Engineer Dockweiler, and portions at least by engineers and others who have assisted in the building of the system, and after all the testimony is in there remains the large task of computing the values of thousands of separate portions of the system, and the estimating of the shrinkage in value of each through use. Then will come the inevitable long arguments by the attorneys touching the point of equity, which will themselves be legion. No one ventures to estimate the length of time to be consumed, but all concede that the hearing will be a long one. which bears on the value of the plant rangements for Effective Work. Absentee Committeemen Will Not Be Tolerated-An Appeal for Funds-Literature and Speeches,

Only one more week remains before of time a vigorous campaign is to be made to further the interests of the proposed new charter. The Charter Campaign Committee held a conference yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce and completed plans for work. There will be a meeting of the general committee at 3:30 o'clock every afternoon next week in room No. 219, Byrne building, and the special committees will be in frequent consultation. Meetings will be held in every ward next week, especially in the interests of the charter, and charter speakers will be sent to all the rallies of both political parties, if the consent of the City Cenparties, it the consent of the city central committees can be secured, to plead for the charter.

Six of the members of the general committee were absent from yesterday's conference. The members present expressed considerable indignation at the absence of their colleagues. The cant expressed considerable indignation at the absence of their colleagues. The secretary, C. S. Waiton, was instructed to notify the secretaries of the organizations represented by the absent men of their delegates' dereliction, and to ask that men be appointed in their places who could be relied upon to attend every meeting. Those absent and the organizations which they represented, were as follows: Chamber of Commerce, J. T. Jones, Capt. John Cross; Freeholders, Judge L. A. Groff; Merchants' and Manufacturers', S. G. Marshutz, A. C. Jones; New Charter Club, W. F. Burbank, The Committee on Organization and Plan of Campaign recommended that G. W. Parsons, L. C. Scheller and R. H. In delivering his decision Justice Morrison said much evidence had got into the case which should not have been introduced and had lengthened it unnecessarily. Much of the testimony for both the prosecution and defense he considered unworthy of credence. He had visited the premises where the Chinamen were arrested, and was convinced that no one could see from where Policeman Ritch was standing what the Chinamen were doing, but he did not believe that the officer had intentionally sworn to anything untrue. As to the money questions involved, he did not think the evidence showed that any more, money had been taken by the officers than had been accounted for, and considered this matter settled. law, and, therefore, they proposed to go right on with their business.

"I do not wish to criticize the Court of Appeals, but I will say that their ruling will affect the public, for it will prevent us from making the many low rates for excursions we had hoped to. Of course, the New York Central will, from time to time, issue special rate tickets, but not as many as we intended to do. Lately most of the railroad companies offered to sell cut-rate tickets to soldiers. What was the result? One of our detectives followed a ticket scalper's agent to six different ticket offices. The agent was dressed in uniform. He secured half-rate tickets to various point, showing in every case a fake' discharge paper Next day our detective bought one of these tickets at the scalper's office.

"We hope that the Interstate Railroad Commission will push through the anti-Scalping Bill at Washington. Of course, that bill will only stop the sale of scalpers' tickets between States. It will not affect the tickets to points within a State."

Lost Boys Picked Up. Henry Holcomb, a lost boy, was peked up on Vine street last night by Officer Stewart and taken to the Police Sta-tion, where his father afterward found him. Mr. Holcomb is a brother of Athim. Mr. Holcomb is a brother of Attorney Holcomb of this city, and is a recent arrival here from Oregon.

Another little chap named Willie Eichler wandered away from his father's restaurant on East First street, near San Pedro. Policeman Matuzkiewiz found the little fellow at the corner of First and Spring streets, bought him a bag of popcorn and took him to the station, where he munched his popcorn until his father came in search of him.

Mrs. E. A. Thurston, principal of the Custer-street school, died at 10 o'clock yesteray morning, after an illness of two weeks. Her health had been poor for some time. She had taught in Los Angeles for five years and had a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Thurston leaves one son, Albert Thurston, a young man of 19 years.

Is a very plain and common-placed and self-made man, born of humble but honest parents, who were loved become and Is a very plain and common-placed and self-made man, born of humble but honest parents, who were loved, honored and respected by all who knew them. Dr. Burner was presented with and carries with him a love token in the form of a certificate indorsement or recommendation signed by over two hundred ministers, doctors, lawyers, Judges of courts, congressmen and representatives, professors of coleges, principals of public schools, bankers, merchants, postmasters, railroad and express managers, and every single county and city official from his own native town and county where he was born, raised and lived, and where he is best known, and this original document, the strongest indorsement of a man's true honor and worth that was ever given to a man, you one and all are invited to examine. indorsement of a man's true honor and worth that was ever given to a man, you one and all are invited to examine. You will find it at Dr. Burner's reception parlors, in the hands of his private secretary, for public inspection and examination. This with the many letters, certificates and testimonials voluntarily given by thousands of grateful patients all over the world speaks louder than thunder of his true worth, ability and standing as a man professionally, financially, socially, morally and spiritually, and any one simply exposes their credulity, ignorance and prejudice who can not recognize, and will not admit the true worth that must be in a man who can produce such overwhelming and positive proof of his honesty, power, and knowledge to heal the sick and do good to his fellow man. Many is the pure, healthy and devout prayer sent up to God every hour in the day by grateful friends and patients, who have been blessed and healed by his superior skill, power and knowledge.

Yes, but says the ignorant, the suspicious, jealous and selfish mind of man, but how does he heal? How does he make these great and wonderful cures after all others fail? and as his many letters and certificates show, many prominent physicians have been cured all over the country by his new and great discovery, the diaductive and con-structive method, after they could do nothing for themselves with medicine or the ordinary means of relief.

Well, you must remember Dr. H. Russell Burner has tages that fall to the lot of but few. First, he was a natural born physician and surgeon, with fine perception and quick intuition; then, he inherited a natural power of diagnosing all diseased conditions without asking a question diagnosing all diseased conditions without asking a question—truly a wonderful power and possessed by but few. Then early in life he studied medicine on the broad and liberal plan that induced him to take regular courses and graduate from three of the best medicine—the Allopathic, Eclectic and Homepathic schools of medicine—the Allopathic, Eclectic and Homepathic schools. But with all this he was not satisfied, but continued to search, as all great inventors and discoverers have done, for more knowledge, as he was determined to find the truth and the key to a perfect method and system of healing that would control all disease; and so he worked and toiled on and on till the light and knowledge came to him and he made the discovery of his wonderful diaductive and constructive system, which makes him master of all disand constructive system, which makes him master of all diseases. But, says the ignorant, misguided and selfish mind, is Dr. Burner a faith doctor? is Dr. Burner a Christian scientist? or what kind of a doctor is he? He is not a faith doctor, unless his faith in God and humanity makes him so. He is not a Christian scientist in the present accepted meaning of that much abused term, as he does not believe in the principles taught by the founder of that system, Mrs. Eddy, to be either Christian or scientific. Then how does he cure diseases without medicines, drugs or poisons? Read the various articles published in this supplement, and we think you will begin to understand the truth of the power from which he draws his vital force and energy, which he has the various articles published in this supplement, and we think you will begin to understand the truth of the power from which he draws his vital force and energy, which he has learned to transmit to the weak, suffering and debilitated, which has a soothing, strengthening and curative power. If you fail to perfectly understand this great law after carefully reading all the articles published in this supplement, then go and have a talk with the Doctor, his Secretary or his expert Examining Sugeon and they will explain and illustrate the whole matter to you by the use of instruments, appliances, charts and manakins, &c., &c., and which will make it all plain to you, if you truly and really desire to know the truth. But does he never use medicine or instruments? Dr. Burner being a graduate of the three greatest systems of medicine, knows perfectly well all that there is in medicines and what can be done with them, and there is in medicines and what can be done with them, and he claims with the exception of a few scientific natural preparations and products, all of the proximate principals of preparations and products, all of the proximate principals of the human organism, that there is no curative medicines, but such elements of growth and nutrition as pure air, sunlight, water, good food, electricity, ozone and ozonized food and remedial agents, etherial vital force, vital magnetism, which are generated by his new diaductive and constructive method, is all the restorative and vitalizing agencies that are of any value in curing disease, and is enough to cure all diseases of every name and nature that man is heir to if treated in time. But does Dr. Burner give any medicine to his patients? Yes, when they want him to, and they are not willing or will not be cured or healed without it. Then he will prescribe the necessary natural chemical elements and compounds to supply the nealed withcut it. Then he will prescribe the necessary natural chemical elements and compounds to supply the deficiency. Reducthe excess or control the perversions of the physical condition which brings the system back to harmony, restores the natural polarity, which is health, peace and happiness. Dr. Burner's outfi of instruments, appliances, natural chemical compounds, manakins, models, skeletons, diagrams, paintings, charts, etc., is the largest and finest private collection owned by any one man in the world, and is well worth a inverse of many wiles to see and if you and is well worth a journey of many miles to see, and if you are afflicted, or if you have any near and dear friend who is suffering from disease of any name or nature and you have failed to find relief elsewhere, don't fail to go and investigate this most wonderful medical man and his new discovery

BUSINESS.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE TIMES, Los Angeles, Nov. 26, 1898. LOCAL FINANCES. For the past week exchanges through the clearing-flouse of the city banks were $1,380,-115.18, against $1,562,754.61 for the previous week, and $1,285,994.41 for the corresponding week last year. The holiday made notable inroads into business, which accounts for the falling off from the record of the week before last. Los Angeles keeps right in the procession with the cities which re-port larger clearances than last year.

NATIONAL CLEARANCES. Reports from the fifty-six cities having clear-inghouses, report an aggregate of exchanges for last week of $1,331,844,748. This is nearly $400,000,000 less than for the previous week, but $300,000,000 more than for the corresponding week in 1897. The falling off from the figures of the previous week are easily accounted for by the holiday, which really impaired business on half the week. The increase over last year must be regarded as satisfactory, when it is recalled that 1897 was a good is recalled that 1897 was a good ar, the best in our history, excepting EXPORTS OF WHEAT. Taking gether, the total exports July 1, to gether, the total exports July 1, to October 31, were 72,937,068 bushels October 31, were 72,937,068 bushels compared with 75,668,506 last year in the same time. In 1891 when exports were the largest on record, there were exported $2,251,642 bushels in the four months. More flour was exported were the largest on record, there were exported $2,251,642 bushels in the four months. More flour was exported this year than in either of the previous ones named. The returns are much smaller this year than for either of the others. The years compare in money show these results: 1898, $59,208,901; 1897, $70,229,180; 1891, $87,308,718. The average prices were $1 cents per bushel this year, 93 cents in 1897, and $1.06 in 1891. Corn is now a great competitor with wheat in the markets of Europe. In 1891 the exports of this cereal from the United States were only 10,514,194 bushels, but this year there are 47,553,846 for the four months in each year. The increase is nearly 500 per cent.

No wonder England is taking largely of American cereals. For some years reserve stocks of breadstuffs there have been constantly contracting, culminating in almost total exhaustion jast year. This is what the noted authority on the subject, Broomhall, says of the situation:

"Here we have two great centers of population—Glasgow and Liverpool—the one with a stock of 1968 quarters wheat and the latter with one of 90,000 quarters, the former center consuming annually over 400,000 quarters weekly. The position is fraught with danger no one con deny, but it is equally as certain that no one can suggest a practical remedy as long as bearishly-disposed operators continue to offer futures at a discount, for it would savor of foolishness on a merchant's part if he were to hold wheat in store and pay rent and interest when he can buy for delivery ahead at less than ourrent prices; therefore it may be taken for granted that as long as futures remain at a discount reserves will be conspicuous by their absence, and as a seeming corollary prices will hot fall as the bear expects."

DEAR OLIVES. H. N. Newcomb, American agent for several Spanish olive producers, who makes yearly visits to Spain, has just returned from that country, and last week gave a Grocery World representative a statement as to the coming crop of Spanish olives, which has been touched upon more or less in recent issues.

Mr. Newcomb states that the heavy rains in Seville, which have been credrains in Seville, which have been credited with causing the short crop affected only that variety of olives from which oil is made. The shortness of the crop of eating olives comes entirely from the dry season.

Prices on the new olives will hardly be made before January 1. They will rule generally 50 per cent. higher than last year, all sizes being affected. Some American importers are now offering 60 per sent, more for the new crop than they offered last year.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS. PASSING OF CANALS. The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company re-cently abandoned part of its water route. Discussing this step, the Engirently anandoned part of its water route. Discussing this step, the Engineering News says:

"It is plainly evident that a few years more will see the entire disappearance of the old-time canal barge as a vehicle for freight transportation. The 60,000-pound freight tar is a competitor which it cannot meet. The only ones of the old-time canals on which even a semblance of their old-time traffic is to be found are such canals as the Erie, where the taxpayers foot the bills for maintaining and operating the canal. Even here, however, the question of who is to carry on the traffic in the near future is a serious one. The profits to the canal boatmen for several years have been so meager that hardly any new boats have been built for some time; the old boats are fast becoming rotten and useless, and with the present uncertainty as to the future policy of the State respecting the canal, no new linvestments in boats to ply upon it are likely to be made."

This, of course, does not in any way bouch the project of the Nicaraguan

This, of course, does not in any way touch the project of the Nicaraguan Canal. That is another kind of enterprise. It is for the passage of ships from ocean to ocean, and no 60,000-

SHIPPING STATISTICS. The Buraeu Veritas published some very interesting data on the shipping of the world. From these the following deductions have been made:

They show that the number of sailing vessels of fifty tons and over now in existence is 28,885, with an aggregate net capacity of 8,893,789 tons. The number compares with 29,315 ships and the capacity with 8,893,782 tons twelve months ago, being a reduction of 430 vestels and 963 tons. This does not show that sailing ships are going out of business with the rapidity of which we have been told, but that the tonnage is being maintained by the substitution of large for small vessels. Of steamers of 100 tons and over the number is given at 11,576 against 11,271 a year ago, and the gross measurement as 18,887,132 tons, against 17,889,006 tons, an increase of 305 vessels and of nearly 1,000,000 tons. England is by a long way the leading maritime nation, having now 10,998,111 tons of steam tonnage, compared with 10,552,498 tons in 1897, and 2,910,565 tons of the sail aggregate, compared with 3,098,618 tons, going more and more into steam, to the partial exclusion of sailers. Second, and a very small second, too, in the matter of steam tonnage is Germany, with 1,625,521 tons, against 1,462,530 tons last year. France has 952,682 tons of steam tonnage, against 979,072 tons; America, 810,800 tons; against 772,002 tons; Norway, 628,493 tons, against 576,598 tons, and so on down the list to Mexico, with 6643 tons. Next to England in sail tonnage is the United States, with 1,285,859 tons, followed by Norway, with 1,144,852 tons, and at some interval by Germany, with 535,937 tons. Norway is making progress in the use of this class of vessel, but the other named have to report a falling off as compared with 1897. Denmark, too, owns less than it did a twelvemonth ago, and Sweden, Turkey, Greece, Spain, Holland and others are in the same condition.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Today's short session of the stock exchange was long enough for several uncertainties to develop, and to reserve themselves again so that the session, as a whole, continued of the same tracegules are of this view, and caused some late reactions. But fiot until an active buying movement had developed all through the list.

A midweek holiday is almost certain to break in on the course of a market and to curtail operations, except such as are designed to "even up" contracts. The past week was no exception, and the movement of prices has been highly irregular at all times, and at intervals inclining toward the reactionary side. The banking interest which seems to have assumed the task of maintaining the price of stocks in face of this liquidation, is also known to be deeply interested in the newly-floated Federal Steel Company.

Profit-taking in the Atchison securities was one uneasiness felt early in the week over the outcome of the Paris peace conference, which emphasized the inclination to sell. The strained relations among northwestern railroads and the snowstorm served to divert the buying demand to other quarters.

Financial Review.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Financier says: "The bank statement of averages for the week ending November 26 shows a decrease of $2,345,400 in loans and a gain of $764,300 in cash. As the loan contraction has affected the deposit total, the reserve requirements have been-lessened, and this with currency swelled the surplus $1,690,200, making the excess above the legal reserve, $18,357,575. The statement is confusing in several directions, but as it does not cover the full week, the probabilities are that the conditions reflected do not prevall today. The banks have an unusually large amount of money loaned on collateral as a result of active exchange transactions ainties selves of syndicates in connection with recent whole, read and the loan total, therefore, is susceptible and th mixed character as those of the whole week have been. The strength of Americans on the London market was not sufficiently pronounced to affect the opening prices here, and prices were below the London parity, even where gairs were shown. There was continued profit-taking evident at other points, and Manhattan suffered a break of 1% on published denials of a Vanderbilk interest, and Tobacco almost as much on the threatened competition in cigarettes. There were constituent from the threatened competition in cigarettes. There were constituent from the coalers showed no exhiliaration over stories that "the coal trade had been fixed." The Atchison's October statement helped that company's preferred stock, and by sympathy, the entire list. The statement showed a net increase of $227,437, saved out of the gross increase. It was announced incidentally that the reduction in operating expenses due to extraordinary expenditures for betterments, would begin on December 1. Good statements of earnings by a number of other railroads helped the recovery. The bank statement was considered, a strong one at first glance, with the increase in surplus reserve, though as the profits of the week as the coaler as the coaler as a strong one at first glance, with the increase in surplus reserve, though as the coaler showed and the coaler showed and the coaler showed as the profits of the week are as the coaler showed and the coaler showed as the profits of the coaler showed as the profits of the coalers showed no settlements and sums deposited for the week. The human deposited for the week are the coalers showed on settlements and sums deposited for the coalers showed in the loan of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week are showed in the loan of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week are showed in the loan of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week are showed in the loan of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week are showed in the loan of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week are showed in th sorption of large quantities of sterling bills has contributed directly and indirectly for some weeks past toward swelling the loans of New York banks. The loss of specie for the week, amounting to $872,100, was due to eperations with the treasury, reporting the balance which the banks owed on settlements and sums deposited for telegraphic transfers to the south. The gain in legals reflects the trend of money from the interior to this center, 'although at the close of the week it was estimated that the banks had lost nearly or quite as much as they gained. The banks are increasing their circulation to an appreciable extent, the new 3 per cent. bonds being used as a basis. If the statement is to be regarded as typical of circumstances controlling the money market, the outlook might be said to favor easy conditions, but as the close of the year usually creates a demand for funds to be employed in dividends and settlements, it is not impossible that rates may harden slightly. The constant outward movement of cereals and manufactures is adding to the balance, owing to this country aboard. The only off-set last week was selling of American securities on German account, and when this balance is to be collected is uncertain; but the next thirty days will show whether loans to Europe are to be continued, or called for pay.

Financial Cablegram.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Evening Post's London financial cablegram savs: "A sharp recovery in Kaffirs was the only feature in the stock market here today. The rise was stimulated by a shortage in shares at the settlement. Excepting for Baltimore and Ohio and Union Pacific, Americans were somewhat drooning, business. and Ohio and Union Pacific, Americans were, somewhat drooping, business partly being checked because of the settlement to begin on Monday next. It is believed that the carry-over may show a considerable increase in the account, as it is believed that large lines will be carried for Berlin. The money position is most perplexing. The stringency in Germany increases, but with no perceptible effect on discount rates here. It is believed that one important reason, for this position is the fact that New York is lending largely to Berlin and moderately to London."

at about Friday's closing prices, May starting at 66%@66*, and December at 66%. There was no apparent reason for the steadiness and after about half an hour's dull trading at about the opening prices the market weakened perceptibly, December selling off to 66% 666½ and May to 66¼ 666%. ened perceptibly, December selling off to 66%@66% and May to 664%@66%. December recovered a trifle, but it was hard work to maintain prices. There was no encouragement to holders in the early news. Liverpool although unchanged for spot wheat, was %@%d lower for futures. Toward the close, December holders apparently became somewhat demoralized, and May, though given fair support, was dragged down by the quick decline of the nearby futures. Some recovery took place from bottom figures, but the market was very weak at the finish, May closing at 65%@66, and December at 65%@65%.

Corn was relatively as weak as wheat. Cold weather was the chief bearish factor. Some important lines of long-corn were sold out and short selling was prominent. May closed %@%6 cents lover.

Bring a THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20th, 1898, Full Purse THE HAMIL & BOOTH CO. FLEITMANN & CO., SELLING AGENTS PEREMPTORY SALE 3000 Pieces Plain and Fancy Silks TOWNSEND & MONTANT, Austran Rooms, Nov. 87 & 89 Lannard Street, N. V. Keep your Catalogue.

The very newest and prettiest of Autumn Styles to be sold at fully One-third Reduction.

> At 10:30 a.m., October 20, in New York city, occuren the Hamil & Booth Co.'s Great Peremptory sale of thousands of pieces of high class silks. Our buyers were there and secured a liberal supply of the choicest goods sold. The most noteworthy fact about this sale was the elegance, newness and fashionableness of the kinds sold. Some staple blacks were among the lots. Every piece was as choice and desirable as it is possible for silks to be. The season's very newest funcies and novelties for waists, dresses, trimmings and every other purpose were also secured.

Our buyers, catalogue in hand, the one pictured here, went through the lots before the sale and selected the very cream of the whole stock, and at the sale bought their selections at wonderfully low prices.

The goods have just arrived and will be placed on sale tomorrow morning. Scores and scores of kinds assorted in the eight lots. I Every piece is a remarkable demonstration of what ample cash can accomplish when in the hands of men who thoroughly understand the red tape of the New York market. Every yard will make for us new friends among the silk lovers of Southern California.

THE INSTRUMENTS OF PROVIDENCE.

T IS interesting to study our national life, not from a political and financial standpoint alone, but from that broader and grander outlook of its educational and religious aspect, for it is here that we find the real measure of our greatness and the correct gauge of our progress.

It is not wealth nor business prosperity, nor political aggrandizement only that betokens the greatness of a nation. It is not its expansion in power or territorial domain that makes its sway strong and enduring. Behind this must be the mighty enginery of high purpose and of intellectual strength. That nation only is great that is true to the nobler instincts of manhood, that has an enlightened sense of justice and human rights, and that is forever reaching out to higher purposes and grander ideals.

Nations are but instruments in the hands of God for the working out of His designs for the advancement of the race. He does not sit aloof from us and by some mysterious and miraculous process of His own, work independently of us to accomplish what He would do. But Providence sets man to work to fit himself to be His helper. He leads him through long and devious paths from savagery to the high plane of civilization and enlightened knowledge, and when he comes to occupy that plane, then is he a fit instrument in the hand of the infinite Ruler of men to make use of in the carrying out of His divine purposes.

There is no study that is so full of interest to the thoughtful mind as that which unfolds to it the path of progress. We like to follow step by step the way that is taken for the uplifting of a nation, and trace the Providence that directs it. And no better text book is offered us than the history of the American nation as we trace it from its small beginnings to the grand stature which it has attained today. And as we do this we cannot fail to see that Providence has a work for us to accomplish in the affairs of men for which we have been unconsciously fitting ourselves.

If we take the matter of education alone we it was twenty-five years ago, that the attendance upon our public schools is constantly increasing, and that the number in our high schools, colleges, universities and other institutions of learning is much larger in proportion to the population than it was a few years since. In 1892, according to the report of the Commissioner of Education, the number of students enrolled in the higher schools of education was 590 in each 1,000,000 of inhabitants, or 1 in each community of 2000. In 1895 there were 1190 students enrolled in institutions of higher learning to every 1,000,000 of population. In view of the situation a recent number of the Outlook says:

ber of students it must be remembered that the standards of admission have advanced until almost two years have been added to the preparatory work in the past twenty-five years. The advance in the standards of admission to colleges, and the higher work done in high schools and academies, justifies, according to Dr. Harris, the statement that 'the quota receiving higher education in each million of people is three times as great as twenty-five years ago.' This growth and the demand for thorough education has increased at the top as well as at the bottom. In 1872 the total number of students doing postgraduate work was 198; in 1897 it was 4919. In special training there is the same remarkable increase. Two hundred and eighty in each million of the population were studying law, medicine and theology in 1872. In 1896, 740 in every 1,000,000 of the population were receiving specal training. The number of students in scientific schools and technical schools in 1890 was 15,000; in 1896 it was about 24,000.'

Such a report as this shows the marvelous advance which the American people have been and are making in enlightened civilization. And in this, no less than in our religious advancement and the national events which have transpired within the present year, we can see the hand of an overruling Providence, and we cannot doubt that we as a people are to be used as an instrument in God's hand for the furtherance of some of His most beneficent purposes inregard to the race. For this He is now lifting us out from ourselves, from the isolation which we have heretofore maintained, into a broader arena of action and into new fields of endeavor and of influence. God is teaching us that no nation, any more than the individual, can live for itself alone, but that in proportion as it has been blessed and prospered should it share the good which it enjoys with the oppressed and down-trodden. He is opening no door of idle conquest for us to pass through, but a door of help and sympathy for struggling and wronged millions who need our aid. Let us be faithful instruments in God's hand to fulfill the mission that He would have us accomplish.

THE GOLD STANDARD IN CUBA

OBERT P. PORTER, special commissioner for the United States to Cuba and Porto Rico, in the course of his report to the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, recently submitted, touches upon the currency question briefly, but pointedly. He says that, "although Cuba is afflicted with many kinds of depreciated currency, the established basis is strictly gold, and in any commercial engagement the value is understood to be in gold unless specified to the contrary. Indeed, there is something almost pathetic," Mr. Porter continues, "in the manner in which Cuba, though plundered and depleted of her resources and wealth, has never wavered from a gold basis. The testimony taken and statements made on this subject have been unanimously in favor of a continuous gold basis, for the Cubans have suffered so much from Spain's various attempts to force depreciated currency upon the people, both in the form of silver and bank bills, that they want no further experience with the currency.

These students are significant, and constitute a hopeful feature of the situation as regards the future of Cuba. The fact that through all their political and social vicissitudes the Cubans have clung to the gold basis as the foundation of shall find that our standard is far higher than their commercial transactions, indicates that they will be willing and apt pupils in the study of currency problems, and that they will be quick to accept sound principles, and to embody them in their currency system when the time comes for the formation of a system of their own:

It will be one of the imperative duties of the United States, during the period in which this nation exercises a controlling influence in the affairs of Cuba, to see that a stable standard of values is instituted and maintained throughout the island. The period of American occupation may be long or short. Its duration will depend principally upon the Cubans themselves. "In connection with this increase in the num- and upon the manner in which they accept our good offices. But whether the duration of our authority in the island be long or short, our government should take advantage of it to inculcate upon the people of Cuba the soundest ideas of political economy and finance. The future of Cuba will in large part depend upon the thoroughness with which these lessons are inculcated. We should be able, before withdrawing altogether from the island, to demonstrate so completely the commercial and moral advantages of a sound financial system that the Cubans will never consent to engage in dangerous experiments with wild-cat or flat currency. The situation presents to us an opportunity for the inculcation of an impressive object lesson in sound finance and we should not fail to take advantage of it.

A LACK OF WOMEN NURSES,

NE of the needs of the war, which was insufficiently supplied, was the presence of female nurses in the hospitals, not only in Cuba and Porto Rico, but in the home camps and in the Philippines. There can be no doubt that had women-nurses been more plentifully supplied, many a poor boy who lost his life from wounds or illness might have been saved. "There was lack of woman's nursing, there was dearth of woman's tears," in field and hospital, wherever our warriors were massed.

This need still exists, as appears from reports which occasionally reach the public through newspaper correspondents or through the medium of private letters given to the press. A correspondent writing from Manila to the New York Independent says:

"The War Department should have sent a few female nurses to Manila. They are sadly needed. Even two or three cheery, tactful women would work wonders in the hospital wards. These boys are pining for the warm sympathy and the many little kindly offices that only a woman can supply. One poor fellow, ill with typhoid fever, has been delirious for over a week, and babbles con-tinually of his mother. Fancy a woman's coel hand upon his hot brow and a woman's soft voice in his ear! About ten days ago I met two American women, Mrs. Russell from New York Miss Spradlin from Kansas-I think the first American women in Manila after the city They eagerly accepted my invitation to visit the hospital, and to let the boys look once more upon two real, live American women. I can never forget that afternoon. It would have touched a heart of stone to see the poor, wan faces turned pathetically toward the ward door as we entered; the eager eyes that fairly devoured the kindly faces of the two women, who, for a few moments, stood for the mothers and sisters and sweethearts so far away; the thin fingers that clung pitifully to the soft, white hand of sympathizing womanhood."

It is to be hoped that more attention will be paid to this branch of the service in the future. Large bodies of troops will soon be dispatched to Cuba, to occupy the island and maintain order until the time comes for the final withdrawal of the American forces. There will inevitably be much sickness among the troops, even if they be not called upon for active service in the field. Provision should be made for an adequate number of female nurses for the army of occupation in Cuba, in Porto Rico, and in the Philippines. For there is nothing so beneficial in contributing to the recovery of men who are ill in a foreign land as the gentle ministration of woman.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN PUBLIC EDUCATION.

By a Special Contributor.

HIS is the age of marvels. Sci- | ence has become the special providence of humanity, annihilating time and space, remedying defects of nature, and it is the reorgan-izer of the intellectual as well as the physical world. That the dumb should was once considered possible by special interposition of the Divine power, and two hundred years ago, when a celebrated English physician taught a mute man speech, there was a suspicion of magic in the trans-

If giving speech to the dumb be a miracle, its progressive performance may be witnessed every day in the Spring street oral public school, where children congenitally deaf are being put into communication with the world about them through the medium of spoken language. There sealed thought fountains are being gradually unlocked through the intelligent ministration of teachers whose long experience with the deaf has convinced them that in-curable mutism is as rare as double vocal organs or two heads, and that persons born deaf only remain spechless because they have not the faculty

This Spring street oral school is an institution of which the people of Los Angeles may well be proud. It is the first and only oral public school in California, or west of the Rocky Mountains, and is conducted upon the most approved scientific methods for the education of the deaf.

Congenital deafness is a very common affliction, and as heredity plays such a large part in defection of the organs of special sense, deafness increases with every generation. All over the Union there are hundreds and in cases thousands of children born who are being educated in the deaf who are being educated in the public institutions for the deaf and dumb, that are maintained at vast expense to the several States. These children are taken from parental care and control when both are of the utmost importance, and this isolation from home influence alienates the affection of the child from its parents, and frequently has am unhappy moral effect. In the State institutions, too, the deaf are generally taught a sign language, and while this is of great utility to them in a community of the deaf, it does not perfectly meet the needs of education, in that it is not the current method of communication of the world at large. The manual training received in such institutions is an admirable feature and has greatly ameliorated the condition of the deaf.

current method of communication of the world at large. The manual training received in such institutions is an admirable feature and has greatly ameliorated the condition of the deaf.

The parent who pays taxes to support the public school, naturally feels a desire that his children should be able to avail themselves of its facilities, and a defect of hearing should not debar a child from receiving that public instruction that is provided by the law, and that, too, without an unnatural isolation from society. It was to meet this demand that the Spring street oral school was established by the Board of Education, a precedent being found in the public-school system of the State of Illinois, where oral schools are established by the general school law as a part of public education.

The object of these schools is to equip totally or partially deaf children with spoken language, so that when they are of ordinary school age they may enter the grades with speaking and hearing children, and pursue the same course of instruction.

That this could be achieved would seem impossible to those who have given the subject little thought, but a visit to our oral school will prove convincing. Although it has been established but little more than a month, it has already demonstrated its usefulness, and the progress of the children in attendance is most encouraging.

Deaf children have all of the vocal organs in perfection, and the first aim of oral instruction is to train the child to the production of vocal sounds. As the person born deaf has as little idea of sound as the person born blind has of color, this is no easy task. Yet the deaf, like the blind, are usually gifted with the most delicate sense of touch and a susceptibility to impression that is nature's effort at compensation for their lack. The teacher utilizes these with the happiest results. The child who can not hear sound, is taught to feel it and to notice every degree of the vibration of the vocal organs. The the happiest results. The child who can not hear sound, is taught to feel it and to notice every degree of the vibration of the vocal organs. The teacher places the hands of the child upon her throat, produces sound, and then holds the child's fingers upon its own throat and encourages it to create similar vibration.

When this first step has been mastered, the joy of the deaf child is almost pathetic. No lusty lad who succeeds for the first time in whistling, is half so proud of his performance or eager to exhibit it, and surely there was never a whistler whose strains waken such hope in the breast of those who love him as do these first faitering vocal sounds of the deaf boy or girl.

As the nature of the vibration differs with every vowel sound, they must all be repeated by the teacher and imitated by the learner thousands of times before the shades of difference are acquired and the modifications of the vowels accurately learned, but while this is being done the pupil is learning words in which the sounds occur, and connecting the word both spoken and written with the idea it represents. Thus the work is not merely imitative, but reason, observation and memory are receiving the most valuable development. Long before the learner is able to pronounce the words accurately himself, he will read them upon the lips of his teacher and comprehend them.

The wonderful complexity of human nature in its affections and passions is nowhere more clearly shown than in the process of the education of the deaf. Concrete ideas are not more fully understood by them than the words that denote abstractions, and the ideas that are indicated by them. Appropriately enough. "love" is the first word taught the little deaf child. "Love, love," repeats the teacher over and over again, smilling into the child's face and caressing him, and then "I." "you" and other simple words are connected with this idea and learned. Signs are always discouraged, and as the written word is always connected with the spoken, the transition to reading and writing is easy and natural. Paper models of stoves, tables, chairs and beds, tiny mattresses, sheets, pillows, cooking utensils, dishes, and all the common objects in the home are shown to the children and they are shown to the children and they are shown to the children and when the spoken, the transition to reading and writing is easy and natural. Paper models of stoves, tables, chairs and beds, tiny mattresses, sheets, pillows, cooking utensils, dishes, and all the common objects in the home are shown to the child, and while speaking the word, presses the hand when the accented syllable is repeated. The tone, pitch, speed and emphasis are indicated by the use of the black-board. A children enables them to seige an idea almost instantly, and as no distractions of sound interfere, they are able to fix every power of the mind upon the desired subject.

The most interesting department of the Spring street oral school is the kindergarten, where very young children are given their first lessons in speech. The instruction is continued every moment the child is at school. When he eats his lucheon, the name of every article is repeated over and over and repeated with as much sound as the child is able to give. At first, sound is impossible, and after learning the correct position of the vocal organs in speaking the words, the little one whispers them.

The teachers are careful to articulate every syllable with the utmust evactors, and the eagerness with which they are imitated, and the pleasure the actual production of a spoken word is to the little deaf child is a pretty thing to witness.

The deaf children are given their recreation when those of the other grades are engaged in study, and are subjected to no annoyances on account of their disabilities of expression. They converse orally with one another as far as possible, and their voices differ little from those of ordinary children. When the instruction is begun late, however, the development of the long unused voice is an arduous task, but no obstacles seem to discourage the earnest and enthusiastic teachers in charge of the school.

These ladies, Miss Mary Bennett and Miss Helen Taylor, have had much exverience in the instruction of the deaf. Both have taught in the famous Englewood School, the first oral school ever established for young children. Miss Mary McGowan, the originator of this notable idea, had long been an instructress in a State institution for the deaf, and had become convinced that speech was possible to nearly all of the deaf, and had become convinced that speech was possible to nearly all of the deaf, and had become convinced that speech was possible to nearly all of the deaf, if the instruction were begun in early child

Some of the children in the Springstreet school have attended the State High Sign School at Berkeley, and as their ages range from 3 to 16, in some cases the cultivation of the vocal organs is attended with much difficulty, yet these children repeat with great accuracy new words given to them, and in reading from the lips what is said to them show remarkable quickness of comprehension.

The ordinary branches of education are also taught, and the boys take the course in manual training provided by the Sloyd School. Their imitative skill is usually superior to that of hearing children, and in writing, drawing and the use of tools they are exceedingly clever.

Alexander Bell, the inventor of the Bell telephone, was the first demonstrator of the oral system in this coun-try. He not only taught a member of his family, who was born deaf, perfect vocal expression, but perfected a visible speech method upon an alpha-bet of fifty-two characters, each representing the vocal organs in the postition required to produce it. This system was found to be too greatly complicated for use in schools, and it has been superseded by the purely oral method taught by Miss McGowan.

Deafness is a puzzling subject to physiologists. Cases occur of total congenital deafness where the history of the ancestry is flawless, then again the defect may be plainly traced from parent to child, and the claim of heredity established. Disparity of age in the parents, consanguinity, and weakness of the organs of special sense are thought to be predisposing causes, yet deafness is often encountered where none of these conditions exist.

thought to be predisposing causes, yet deafness is often encountered where none of these conditions exist.

The prevailing throat and lung troubles of cold climates weaken the sense of hearing, and parents often transmit this form of deafness to their children, and many very young children have their hearing entirely destroyed by severe catarrh, and never learn speech naturally. In California, the percentage of deafness is very large, as the State is an asylum for those who are afflicted with pulmonary complaints, and where tuberculous diseases do not appear to be transmitted to the child, deafness is often found. A need for the incorporation of instruction for the deaf into our public schools is apparent, and it is probable that the State Legislature will soon be asked to make adequate provision for it.

While heredity in deafness is not fully established, and the percentage of deaf children of "deaf and dumb" parents is small, it is certain that defective organs are likely to be dequeathed to offspring of persons so afflicted. Children resemble their parents in nothing more than in the configuration of mouth, teeth, tongue, palate and other vocal organs. A harellp will descend through generations, and "rabbit-mouth," "gopher-teeth," a pendant lower lip, or a deficient palate, will pass from one generation to another, until it is a recognized family mark. The deaf parent with undeveloped vocal organs will transmit the latter defect. or its tendency, to his children, and that his deafness does not reappear in his immediate pasterity is not good argument aganst its hereditary transmission.

It is thought by many scientists that there are few persons whose nerves of hearing would not respond to some pitch of sound, if that pitch could be discovered, but the hope of science for the deaf is the artificial electric nerve, connecting the auditory apparatus with the brain centers and conveying thence the vibrations of the air that produce sound. This may seem a wild absurdity to those who have not examined the structure of the sensitory system, but in view of the achievements of electricity in the past twenty-five years, it appears wholly possible. A few years ago the whole world was deaf to vocal sounds three or four miles distant, and had anyone declared that the time would come within the life of the present generation when men could talk with their friends two or three hundred miles away, and hear every inflection of their voices, even scientists would have scouted the assertion. The telephone has restored the disturbed connection between distant sound and the auditory nerve, and what electricity has achieved is as yet merely rudimentary.

The artificial auditory is still uncreated, and as a substitute for hearing It is thought by many scientists that merely rudimentary.

The artificial auditory is still uncreated, and as a substitute for hearing nothing has yet been devised superior to the oral method of instructing the deaf. That Los Angeles has begun that work, speaks well for its success in California. The parents of deaf children resident here have a rare opportunity to educate their unfortunate little ones, and at the same time keep them under their care. The fact that there is a free public school for the deaf here will attract many neople who desire to make their homes in an ideal climate, and this pioneer oral school of the West may be made to serve the hearing children who, from some natural defect, are unable to properly articulate language. ticulate language.

When you make a visit to the Springstreet oral school, carry with you something to brighten the school-room and to encourage the patient children who are making such a heroic struggle to touch our thought world and to gain citizenship within it. Picture, a growin plant or a toy will furnish a new subject for the work of the day. The Board of Education, the teachers and the parents of the children have provided many things of this sort themselves, and the most generous spirit has been shown by many not connected with the schools, but a little intelliwith the schools, but a little intelligent and helpful interest will benefit both teachers and pupils, and will bless those who give as well as those who receive who receive.

The oral public school will never conflict with the State school, for there children who could not receive adequate support from their parents will be cared for and educated, but the public school removes the education of the deaf from the sphere of "public charity," and places it where it belongs. It also gives the deaf child a fighting chance in the world, and this is all that he asks in the name of right and justice.

ART IN PREHISTORIC AMERICA. SIGNIFICANT DISCOVERIES MADE BY SIDDI

MOHAMMET TA'EIBER. By a Staff Contributor.

O EVERY well-read and thoughtful american, as well as to all scientists, historians and archaeologists, an ever-present charm lies in the discovery of fresh traces of the mysterious race which peopled this continent long ages before the dawn of ancient history. Whether it be the ruins of a city of the Cliff Dwellers, or the relics αt a still more ancient civi-bolic geometrical designs, so arranged that their meaning is an open book to one versed in this universal method of expression chosen by the ancients.

In North America, where the relication of much earlier date, they possess even greater interest as well as netwicely value. In the little cottage on the oil skirts of the city, where $5.661 Mohammet Ta'elber is resting quietly, while he gets his new material into share for use, he has a small but remarkable collection of prehistoric pottery, found among the ruins in what is now the desert region of America. Each specimen is perfect of its kind, and the foundation of all schools of molern art is seen in the beautiful geometrical designs which mark the different periods and tell to the initiated their own tale of mysterious ancient lore. As he called my attention to the designs and explained their symbolic meaning. Sidi Mohammet Ta'eiber opened a new world of possibilities for the future of both art and history in America. His explanation can best be given in his own words:

"It must," he raid in response to a question concerning the extent of popular interest in such matters, "be of vital interest to all art loving Americans to learn that within the borders of their own country they can study the forms of Egyptian, Greek and Latin art in all its pristine beauly. Here, in the function of Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, and Arizona, have been discovered many prehistoric pottery factories wherein are found over forty different geometrical designs. In the pottery wiself, you see, are these combinations of brown and yellow, red, black and white, red and white, yellow and white, and yellow and red; colors which are as fresh today as any found in the East, though, thousands of years older than any of the Greek or Egyptian remains.

"In this great prehistoric garden of America, whorein riggs in archaeolow may well stand appalled, are to be found ruins of temples, dwellings and pottery factories of such dimensions that the mind would fail to realize it, except it were seen. First, one finds this so-called Egyptian pottery of bright color, either red or yellow, with intermediate lines of black. Then there is the Grecian school, with its blocks and checks, and its numerous scrolls; and, lastly, here is the Roman scroll with all its embellished forms. Look at these geometric perfections—you see that all are designed and formed strictly on geometric lines—and then think of the ornamental designs carved on modern buildings, braided on ladles' dresses, and greeting you at every turn in every department of art. Can you find that any progress in art has meaning that lies hidden in the fruits of recent researches among the strange antiquities of America, rests the great and unique value of the work of Siddi Mohammet Ta'eiber.

Siddi Mohammet Ta'eiber is an Indian sage. Of pure English descent, he unites the progressive energy of the Angler-Saxon with the wide learning of the Hindu philosopher. Born in India, he was adopted when a very young child by the Djains and was carefully trained in their temples for scientific and educational work. He is thoroughly versed in Cryptic Masonry or the religion of wisdoch, embracing all that is known today as Masonry, from the first to the tighty-third degree. Although he has not as yet taken any of the degrees in their modern form, Siddi Mohammet Ta'eiber is a gree. Although he has not as yet taken any of the degrees in their modern form, Siddi Mohammet Ta'eiber is a Mason of the highest rank, and his return to Los Angeles for the winter after a year spent among the prehistoric ruins of Colorado and Utah is an event of the greatest importance to prominent local members of that order. The work of Siddi Mohammet Ta'eiber deals especially with the esoteric side of Masonry, and he has traveled in nearly every country on the globe, studying the history of each in its turn and searching out its records of ancient times, as he firmly believes that the key to the future full development of the human race lies in a knowledge and understanding of the past. The work of

been made since the establishment of this one form that sages founded from the school of the universe?

"I found fragments of many different kinds of pottery in these great heaps," he went on, "the pigments used in their coloring were invariably ochres and oxides in black and white. They formed the black alkaloids from carbonized deer-horns, and made this hard white enamel from pulverized-gypsum. As far as the excavations go, the specimens show that these people outlined their decorations on pottery with bone instruments, and then rubbed them to this fine, smooth surface with innumerable kinds of stones.

"As to the designs themselves, you see that here are the signs of sun and moon, of the twelve-pointed stars as well as those of nine, six and five points, and the triple circle with radiating points, which forms the center of that design in various hues and colors. From this it may be said that the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans were really but copyists of ancient America. If this be so," he continued, musingly, "when was there intercourse between our shores and theirs, and why are all these relics found west of the Mississippi, and north than a line about 150 miles south of Salt Lake City.

line about 150 miles south of Salt Lake Citv.

"At any rate," he concluded, "to lovers of art in this country there is abundant material in the countless tons of fragments to be found in these huge hecatombs to make a magnificent tessellated pavement for an Academy of Art befitting this great nation. I should think that to all thoughtful and patriotic Americans it would seem well to form a new, yet old school of art, without dogmas or limitations, to begin where the sages of American art left off, and to put into actual practice the breath of America, which you call liberty. If this were done, I have faith that from the ashes of the past would arise a new art which shall surpass them all." MURIEL IRWIN.

Balloting Machines.

[San Francisco Call:] Following the lections of 1896 a good deal of attention was given to reports from various cities where experiments had been made with balloting machines. As a rule these reports were favorable, and some sanguine advocates of the system pre-dicted that such machines would soon be in use in all progressive parts of the

This year, however, there has been comparatively little attention given to the subject. It would appear that most of the communities that made the experiment in 1896 returned to the old way of voting in the recent election, or else that the subject is no longer regarded as sufficiently interesting to justify discussions concerning the regarded as sufficiently interesting to justify discussions concerning the results.

From the city of Rochester, N. Y., however, there comes glowing reports of the success resulting from the use of a balloting machine at the polling places there. Commenting upon the working of the apparatus the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle says: "The result of the election in Rochester was flashed over the wires last night long before the ballots were counted in other cities, and the figures were doubtless accepted as a fair indication of the trend in other localities. That in itself was a fine advertisement for the machine, and it is a fair assumption that it will be in general use before the end of another year. Voting by machinery is unquestionably a vast improvement upon any of the methods heretofore employed, and, aside from the celerity and accuracy with which the vote is registered, must commend itself to every citizen."

This report will encourage the advocates of the machine method of voting, but with the general public the absence of reports from other localities that tried the machines two years ago will be regarded as significant of some overpowering difficulty in the way of their use. If the machines had been as sakisfactory as was at first reported in 1896 it is not likely they would have been abandoned this year.

There can be no question that our present system of voting is cumbersome and easily exposed to the operation of fraud. A machine that would automatically record and count votes would be a great advantage, if it could be made to work accurately and safely. Nor is it to be doubted that American mechanical skill will eventually construct such a machine. The only question is whether any, machine now in existence is able to meet all the requirements of the use to which it is to be put.

It is worth noting that the Rochester machine is an improvement on the one tested in that city two years ago. It is claimed that the results of the first trial were fairly good, and that those of this year have been perfect were fairly good, and that those of this year have been perfectly satisfactory. On the showing made it might be worth while to have the machine investigated with a view to its possible use in California. A system of voting that will hasten the count of the result and at the same time put an end to any possibility of tampering with the returns would certainly be a valuable addition to our labor-saving machinery.

Indeed this year the show hids fair to be patiental in something. bids fair to be national in something more than name. It does not require a visit to Madison Square Garden to discover that the season of the Horse Show is at hand. Shop windows along Broadway and Fifth avenue are resplendent with things suggestive of the exhibition. Even the dealers in oriental goods honor the occasion by displays of eastern horse trappings, while the windows of curiosity shops are filled with the equine equipments of mediaeval times. As for the show itself, its general features remain the same as in former years. The classification has undergone little, if any, change, and, though the list of exhibchange, and, though the list of exhibitors is considerably altered, the standard will be raised if anything by the new entries. One striking feature will be the unusually large number of saddle horses exhibited by women.

The large number of portraits on exhibition at the Autumn Exhibit of the Academy of Design has attracted much attention. Further than this, however, there is nothing extraordinary about the collection. Figure pieces of conspicuous merit are not numerous, and the bulk of the work is in that staid manner that has of late grown to be characteristic of autumnal displays at the academy. There is an abundance of respectable work, but nothing to arouse enthusiasm. At the Water Color Club exhibition also, portraiture is very much in evidence. And there is to be a portrait show at the academy in the near future. The American Art Galleries open tomorrow with an exhibition of over four hundred original paintings and drawings by J. James Tissot, illustrative of the life of Christ.

Two philanthropic enterprises are now demanding considerable attention in the fashionable world. One is the concert in aid of the Saturday and Sunday Hospital Association, on December 13, at the Astoria; the other is the concert for the benefit of the Sunnyside Day Nursery, on November 22 at the Metropolitan Operahouse, where Mme. Melba is to make her first appearance this season. Mme. Melba will be assisted by Mme. Gadski, Sig. Bensaude, Monsieur Boudouresque, and the New York Symphony Orchestra. Sig. Pandolfini will be heard there for the first time in America. There are two other philanthropic entertainments which, though they do not demand quite so much attention as these two concerts, are nevertheless of considerable charitable and musical interest. One of these is a series of lectures on musical topics, in aid of the Society of the Lying-in Hospital of New York. These lectures will be delivered by Miss S. C. Very, a Fellow of the American College of Musicians and the associate planist of Trinity College, Cambridge. The first lecture, on Friday afternoon of this week, will be on "Retrospect and Forecast." the subjects of the other discourses are "A Musical Renaissance," "The Symphonic Poem," "The Lyric Drama," and "The Dawn of a New Era." The other entertainment is the performance on December 1 at Sherry's, of "In a Persian Garden," the beautiful songcycle by Mme. Lehmann, who has taken the words from Fitzgerald's version of the Rubalyat of Omar Khavyam. This performance will be for the benefit of the Bables' Hospital.

At the first concert the music will be appropriate to the Christmas season; second it will be suggestive of at the secon Eastertide.

Unusual interest attaches to a series of concerts, the first of their kind to be given in New York. They are advertised as symphony concerts for young people. Each number on the programme will be preceded by an explanation of its salient poetic and musical features, illustrated by excerpts by the orchestra. These concerts are to be given on Saturday afternoons at Carnegie Hall by Frank Damrosch and orchestra. The first of the series will be given on November 26 and selections from Haydn, Mendelssohn and Wagner will be rendered. The Oratorio Society announces concerts on December 3, 30, 31 and March 25. At the first Walter Damrosch's "Manila Te Deum" will be produced; at the second and third, the "Messiah" will be sung; and at the fourth, Berlioz's "Requiem." Last week H. E. Krehbiel, the well-known musical critic, delivered a lecture at the Lyceum Theater, illustrated by a performance of Beethoven's Symphony in C minor by the American Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Sam Franko.

Herr Emil Paur's Symphony Orchestra has already given two of its popular Sunday-night concerts at Carnegie Hall. Katharine Bloodgood, Jessie Shay, and Max Karger were the soloists yesterday evening. The company that Maurice Grau has organized to give grand opera in New York this winter is now gathering. Many members are now singing in Chicago, where Mme. Nordica, who arrived in New York from Germany on Saturday, will join them. M. Jean de Reszke will not arrive until the middle of December and will remain in this country only for the New York season. It is possible that Paul Kalisch also, whom Mr. Grau has been trying to secure, will join the company at the Metropolitan with his wife, Mme. Lilli Lehmann.

The musical season is already well under way. The first concert of the Kneisel Quartette was given in Mendelssohn Hall November 15. Another feature of the programme was Brahm's sonata for the violin and plano, in which Mr. Kneisel was assisted by Arthur Whiting. Pending the arrival of "The Runaway Girl" at the Fifth Avenue, Joseph Jefferson, who has now fully recovered from his iliness, will occupy the stage there in the perennial "Rip Van Winkle." The rare humor of Mr. Jefferson's Rip is as delightful and its exquisite pathos as irresistible now as it was thirty years ago? There is a theatrical rumor, purporting to come from a trustworthy source, to the effect that the four sons of Joseph Jefferson are soon to make a short tour, playing in "Rip Van Winkle." Thomas Jefferson, it is said, is to play the part of Rip. Joseph Jefferson, Jr., whose stage name is Joseph Warren, is now a member of his father's company and has been playing Faulkiand in "The Rivals." Mr. Morgan, whose wonderful interpretation of John Storm in "The Christian" has made him famous in a day, is forced to leave Miss Allen's company this week in order to return to the Lyceum Stock Company, which will open its season next week in Pinero's "Trelawney of the Wells." His place in "The Christian" company will be filled by Joseph Haworth.

Julia Arthur, at Wallack's, gives her final performances of "A Lady of Quality" this week. Her announcement that "Ingomar" will follow has excited no little curiosity. There is no doubt that Miss Arthur's portrayal of Clorinda was wonderfully powerful, but Parthenia is a character of a very different type. As Clorinda Miss Arthur wholly lacks tenderness even where there would seem to be excuse for it. To be sure, this may be due entirely to her interpretation of the character, but there are not a few who think her incapable of portraying the softer side of a woman's nature and predict an anticlimax in her new role

Richard Mansfeld will remain a week longer in "Cyrano de Bergerac."
This representation, good as it has been from the start, is certainly improving. The assembling of the idlers, rallants and fine ladies at the Hotel de Bourgogne, the varied proceedings in the shop of Ragueneau, and the incidents in camp and battle are presented quite as vividly and with as much of pictorial charm and dramatic effect but with less vociferousness. Too much praise could scarcely be given to the pictorial side of this representation. As for Mansfeld himself, if Cyrano is not his greatest role, it certainly is bidding high for that honor.

thank you. And you're looking well yourself.

Mayor Harrison. I am feeling well, too. But I must be going now. Take good care of your health, Mr. Croker. Good-day.

Mr. Croker. Good-by; when you come to New York drop in and see me. Take good care of yourself. These are bad days for health...

There is not a scintilla of evidence of political significance about that conversation. The two gentlemen are fast friends and frequently one or the other travels a thousand miles to learn the status of the other's health.

AUTUMN MURMURS

O ye sheaves of gold,
Gathered in the sun-burned field
Where the sowing labors yield Treasures manifold,
Here's a jug of rare old ale,
Beading still the reaper's beard
While he whistles down the vale,
As the humining farm is neared!
What a saucy knot of malds,
Eggs him on to kiss his prize!
What a pack of bouncing jades
Riads a kerchlef o'er his eyes,
Twirls him thrice and bids him search
Whom he may, the while they plnch,
Prick and leave him in the lurch,
Each one shriking-like a finch!
Ah, the starlight country dance—
Not without its rough romance,
Not without the fiddle's beat,
Speeding Cicely's flashing feet—

THE BATTLESHIP "WISCONSIN

LATEST ADDITION TO THE AMERICAN NAVY. WORKSHOP WHERE WARSHIPS ARE MADE.

By a Special Contributor.

HE birth of an American battleship is an event in American his-tory. The marvelous and unprecedented achievements of modern men-of-war have awakened in the public mind an interest in naval matters that will not be satisfied with matters that will not be satisfied with anything short of the best if not the largest navy in the world, hence the addition of one more battleship, and she, one of the largest in the world, is a matter that every patriotic American feels personal pride in. The newcomer, born in the cradle of the nowfamous Oregon, will rest upon the rippling waves of San Francisco Bay before this reaches the eye of the reader, and within four or five months, perhaps less, her bow will point out, through the Golden Gate into the broad Pacific, proudly flying the Stars and Stripes, and fully able to take care of the interests Old Glory represents. And if a foreign foe is forced to try conclusions with her, he will find the Oregon's big brother, with all her Oregon's big brother, with all her vigor, speed, armament and peerless qualities, except that they will all be augmented and obtain upon a larger scale. men is attached. When it is remembered that every plate, every part of the great frame, or decks, is of the heaviest construction and of solid steel, the necessity for this substantial structure is apparent. The Wisconsin, therefore, until the moment she slides out of her house into the blue waters of the bay, is almost entirely concealed from general view. At the end nearest the permanent buildings of the works, her bow has protruded through her house, and fills the entire width of the street. The tremendous ram that has been added slopes upward from the keel in graceful curve to a point that will be about ten feet below her water line. This portion of the huil is of marvelously solid construction, and the machinery used for forming the plates that comprise it is of such magnitude as to be almost indescribable. An idea of her size may be imagined when it is stated that the lower curve of the ram overtops the roof of the two-story workships on the opposite side of we forty-foot street.

All the plates were in position except the armor plates, when I visited her. Space has been left for these, which will not be put on until the interior work has been completed and the vessel is ready for her armament. In the general machine shops are some mammoth lathes, and special wasted upon the sphinx who guards the outer portals. The company is averse to that sort of thing, and as within its gates lie many secrets of the government, it is in many respects like a fortified military post, where no cameras are allowed.

Through the courtesy of Irving M. Soott, vice-president and general manager of the company, however, I was permitted to visit the works, and was afforded every facility for photographing the numerous interesting scenes in and about the great shops.

The casual visitor who expects to see the Wisconsin in detail will be disappointed. In order to construct such an immense ship, it it necessary to build around her, upon all sides, a substantial house of heavy timbers, to which the scaffolding for the army of work-

They are of the water-tube type, compact as possible for the great power they are designed to afford. They will be ready to put in place as zoon as the ship is launched, and every effort will be put forth to have the Wisconsin ready for commission in the shortest possible space of time.

She is 368 feet in length, 72 feet 2½ inches beam, and will draw 23 feet 6 inches of water. The Oregon is 348 feet long, 69 feet 3 inches beam, and draws 24 feet. The Wisconsin will mount four 13-inch rifies, fourteen 6-inch rifies, sixteen 6-pounders, four 1-pounders and one machine gun. The Oregon carries a greater number of guns, but of less aggregate catibre, she having four 13-inch, eight 8-inch, four 6-inch, twenty 6-pounders, six 1-pounders and four machine guns. Although twenty feet longer than the Oregon, and of more beam, the Wisconsin will draw less water, her lines being sharper, to permit of increase in speed. The Oregon has a-contract

She will be christene "Ohio." Her length will be 388 feet, breadth 72 feet 3 inches, and draught 23 feet 9 inches. She will be of 12,500 tons displacement, and is to have a contract speed of 18 knots, which means that she will be capable of 20 or 21, if necessity arises.

In all respects, the launching of this warship will be the greatest event of the kind ever witnessed on the Pacific Coast.

Another beautiful ship, now almost ready for delivery to her purchasers, will attract many eyes in the ship-yards of the Union Iron Works, when the throng gathers there to witness the launching of the battleship. This military parson was so faithful in his duty that in a morel and spiritual sense he could claim that his hands were clean, but in a physical sense they were often the very reverse.

On one occasion a detachment of the regiment to which he belonged, after a somewhat long fast, was about to attack hastily and uncermoniously the first food they had seen after a weary tramp over the Presidio hills. The officer of the day was particularly hungry, and reached for the bread tray before the whole of him was inside the mess tent.

INOCULATING CHILDREN AGAINST DRUNKENNESS.

By a Special Contributor.

HINK of inoculating babes against drunkenness, and in this way wiping out indulgence in alcoholic potables of all kinds. Think of a day when the business of the brewer and distiller and saloon-keeper shall cease altogether, because there be none in all the land who will drink wine, or beer, or whisky. Yet there is a man, a very sober, serious, intellectual and scientific man, with rooms at the Hotel Gerard, New York City, who loks forward to such a time as the result of his experimenta

This is Dr. F. ederick W. d'Evelyn, head of the medical staff of St. Luke's Hospital, San Francisco, now in the city investigating existing conditions in the local hospitals.

Many important discoveries have been made: indeed, most of them are accidental; but Dr. d'Evelyn has reached his conclusion after many years of experimentation, the incidents of which might be laughable, but for their seriousness, and as it seemed to him, the importance of their results to humanity.

Dr. d'Evelyn is a careful, canny Scotchman, as his features clearly indicate, and a graduate of Edinburgh University. He does not strike one as an enthusiast, unless intense earnestness be such. He speaks deliberately, as though each word were golden, warming somewhat as he progresses in the elucidation of his theme.

"It is no direct part of my work," he said, "to cure drunkards. To be sure, I would not throw one aside who offered himself to me for treatment. There can be no question but that the agent I employ does neutralize the deterioating effects of alcohol in the inchriate. The many that have been cared at my hands demonstrate this, but mine is a preventive rather than a curative work. I take children and make them immune to alcohol in all its forms, just as they are rendered immune to smallpox by vaccination, "I have gone beyond the experimental stage, because I have reached successful demonstration of the fact. It is just as possible to take the child of an alcoholic parent or parents, and make it humanse to alcohol as it is be render it immune to smallpox."

"My chief mission now is to impress this fact upon the general publicate fact that inoculation against drunkenness is a duty to children. I mean to all children. Whether or not alcoholism, was present in the parent or parents, while those with alcoholic ancestry have predisposition to drink, yet it is also true that the offspring of parents who are strictly temperate may and does oftentimes develop alcoholism,"

Such is the startling positio

more startling and of greater values to the world than that made by Jenner, or Koch, or Pasteur.

His contention is that all civilized peoples are suffering from physical deteriorations by reason of the baneful effects of alcohol upon the blood, and that the race can never be symmetric and complete, balanced in all parts and equal to all possibilities until it shall have recovered from the evil influences of the potent drug.

He disclaims any form of fanaticism, or exclusivism, or prohibition.

"I have no patience," said he with prohibitory enactments of any kind. You may not stop a plague or a pestilence by merely forbidding it to ravage a country. Alcoholism is a physiological condition produced by a direct cause. It can be eliminated only by the removal once and for all of that cause."

He does not consider in his studies

Gause."

He does not consider in his studies as he declares, the effect of alcohol upon the nerves and brain, these being secondary only. It is the blood which he searches, this being, as he declares, "by reason of the offices it performs, the life of the individual. If the blood be injuriously affected, all the parts related to it must also receive some part of the shock.

"But I find," he continued, "that water is the chief factor after all. Blood is composed of serum and corpuscles. Now 68 per centum of the latter and 90 per centum of the former is water. So that we may safely say that water is life. Yet alcohol has close affinity to water—alcohol dehydrates the blood and hence follows deterioration. The blood being interfered with, the whole physical, mental and moral being is disordered. The alcoholized man is incapable of obtaining results that would be possible under normal conditions."

What the doctor uses as a prevention is equisine, which may best be defined as prepared blood of an alcoholized horse in a normal condition, previous to imbibition. Herein he follows lines, set in ignorance, of present scientific knowledge, by Jenner; also which have set in ignorance of present scientific knowledge, by Jenner; also which have been followed by Koch and Pasteur, all of whom have adopted Hennemann's motto of "like curing like."

He literally proposes to prevent alcoholism by applying alcoholized blood to blood injured by alcohol: When asked for an explanation of this seeming paradox, Dr. d'Evelyn replied:

"I will confess honestly, I do not know how it is done. Scientific research may properly end when desired results are reached. I saw physical, moral and intellectual degeneracy in the human family by the reason of alcohol. I set about to find causation and correction of the evil. Experimentation brought me to this knowledge. I know that children may be made immune to alcohol—will not want it and will not drink it, by means of equisine. But just how this prepared blood acts upon the child I cannot tell you. It does not certainly, eliminate congenital tendencies, but it does hold them in abeyance after its manner. By suspending them it affords opportunity for healthler action and ultimate elimination.
"I am not one of those who believes for healthier action and ultimate elimination.

"I am not one of those who believes that men can be made good in an hour, or a day, or a lifetime, either. All growth is slow and change is slow. But suppose by means of equisine 50 per centum of alcoholic tendency is eliminated from the child. It will then communicate to its offspring increased strength, say 75 per centum of resistance; and in this way in a very few generations every vestige of vicious tendency will be removed."

As Dr. d'Evelyn explains Pasteur, Koch and Jenner's methods look to immunity from disease germs, while his aims to eradicate the effects of a polson. All of them have a common aim, the prevention of an abnormal condition of the body, which is but another term for disease.

Dr. d'Evelyn is a very pleasant and interesting conversationalist, as are all earnest investigators, who come into frequent contact as he with his fellows. With a charm of manner that may not be described he gives a graphic account of his experiments. The latter com-be described he gives a graphic account of his experiments. The latter comprehended invasion of the animal and vegetable field, free use of the laboratory and a constant lookout through the opening of the miscroscope.

He had a regular madness for making living things drunk. He made potatoes drunk, onions drunk, carrots drunk, and beets drunk. He made pigeons drunk cara drunk. He began at the Alpha of life—the very lowest forms of animal life, taking in the amoebac, frogs, turtles, alligators and the higher mammals. And this, he declares, was the sum of all, wherever he found a cell and protoplasm, there he produced drunkenness. He had no more difficulty in making drunk a beet, or a toad, than in filling a man beyond the conscious state.

Dr. d'Evelyn does not claim that his

Dr. d'Evelyn does not claim that his cautionary experimented turnips drew themselves out of the ground and then attempted to stalk away in a drunken stagger; or that his drunken turtles quarreled or that his drunken turtles quarreled and fought with one another; or that his alcoholized frogs swore like pirates. This, however, is his insistence; that the physiological results were the same in all cases. Just as in advanced drunkennes in man he had observed the cells swollen and ready to burst, so in the potatoes and onions the walls of the cells thickened and there was visible deterioration of the several parts. The parallelism was complete except that the effects were greater in the human creature by reason of its higher organism.

"Whether blood was present or absent," he said, "the effect was the same. Wherever there was water, these deteroirations set in, and water is present in all living things. The horses drank the whisky as men do by the mouth; the plant by the roots, or in the air. In every case I subjected all the life to alcoholic influence, and the result was the same in all cases. There was devitalization everywhere.

"Having discovered this fundamental fact, I sought a remedy. This necessitated experiment which it is needless for me to recount. The smaller animals were ready at hand, and as I progressed they were made to serve my purposes. After long and long time I rendered rabbits, birds and guinea pigs immune.

"But it was a great stride to man.

"But it was a great stride to man, and I hesitated long before I was emboldened to make proof in him; of course without this all my studies and labors would have been in vain. When I reached my first human subject I confess to a flutter of the heart and a subjecting of the pulse. It was a thorquickening of the pulse. It was a thoroughly-nicoholized subject, and afforded admirable opportunity for proving the virtue of the equisine. The test ing the virtue of the equisine. The test was made and the man quickly, to his infinite surprise as well as to that of his friends, lost all taste for alcohol. The appetite has not returned to him his friends, lost all taste for alcohol. The appetite has not returned to him since. Similar experiments made upon many others has had but the one result—the positive eradication of all desire for drink—a neutralizing of the alcohol, and a restoration of the individual to a manhood that seemingly had been irretrievably lost.

"Yet, after all, everything had not been regained. The penalty of physical sin must be paid. The man who has need to be cured is not so complete as he who has never had need of a physical. The restored drunkard may be an after ornament to society and a blessing to his generation, but I doubt if it be possible for him to attain heighs to which he might have aspired had that appetite not overcome him.

"Because this is so, and because human skill today calls for prevention rather than cure I plead for the childer. It is the your laws suffered because of the sin of the fathar, or mother, or both, that I would reach. I would spare them the entail."

Unlike other physicians who claim to cure the drunkard, Dr. D'Evelyn has no sanitarium or protracted course of treatment.

There is but a single inoculation and

There is but a single inoculation and this, he declares, is sufficient for a life-time, although he adds that, as a pre-cautionary measure, it might be repeated, as in vaccination for smallpox, every seven or eight years.

No child, he says, is too young for the reception of the equisine. As yet, though, the youngest that has come into his hands was 3 years old. So harmless, however, is his preparation, yet so efficient its work, that he would not scruple to apply it to a newly-born infant.

OTEL DEL CORONADO, Nov. 23.—Many an eastern man, glid-ing over the desert in Eastern ing over the desert in California has wondered what was hidden behind the gaunt hills that was hidden beaind the gaunt hills that stand out, stark and shadowless, against the horizon. Few men have made the journey, either on the Santa Fe or Southern Pacific, without a de-sire to explore some portion of the wilderness. There is ever present the intangible mystery—the silence and vastness of the sandy void—the wild, vastness of the sandy void—the wild, uninhabited, voiceless waste that may contain gold beyond a miser's dreams. These things exert a fascination over the traveler. He envies the prospector who, with his burros, stares at the train as it sweeps by. California are as different as the equator and the pole. They are separate lands, divided by mountain ranges; one guarded by the fierce heat and mystery of the desert; the other bound and thrall to the ocean for the air it breathes, the water it drinks and the climate it enjoys. San Diego county, more than any other county in the State, presents these sharp contrasts between east and west. Its eastern half is a desert as blank and uninviting as Sahara itself. Its western portion is a garden of valleys, running down to the sea, peopled and prosperous.

The wonders of the desert of San Diego county are such that some one has truly said that "hell is not far below the surface." Another saying is that this portion of the earth is either the nonage of a new world or the dotage of an old one. The earth is subject to testy fits of shaking, little spats of temper and spitefulness that show themselves in renewed activity at the mud volcano, an unwonted turbulence of the lake of ink, the sudden appearance of a geyser in the little mountain cañons, or an apparent tilting of the surface so as to send the Rio Colorado or its tributaries racing up hill.

A land is strange, indeed, that can show soil 400 feet deep, without a boulder, and yet without enough grass upon the surface of half a million acres of this soll to feed a miner's burro. It is an odd land, sure enough, that lies several hundreds of feet below found for their apparent overturning of all nature's laws. The desert proper remains the desert, rain or shine, overflow or drougth. But the New River Valley, so-called, which consists of about 500,000 acres of alluvium, entirely free of sand and rock, is another thing. It is right in the heart of the desert, but it is not desert itself. It is merely soil without water, and lying under the lidless glare of the sun, Nothing whatever grows upon it until the overflow of the Colorado fructifies it, and then grass, corn and hemp spring up at the rate of over twelve inches per day, until their maturity. Melon vines actually seem to crawl along the ground. The astonishing fertility of over twelve inches per day, until their maturity. Melon vines actually seem to crawl along the ground. The astonishing fertility of soil comb'ned with tropical heat, works such wonders that the temptation becomes strong to abandon accurate description and resort to the seven-league boots of the imagination.

Going down to the desert camp from Campo, through a mountain pass as rough and rugged as nature could well make it, the traveler sees before him a stretch of whitish-yellow, shimmering waste, extending beyond the eye's range to the eastward. The waves of heat rising incessantly play pranks with the vision, rendering distant mountains near this moment and far the next. With the exception of hillocks and furrows of wind-driven sand, nothing of moment is to be seen water be found in such abundance as in the Colorado River. The problem here becomes one of simply taking the water at hand and spreading it over the land.

The mud volcanoes, mud springs and other terrifying indications of subterranean combustion are found in the southern portion of the desert, on the slope of the Cocopah Mountains. The desert surrounding the volcanoes is desert sure enough—a desolate stretch of sand. There is nothing lost to mankind in this display of hidden fires. The workshop is better there, in fact, than somewhere nearer civilization. And it matters little, either, whether the fires are old primeval blazes smoldering down to ashes, or whether they are the beginning of a confiagration that shall swallow the globe; for in either event an ordinary lifetime would not count. The white men of that region—they are cow-punchers, and plain "hell." The Cocopahs, with coula freedom of fancy, call it "crust of hell" and "home of the devil." The Indians believe that whenever the mud springs and numerous geysers of sulphur display unusual activity. The Indians believe that whenever the mud springs and numerous geysers of sulphur display unusual activity. HOW NUMBER FOUR WAS SAVED BY ITS WARNING.

N MY early days I had been a railroad telegrapher; but my aspirations for a wider sphere of action had led me into the city, where I tent ten years in the service of one the large commercial telegraph comminies. During this period I managed years in a well-known medical cologie, and qualified myself before the tate board of examiners for the practice of my profession. To do this, together with the dangerous condition of the track, hampered the movements of trains considerably. Sitting at my table I had been listening in a varue way to the monotonous ticking of the instrument which kept the train dispatcher at the end of the various trains, and of other events of importance. Suddenly the block wire began to tick drowslly and the sound of my office call brought me to attention. I answered, and mechanically otted down on the train dispatcher at the end of the various trains, and of other events of importance. During this period I managed by some hard grinding to complete a course in a well-known medical col-lege, and qualified myself before the State board of examiners for the prac-tice of my profession. To do this, however, I had undergone a severe physical and mental strain, which made a rest and a change of scene in-perative before beginning the fight inperative before beginning the fight for success which I knew must follow. Accordingly, I sat down and wrote to my old friend, Ross, who was division operator on the great trunk line where I had spent my early years. To him I the report did not come. Then I heard the dispatcher call up Rockwood on the wire and say:

"G. A. No. 4."

"Not yet," was the reply.
Five minutes later the dispatcher called Rockwood again and asked the stereotyped question:

"Any sign No. 4?"

"No."

Evidently the dispatcher was getting uneasy. Cause for uneasiness there undoubtedly was. The road between Coal Tower and Rockwood was particularly dangerous. For almost the entire distance it ran between the mountain and the river, so that it was exposed on one side to the danger of falling rocks and earth and on the other to the destructiveness of the now swell as I, and the lapse of time since No. 4 had passed Coal Tower raised a strong probability that something had gone wrong.

"Get the foremen out," said he, the dispatcher and told him that the searching expedition had started. Rockwood "broke in" to say that there were no signs of No. 4. I alled my pipe and tried to patiently await the foreman's return.

But I was restless, Every few minutes I walked to the window, opened it and stuck out my head to listen. For almost the entire distance it ran between the mountain and the river, so that it was exposed on one side to the danger of falling rocks and earth and on the other to the destructiveness of the now swollen current. This the dispatcher knew as well as I, and the lapse of time since No. 4 had passed Coal Tower raised a strong probability that something had gone wrong.

At the end of twenty minutes No. 4 had not yet made its appearance at Rockwood. The dispatcher called me again and I answered.

"Get the foreman out," said he, "have him get what help he can, take the handcar and find out what's wrong with No. 4."

"O K." I said.

Then grabbing my hat I left the office to take care of itself and started on a brisk run across the field to the foreman's house. I pounded violently on the door and shouted as loud as I could. Then I heard a window raised and the foreman stuck his head out of the aperture.

"Halloo!" he cried; "what's up?"
"Harrisville wants you right away," I shouted back. "Come over to the office and bring Jake with you; you'll need help."

"What's the trouble, Billy?"

I heard the labored breathing of some one on the stairs. In another moment the face of Barney, the foreman, appeared above the railing, but so white and drawn that I scarcely recognized it. He sat down in a chair, panting hard. Then I saw that he was bleeding profusely from a cut on the arm. "What in the name of Heaven is wrong. Barney?" I asked. "Where's your hand car, and how did you find No. 4?"

wrong. Barney?" I asked. "Where's your hand car, and how did you find No. 4?"

"The handcar's in the river, Billy. I guess No. 4's there, too. Jake and me stopped off on this side."

"What do you mean, man?" I cried impatiently.

"I mean that there's no railroad left at the Rock. It's in the river—ties, rails, train and all. We saw the washout just in time to jump; the car went over the bank. Jake hurt his leg—couldn't walk. I came back as fast as I could to tell you. Must have hurt myself, too," he went on, noticing the blood for the first time.

Turning to the wire, I steadied my nerves as best I could, and transmitted this message to the dispatcher:

"To E. J. McC.: Foreman just returned; reports bad washout at the Rock. Both tracks have been washed into the river, and No. 4 has evidently gone with them."

A period of excitement ensued. The dispatcher's effect was thrown into

A period of excitement ensued. The dispatcher's office was thrown into confusion. The wires fairly sang with orders holding trains here and calling for help there. The superintendent was called out of bed. He, with several mihor officials, a lineman and a telegraph operator, started for the scene of the disaster. Meanwhile, all the available working gangs, shop hands, etc., were got together and held in readiness to start for the washout at a moment's notice. Those of us who were forced to remain at our posts settled back and waited for what was to come.

What did come was so unexpected that I shall never forget the feeling of consternation, mingled with the sense of relief, that overcame me; for in the midst of the universal commotion, when everybody was horror-stricken at the fate of the lost train, when relief trains and wrecking crews were assembling and officials were flying to the scene with all speed, an engine hauling a long train of sleepers pulled up to the Tower from the west. While the wheels were yet turning the engineer, carrying a blazing torch, leaped from the engine and hurried up into the office. I turned to meet him expectantly, for no train, with the exception of No. 4, which had passed and was now supposed to be in the river, was known to be within many miles of Coal Tower.

"Bud," the engineer said, as he appeared at the head of the stairs, "tell Harrisville that the engine of No. 4 broke down about two miles west of here, but that I have made temporary repairs and will take the train in."

"No. 4!" I cried, in astonishment.

"Why, No. 4 passed here more than an hour ago. She's in the river now."

"Say, what asylum did you escape from anyway, young fellow. No. 4 is outside here, lying high and dry on the rails."

"Do you mean to say that No. 4

"Do you mean to say that No. 4 didn't pass here at 3:22?" I asked eagerly. A possibility was beginning to dawn upon my mind.
"Pass nothing," the big engineer snorted. "I guess you've been pounding your ear. I've been lying three miles west of here, fixing up that cussed engine to take us in."
"Well," I said, "if No. 4 didn't pass here at 3:22, her ghost did, that's all."
Then I told him in detail the events of the night—how a train, which I supposed to be No. 4, had passed Coal Tower, but had never passed Rockwood; how the foreman had started in search of her, and had discovered the washout, and how he had returned wood; how the foreman had started in search of her, and had discovered the washout, and how he had returned with the news that No. 4 was in the river.

He listened attentively until I had finished.

"Well, that is queer," he admitted; "I suppose when the 'old man' gets here he will raise the devil with you. All the same, it's a good thing for everybody that you did go to sleep and dream that No. 4 had passed; otherwise she would indeed have taken the plunge."

Inside of twenty-four hours the washout had been bridged temporarily and trains were moving as usual. But I did no more railroading at Coal Tower.

WILDEST TOWN IN AFRICA.

BEIRA, DOORWAY TO THE GOLD FIELDS OF THE EAST COAST.

By a Special Contributor.

EIRA is the fourth stop on the left as you go up from Cape Town to Zanzibar. It grew yesterday. Today it is the wildest town in the world.

Imagine, if you can, a squad of Bret Harte's representatives from Poker Flat or Roaring Camp, knocking el-bows with reformed cannibals from Madagascar, Malays from Singapore, Madagascar. Parsees from India, Jews from Moscow, Yankees from Massachusetts, demireps from Hamburg, half a dozen mission-aries, crooks from Johannesburg, merchants from Paris and Berlin, five hun-dred Englishmen, less than that many Chinese coolies and a pinch of Japanese in the shape of almond-eyed tea girls imported by an Arabian slave dealer. Keep in mind then that all this figaro is ruled by a quick-tempered, dark-featured, sensitive Portuguese from Lisbon, with the aid of a thousand lit-tle soldiers, who will accept a bribe or jab a sword into you with equal alac-rity, who hate a real white man just a shade more than they detest the real black, and purposely limit their knowl-edge of English to the one word—"ar-rested."

That is Beira. Cecil Rhodes found the place so interesting last year that he preferred staying in a shanty with an American cowboy watching people from all over the earth get into trouble "rather than journey to Umtall, sixty miles away, where Sir Alfred Milner, the newly-appointed British Governor-General, was waiting to meet him. The great colonizer probably regarded events with other than feelings of mirth, for if any one can be held responsible for this little bunch of humanity hanging on the edge of Africa in the unhealthiest spot known, it is Cecil Rhodes, the explorer of Central South Africa.

The South African squatter has his

In company with Ralph Jewell, a Californian, who had spent some years in the Transvaal, I went to the Beach Hotel, took dinner and afterward, in company with an Englishman, named Harris, strolled up the main street, to cast an eye about for some means of making a livelihood. While holding a discussion on ways and means, for the three of us possessed but a single Kruger sixpence, we were interrupted by two gendarmes. Grabbing me by the arms they pointed up the street and jabbered that familiar word, "arrested."

ARRESTED BY THE PORTUGUESE POLICE.

"Don't make a move, stranger," called out a man who wore high cavalry boots, as he ran up to us. "You'll make the mistake of your life. Take my word for it, there's only one law here, and that's for the Portuguese. An Englishman or American has no protection. I see you were just going to knock these fellows down. If you do they'll cut you up. You want to go along to the tronk with them, for they say there's a warrant out for the man with the white Alpine straw."

There was no alternative, and cursown reason for camping in a desert and flirting with eternity in the shape of deadly fever germs. The glitter of gold is his load-stone. It is that which has turned the tide of emigration north-ward; Johannesburg and Kimberly no longer afford opportunities to make easy money, and great confidence is put in Cecil Rhodes' promise of good times and quick fortunes in Rhodesia.

These good times have thus far given no sign of materializing, but that vast unsettled portion of the populace, whom Mr. Kipling calls "The Gertlemen Rovers Abroad." nevertheless continues to mass on the outskirts of this country, where a grand rush may be made to Mashonaland or Matabeleland when gold is discovered.

In view of the fact that an expert American engineer has just completed a tramp over the whole territory, examining all the geological formation carefully, and pronounced the country quite worthless from a mineral standpoint, it is almost pathetic to see this confiding population decimated each day, but as constantly reinforced. If in the end it is doomed to bitter disappointment, Mr. Rhodes will have much to answer for, since not only are the floaters and ne'er-do-wells flocking northward, but mechanics, tradesmen, professional men and laborers are coming with their families.

ing the day I bought such a conspicuous hat, I marched to jail, accompanied by my two friends, all wondering for what I could be apprehended in this far-away corner of the earth. An important little man in gold trimmings finally appeared and showed me a document containing my name. The warrant, he explained, was, however, of such a peculiar nature that he could not understand it. Another commissaire who shortly arrived was equally puzzled. The two seemed on the point of coming to blows over the warrant, when the one wearing the most tinsel grabbed the parchment and tore it in small pieces.

Thinking that I might throw some light on the matter, I ventured to rise and walk forward, whereupon both officials gazed at me with pity, which immediately turned to frenzy and, shaking their fists, screamed some orders. Three policemen rushed me to a corner, looked at me very fiercely and then stood by with drawn swords until another order brought out a platoon of gendarmes. By them I was conducted once more down through the main street of Beira.

We brought up at a big square corrugated-iron building bearing on it the legend, "Armagem Alfandaagdo," which I took to be the proprietor's name. It turned out to mean "government bonded warehouse," and inside of it presided a short fat Portuguese-German who represents the United States of America as Consular agent in Beira. man in one hundred ever gets any further and not a few leave their bones to bleach on the quicksands there. The long, for with bread at one shilking a loaf, money evaporates like smoke, and Beira is a bad place to be stranded in. I had the good fortune when arrested on a recent visit there to elicit the sympathy of two dare-devils whose reputation as boxers and men of action some what dampened Portuguese brimstone and thereby easily obtained my release. This was pure luck, however, for ordinarily a victim is heavily fined, and, frightened haste and in walked two of the most powerfully built men I have ever seen.

One was tall and smooth-faced, with keen grey eyes, rather angular in finish, but hardy looking. He wore a white duck suit and moved about lightly om his feet like a trained athlete.

"I hear there's an American arrested here," he said, walking up very close to the consular agent and taking no pains to conceal his clenched fist; gnarled like a hickory knot. "Well, you know I'm an American, and I just want to see fair play. Are we going to see it, captain?" turning to his companion.

The latter stood about six feet three inches in height and was a superb animal. A loose flannel shirt open at the breast disclosed a pair of pectoral muscles that seemed ready to burst, and his shoulders shut off a considerable slice of landscape. A tawny mustache dropped at either corner of his mouth, fair curly hair covered his head, and a pair of very blue eyes showed alternate, mirth and sternness. He was one whom a man would envy, an enemy fear and a woman love.

To the other's question he simply folded his arms, drew himself up an inch or so, and looking around with a light sarcastic smile said with an umistakable English drawl: "I fancy that will not be a difficult job," "I dom't know enough about law," said the American, addressing me, "to understand your case, but Capt. Foraker will just step across the way and get Sefor Figueira to join this indaaba."

The señor was the only lawyer in Beira, and after a short drill in calisthenics he convinced the commissaire, the police and the audience that I had been illegally agreested, declared it an outrage, and insisted on bringing a sult for damages against some one.

"This is Capt. Foraker," he said, introducing the other giant, "late of Her Majesty's Heavy Dragoons, soldier and sailor, nigger chief, lumber expert, and the best fighter in Beira. Gentlemen, step to the bar and have a sensation." Half a dozen men in Khaki suits who were draped over Madeira chairs on the veranda woke up hastily at this and answered the invitation, all drinking to my release.

"You must not mind being arrested," said the superintendent of the Beira Rallway, who was shadowed at all times by a huge darky called Promised Land, utilized for flagging trains when by any mischarge one happened to keep on the track long enough to reach Beira.

"Nearly every one gets arrested here sooner or later. You see it's this way. Portugal is practically mortgaged to England and we're going to have this country some time. We must get Delegoa Bay and Beira. We need them in our business. Well, the Colonial Office wants to soft soap the Portuguese and make the deal in a gentle way, so it does not come down on them when an Englishman is outraged here, with the consequence that a white man cannot look sidewise at one of these puppet policemen without being stuck like a pig. The British Consul says his hands are tied and it's a shame how we're treated."

BEIRA A NECESSARY DOORWAY.

This is the secret of the frictiom twixt populace and soldiery in Beira. The town itself is not worth two common balls to the English, but it is the key to South Central Africa, and England needs it. If you glance at the map of South Africa you will see that with the exceptiom of Cape Colony, Natal and the little shore of Zululand, Great Britain owns absolutely no seacoast. Germany and Portugal are supreme both on the east and west. The Transvaal is blocked off high and dry, and will remain so, for Portugal dare not sell her Delagoa Bay.

The situation of Beira makes it valuable. It lies 2500 miles north of Cape Town, 600 miles south of Zanzibar and a fast steamer makes the run across to Madagascar in twenty-four hours. Excepting Delagoa Bay, it furnishes the only good harbor in a stretch of 1000 miles. One is the natural outlet to the Transvaal; the other for Rhodesia. They are both becoming busy ports.

South African passenger traffic which formerly was carried almost entirely by the English lines from Southampton to Cape Town and Durban by way of Madeira and St. Helena, has been switched off to some extent now, and the favorite passage is by way of the German-East African line. This takes one through the Mediterranean Sea, the Suez Canal, and down the east coast, touching at Zanzibar, Dar-El-Salaam, Chinde, Beira, Inhambane, Delagoa Bay and Durban. A French line goes over nearly the same route, taking in Madagascax and Mauritius.

In addition to these ships the long black steamers of the British India line put in there every week, bringing from the Orient every species of humanity; and there are several coast steamers an addition to these ships the long black steamers of the British India line put in there every week, bringing from the Orient every species of humanity; and there are several coast steamers which do a good trade with Madagascar in meats and vegetables.

Beira has been selected for this probationary gathering, because it is cheaper to reach than the inland towns of Bulawayo and Salisbury. Mozambique is only ninety miles wide at this point, so that British territory can be reached in a few days trip by way of a little railroad which is in process of construction.

A CITY OF TORRID SWAM

torrid, enervating heat, and corrugated iron shanties. For water front there is a large bay into which flows the Pungwee River; the Grand Plaza is a huge swamp where decaying vegetable matter nourishes deadly miasma. The country for a long distance inland is simply reclaimed seashore and is so low and flat that the tide goes up the river fifty-five miles, and if you dig one foot in the sand anywhere water bubbles up.

In addition to the iron shantles there are light weather-board houses, shipped out in pieces from Norway and Sweden; and or the Point, where life is more endurable, the well-to-do citizens have erected decent little villas. The life of the town is centered in two hotels, one at either end, and every one takes a personal interest in the rivalry between them. The Beach is situated near the boat landing on the bay and is owned by Roland Creech, ex-Sheriff of Butte, Mont. The other rejoices in the name of Royal and has for its proprietor a ferret-faced Frenchman, who knows the game of faro.

As a stranded American with good intentions, Mr. Reeder, who is a brother-in-law of the ex-Sheriff, insisted on my accepting the hospitality of the Beach Hotel until the next German steamer arrived, although there was no outlook for remuneration, and I was a total stranger to him. "You're a long ways from the Bowery," he said, "and I know you want to get back. But look out for these little policemen."

ways from the Bowery," he said, "and I know you want to get back. But look out for these little policemen."

A BALL AND A FIGHT.

I had an opportunity the first night of witnessing a little fray that well illustrated the doings of the police. The Governor held a grand reception in the Royal Hotel, to which all the prominent Portuguese, the French, English and the German merchants had been invited. In spite of the mercury drifting about high in the nineties every one came in immaculate evening dress, for the English customs have taken hold there and the women wore their most elaborate toilets.

Half of Beira, from 9 o'clock until 10, blocked the street watching the arrival of guests, for only at night is it possible to remain out of doors long on account of the extreme heat.

The ball was well worth seeing, for it looked like a pageant in the time of Nero, such was the contrast between the beautiful women in very décollete gowns, sparkling with jewels, and the stalwart blacks, clad only in a jack strap who trundled up the little palanquin cars, decorated for the occasion in garish bunting.

As each car unloaded its burden a captain of police would hurry it off to make room for another, facilitating the movements of the rear guard with the flat of his sword.

In the crowd there were constant blckerings and half a dozen knockdowns occurred, but when the police arrived they could find no one to arrest. Sneers and jeers at the expense of, the soldiery were indulged in, too, and by the time all the guests had arrived, the little fellows were bursting with rage and hankering to cut loose on an Englisman. When the opportunity came they lost no time in making use of it. Twenty police had been formed in two lines across the sidewalk, forming a sort of gauntlet, through which the guests walked into the building. This was maintained in a straggling fashion long after the festivities had commenced and the crowd dispersed; still pedestrians were ordered to walk out in the street.

A Scotchman, named Muirhead, a plumber in Be

ENGLISHMEN TO THE RESCUE. ENGLISHMEN TO THE RESCUE.

Cries of "murder" and "help, Englishmen," brought out men from the

While others were crying "All Englishmen lend a hand," "They're killing an Englishman," and "Its black against white, boys," Foraker chucked away his cue and grabbed the first Portuguese he reached, throwing him bodily about fiteen feet. The rapid "chunk" of his fists was music and he worked them like a machine. He had almost reached Muirhead when the blast of a bugle was heard and around the corner came a platoon of soldiers from the barracks, half clad, and with the corner came a platfoll of solders from the barracks, half clad, and with fixed bayonets. To remain longer under the fire of Martini rifles which was about to follow would have been sure death; so the relief party retreated to the billiard room and held an indigna-the billiard room and held an indignation meeting.

This availed nothing, for Muirhead spent the night in fail without having his wounds dressed and was carried home next day after paying a fine of £25. The British Consul refused to do anything, though petitioned by the English and American citizens.

Capt. Foraker was in for arming all the English and straightway assaulting the fail and was disgusted because no ome would follow his lead. He left the billiard room in a very bad humor, but after poking three or four blacks in the ribs to hear them whoop he re-gained his usual jollity. A STREET CAR FOR EVERY RESI-DENT.

DENT.

The streets of Beira are ten feet deep with sand, so it is impossible for a horse or ca to navigate there. Indeed, there is not a single horse in the town and only one carriage. This belongs to the Governor, who has it brought out of a shed once a month and ostentatiously washed by his black boys.

There is a street railway, however, on which the blacks are utilized as motive power. The gauge on this road is two and one-half feet, the rails having a single flange, and the iron ties laid on heavy boards to keep them from sinking out of sight. Every family that can afford it has the road built to the front door, where they can get in their private car and be trundled about on business or pleasure by four natives. These fellows push the car along at a lively clip, their ebony backs glistening in the heat rays, and making a great hubbub.

The native African, particularly the Zulu, is simply a big boy surcharged with animal spirits, and the Beira runners always pretend that they are horses or some other animal. They kick and champ and paw the sand, shaking their kafer charms and emit a peculiar whistle. If you encourage their efforts, they nearly lift the car off the track and exclaim with great pride, "Ninkum Mafuto Baas." (We are flying like birds, master.)

Most of the cars are topped with little pagodas to note the car of the cars are topped with little pagodas.

Most of the cars are topped with little pagodas to protect you from the sun, and those built especially for the ladies to travel in have little curtains down the side. By tight squeezing four persons can sit on the two seats, which face each other, and in the open cars a big green umbrella serves for protection to all.

UNIVERSAL ENGLISH PIANO.

There was a piano at the Beach Ho-tel. Isn't it a peculiar fact that in what-ever part of the earth you find Englishmen, there you will be sure to se some species of plano? It is part of some species of plano? It is part of the colonizer's stock in trade. In the remotest sections of Natal, where a few English settlers were huddled together, in the heart of black land, we never failed to find a plano.

Capt. Foraker struck a few chords on this one, and in a few moments the room was thronged with a motley crowd, all roaring the chorus of "O, the soldiers of the Queen, and down one block there is a bloomin' row."

In one of the breathing speels a loud slap was heard, and the singing was suddenly stopped. "Carney and Rogers are going to fight," screamed a little French Jew, who delighted in seeing other persons get into trouble. "Let's see it."

In the bar-room a ring had been formed, and two smooth-faced, boyish-looking, thick-set chaps, who had been quietly shaking dice with each other all evening, were moving about in true pugilistic style. Presently they mixed it up and for six rounds boxed very roughly, but with some science. The fight was interrupted by a black boy, who announced that the guard was coming on the midnight rounds. The two fellows were hastily pushed out into the court and there resumed fighting after the guard had passed.

"What are they fighting about?" I asked Capt. Foraker.

The hotel is built in the shape of a quadrangle, two stories high, with verandas on all sides, and the women guests crowded on the upper verandas der. andling to have the cruel fight stopped. Six more rounds were fought, however, before it was finally broken up. Both men were then so bruised and bleeding that they could hardly see and they were put to bed in a cot three feet wide, where they fell asleep, clasped in each other's arms.

"Isn't this the greatest town on asth?" chuckled Capt. Foraker to me as he emerged, wringing a bloody handkerchief. "Nowhere else could you have so much fun in one night? These

When he proposed this plan to the government, this and the idea of fencing in wild seals, it was rejected at first with scorn. Later it was accepted and since it has been put into practice the conscienceless pelage sealers have been put to it to make a living.

Just recently Joseph Murray, who was this quiet but most important factor in the seal question, returned to his home in Fort Collins, Colo., after ten years in Alaska. He brought his report with him, but before he could present it he was suddenly stricken with paralysis and died on October 4. October 4.

The first step taken toward conserving the herds was the annual branding of the female seals. This experi-ment was suggested to Mr. Murray's mind by the custom in vogue in Colo-rado and other States of the West of branding of cattle, with which he was well acquainted. The purpose to be attained was to make the skins of the female seals valueless for com-mercial uses, and thus render the animals immune from the ravages of the pelagic sealers. The idea was rewas finally given to have the experiwas finally given to have the experiment tried. Those opposing it expressed a fear that if the branding did not absolutely destroy the life of the seal, it would impair its reproductive faculties. The experiment was first tried upon adult seals. A full-grown seal with a pup at her side, was first to be branded, and the iron was brought to a white heat and the animal branded to the very quick, yet but little pair was manifested by he favored the writer with two interviews, and talked quite freely upon the subject of the seal fisheries. killed on St. Paul and St. George Islands, composing the Pribiloff group in Bering Sea, and upon which are located the only American seal rookeries of any moment, there were killed 15,000 seals. Last year there were killed on these islands 30,000 seals. During the ten years between 1879 and 1889 there were killed annually on an average of 100,000 seals. This year Russia and Japan, the only two countries besides the United States owning seal rookeries, killed only 30,000 seals; so that the entire seal crop of the world this year is less than one-half that of the United States ten years ago. This refers, of course, to the legitimate seal fishing. Pelagic seal fishing is still practiced, although having suffered great diminution from the regulations entered by the United States of killed on St. Paul and St. George diminution from the regulations en-forced by the United States, as to open-sea sealing, and the methods open-sea sealing, and the methods adopted for the preservation of our seal herds upon the Pribiloff Islands. It is estimated by those best able to judge that since pelagic sealing began more than 600,000 seals have been taken from the open sea in Bering Sea and the North Pacific Ocean. This means that 400,000 breeding female seals have been killed, that 300,000 pup seals have starved to death because their mothers were killed, and that 400,000 pup seals yet unborn were destroyed. In view of these facts it is not difficult to detect the cause of the large falling off in the annual seal product.

The entire back of the animal, from hip to shoulder, is gridironed with deeply-burned scars, so that the skin is rendered absolutely valueless for the manufacture of furs, and the animal is left to breed by the

And there is but little doubt but that the entire American fisheries would have been depleted had not could be driven and which could be closed by means of gates. The bachelor seals were driven into these enclosures about the first of Augus and mept until the first of October and having plenty of fresh water to disport in and by nature requiring no food, were kept in good condition until the open season had expired, when they were let out and allowed to frequent the open season again. These methods have been so effective in their results that the pelagic sealers have become well night discouraged and offer to give up the business providing the government will reimburse them for the cost of their vessels and outfits. This our government would be willing to do, it is said, were the government of Great Britain to guar-antee that pelagic scaling by any of its subjects should forever be aban-

MAKING ARTIFICIAL ROCK ROOK-ERIES.

A very careful investigation was made of the seal rookeries of the United States and Russia by a joint commission of the United States, Great Britain and Canada in 1896, to ascertain their true condition and to study the habits of the fur seal. The commission, in behalf of the United States, was in charge of David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, of California. other member of the comunission for the United States was Dr. Lucas of the United States National Museum, who made a careful investigation of diseases of the scal. Dr. Lucas found that the death of many seals was caused by the prevalence of a minute worm in the intestines of the animal. No direct remedy could be devised, but it was found that those seals living upon rookeries that were well supplied with rocks were nearly free from the trouble. So, at the expense of much time and labor, the special agent caused to be broken up and hauled from the adjoining bluffs, large quantities of rock, which were scattered about over those rookeries which had hitherto been nothing less than beds of almost pure sea sand, and in proof of the correctness. than beds of almost pure sea sand And in proof of the correctness of the hypothesis set up by the investi-gators, the health of the herds fre-quenting these sandy rookeries began at once to be improved, and the dis-

ARUNDEL CASTLE.

AN AMERICAN GIRL VISITS THE HOME OF THE DUKE OF NORFOLK.

By a Special Contributor.

EW YORK, Nov. 24.—Pascal once said that "past events cast shadows which reach to the end of time." To an American girl, her imagination filled wth the hty deeds of the middle ages, such ows seemed to envelop her with glamor and charm as she found elf one brilliant summer afternoning beneath the Norman archway he leads to the park of Arundel An hour later we joined his grace with her imagination filled wth the doughty deeds of the middle ages, such shadows seemed to envelop her with their glamor and charm as she found herself one brilliant summer afternon driving beneath the Norman archway which leads to the park of Arundel

We skirted the moat which encircles the castle on the three sides, and drove across the sonorous drawbridge and beneath the portcullis, just as Edward I had done hundreds of years before. As we drove into the great quadrangle, large enough to hold 1000 mounted men, and the clatter of our smart nineteenth century wagonette sent echoes clanging against the en-closing walls, it needed but a slight effort of imagination to fancy ourselves accompanied by plumed knights in armor, fresh from tourney or battle-

But one dreams of the middle ages vanished as we entered the Gothic portal, and our kind host met us at the foot of the great double staircase which fronts the main entrance; his simple, cordial welcome dissipating any simple, cordial welcome dissipating any strangeness one might naturally feel among such unusual surroundings. This interesting man was Henry Fitzalan-Howard, fifteenth Duke of Norfolk, K.G.P., C.J.P., Earl of Arundel. Earl of Norfolk, earl marshal, chief marshal and chief butler of England; premier duke and earl, next to blood royal; K.G.G. of order of Christ, and the only man in England who by hereditary right can sit in the presence of the Queen with covered head. ered head.

OUR HOST.

The Duke is 50 years old at the resent time, but looks much younger. He is of medium height, with a splen-a less ascetic and arduous one than he.

An hour later we joined his grace on the terrace for "5 o'clock tea," where were assembled the rest of the small house party, Hon. and Mrs. Maxwell-Scott of Abbotsford, Mr. Balfour and Fr. Francis, the priest attached to the castle. Mrs. Maxwell-Scott is the great-grand-daughter of Sir Walter Scott, her husband having taken her name by special act of Parliament. She is young, charming and a niece of the present Duke, and as a child, much of her time was spent at Arundel Castle, as her father married for his second wife the Duke's sister. Mrs. Maxwell-Scott bears a striking resemblance to Sir Walter. The familiar, drooping blue eyes look out from beneath that wide, full brow, which is so like that of Chantry's head of the great novelist that it might have served as a model.

We gathered about the smoking samovar for tea, and, while discussing the scones and cheesestraws, the Duke told us something of our surroundings. THE CASTLE.

"Arundel" he said "was begun by

"Arundel," he said, "was begun by Alfred the Great, and was by him given to the great Earl Godwin, who was himself a sort of King, having many thousands of vassals attached to his fief. It is a certainty that it was part of Earl Godwin's vast domain, and that after the conquest in 1066, it was granted to Roger de Montgomery. But Henry I setzed it and left it to his widow, Adeliza, who afterward married one Albina. He, by tenure, became the first Earl of Arundel. It is a fact that it figures in Doomsday book, and must have been of importance, commanding, as it did, the entrance to the navigable Arun. It was besieged by King Henry in 1102, and again by King Stephen in 1139, but never successfully till 1643, when it surrendered, after seventeen days' siege. It was then seized and partially destroyed, for the astute monarch thought it wise to many thousands of vassals attached to He is of medium height, with a splendid head set squarely on broad shoulders. His dark hair and pointed beard are slightly tinged with gray, and from beneath a wide, low forehead a pair of brown eyes gleam; thoughtful, serious, yet full of merriment. His whole face is one of strength and gentleness, yet despite the latter one readily realizes that "the blood of all the Howard's" flows in his veins. He is a man of whom a manding, as it did, the entrance to the entrance to the order less invaling blood again by King Henry in 1102, and again by King Stephen in 1139, but never successfully till 1648, when it surrendered, after seventeen days' slege. child would ask a favor or caress, but with whom few persons would venture a liberty.

In 1877 he married Lady Flora Hastings, daughter of Lord Donington. This ardently-loved wife died in giving birth to their only child, who, though heir to one of the most splendid heritages in the world, is both deaf, dumb and blind, and though now 17 years old never meets any one save his father, whom he passionately loves. Since his wife's death, the Duke has withdrawn much from society, but devotes his time and powers to alleviating the misfortunes of his boy, and the many duties incumbent on his po-walls has been dyed in blood, and every rood of those peaceful lawns has been tramped by armed men. From those narrow slits high in the towers boiling water and melted tar were poured down on the writhing enemies below, and these very trees proved shelter for the arbuesquers, in shirts of mail, whose poisoned arrows clattered as ineffectually as rain against the walls."

The talk drifted to other things, and soon we parted to dress for dinner. My room in the north tower, looked far over the Arun Valley, where the spires of Chichester Cathedral shot their slender length into the twilight. Beyond gleamed the sea, with the Isle of Wight on the horizon. It is called "Eleanor's, room." after the wife of the seventh Duke.

freedom of the morning meal, at which we all seated ourselves, regardless of precedence. Great "four-in-hand" chafing dishes stood on the side tables, from which the men served the women, and in the center of the table were the coffee and tea on a silver turn-table, from which each one helped himself, as his or her taste dictated. Plans were made for the day, and we gladly acceded to the Duke's invitation to see something of the park. An hour later we found him on the terrace, where peacocks strutted to and fro in the sunshine. Roses clambered over the mar-settled between us, and the following autumn we were married in the private chapel here with the blessing of Cardinal Newman, and drove away for our honeymoon at Abbotsford, in the white coach, drawn by four white horses, which always performed a like service for all Arundel brides."

Dinner was served in the great dining hall, 50 feet long by 30 wide. The table glittering with silver and flowers and soft candle light, made a circle of brightness, round which the servants in plush, powdered hair and silk stockings, moved with deft dignity. It was a merry meal, full of stories and interesting anecdote. The Duke called our attention to the large stained glass window at the end, in which his greatparents' portraits represent Solomon and the Queen of Sheba at a banquet His grace quaintly remarked that it was hardly flattering to the Queen of Sheba, as his ancestress had been famous for her absence of good looks.

After dinner we adjourned to the "baron's hall." where the men informally smoked as we drank our coffee. This room is of noble proportions; 70 feet long, with its curiosly wrought roof of Spanish chestnut nearly 40 feet above the stone pavement. A series of stained glass windows of much beauty, in which the armorial bearings of the Howards, Fitzalans Montgomerys are emblazoned fill one side, and opposite hang ancestral portraits and trophies of the chase. A fire blazed on the great hearth, under its hood of chiseled stone. Palms and rugs, hanging lamps and luxurious couches served to soften and modernize the somewhat grim splendor of the room, whose groined, stone ceiling and worn pavement seemed rather a fitting background for rushlights and armored figures.

A GREAT ESTATE.

A GREAT ESTATE

The next morning I was awakened by the chapel bell ringing for matins, and I hurried down to find the other whose existence was an inconvenience. At one end the water flows smoothly contains one of the finest organs in England. The morning sunshine streamed through the open windows to the altar, where hung the drooping, pathetic Christ, exquisitely wrought from a bit of wood of the Spanish armada. After a few simple words from Fr. Francis, and a benediction on the coming day, we went out between the rows of standing sentants, quite ready for our breakfast which awaited us, in the "morning-room." This is a small apartment hung in gay chintzes, with long windows opening on the lawn. According to the English custom, there were no servants present to mar the ble balustrade, and below stretched lawns as free from leaf or twig as o drawing-room floor. At the foot of the steps bath chairs awaited us, drawn by tiny donkeys in gay trapping.

A DAIRY AND OWLERY.

We passed down the graveled paths, through the rose gardens to the greenthrough the rose gardens to the greenhouses, which cover many acres and contain every known palm, fern and orchid. Birds flew to and fro, and fountains tossed feathery spray in the midst of what seemed a shadowy tropical forest. Then we skirted Swanburne Lake, where swans drifted below the overhanging willows, to the dairy, which is almost as famous as is the castle itself. The main buildings are modern and of considerable size, but the old dairy presented a charming picture. Its stone walls are capped by thatch, which is itself covered with a tangled mass of towering creepers.
doves circled in the sunshine. Right through the front entrance a clear stream of water runs over a rocky bed, passing out at the rear to the lake.
Within all was dark, cool and spotlessly clean. On either side rows of bed, passing out at the rear to the lake. Within all was dark, cool and spotlessly clean. On either side rows of milk pens were ranged on stone shelves, and at the farther end two milkmaids in white Normandy caps, short skirts and buckled shoes, were churning. With pretty courtesies, they offered us a taste after dipping their platters in the running stream at their feet. It was like a scene from Trianon, and we returned to the prosaic light outside reluctantly.

Crossing a rustic bridge we came to the castle mill, which is contemporary with Doomsday Book. There was no sound of clattering wheels as we stood looking down into its black depths, where, the Duke said, many human bones lie. It is of such depth that it was a favorite receptacle for those whose existence was an inconvenience. At one end the water flows smoothly over a dam, and from there runs peacefully through the meadows to the

they rolled their yellow eyes toward him in stately acknowledgment.

From the top of the keep to which we had climbed the Duke pointed out below us the parish church, and his own church which he built himself in the name of his son. The parish church dates from the conquest, and was for three centuries an "allen priory," consisting of but three monks and a prior. Then Fitzgerald, Earl of Arundel, founded the present edifice as a mausoleum for his family, but it was allowed to fall into dilapidation till restored to its original beauty by the present Duke, which is especially to his credit, as he is a Roman Catholic. For this reason he will not lie after death among the dead warriors and crusaders, whose effigies have for so many centuries escaped obliteration, but in the modern cathedral which he built himself.

The latter, built at a cost of $750,000, is of great beauty, and was dedicated by him to St. Ives, in the name of his son. His faith in a miraculous cure for this adored boy is without limit. Three times has the Duke gone with him on a "pilgrimage" to Lourdes in the Pyrenees, that the virgin might heal the boy, but, although so far without success, the Duke is in no wise discouraged.

heal the boy, but, although so far without success, the Duke is in no wise discouraged.

A few days after the rain was whirling in sheets against the windows, so I wandered into the library for a quiet hour. The great room is an imitation of a gothic cathedral, with ceilings and columns of mahogany, and is 120 feet long by 90 feet wide. At one end a spiral staircase leads to a gallery, which runs round the room half-way to the ceiling, the railing of which is of bronze of exquisite workmanship. Ten thousand volumes line the walls, some of which are of inestimable value. It was charming to prowl about among the many curios which fill the cabinets, fancying how the ghosts of many famous men might be spying at me from the dusky corners, but there was so much to be explained that I was glad, indeed, when the Duke came through the arras, saying that he had nothing better to do than to tell the story of it all.

FAMOUS RELICS.

actly as she left it. The room is an odd mixture of mediaeval and modern luxury. Tapestries of the tenth centry cover the stone walls. From the groined ceiling hang lamps of rough iron, while pretty knick-knacks from Bond street strew the tables, and a plano, backed by palms, fills one corner. Each object remains as it was when she last enjoyed this charming in nook—even to her lace pillow with its tangled bobbins, and the bit of unfinished embroidery. In spite of the song of birds from the treetops swaying beneath the windows in the summer wind, it seemed deserted and melancholy, as though all but memories were field.

choly, as though all but memories were fled.

Our last evening at Arundel was radiant with moonlight, and we spent it strolling to and fro on the terrace, enjoying the hush of the beautiful night. We had again been talking of the past, which seems so much more real in such a place than the present, and the Duke, after speaking of his love of association, and his belief in the strength of its influence, concluded with the remark: "Surely a past of honor is an incentive to honor." Glancing off across the park which lay for miles before us, its distant downs and misty glades serenely lovely in the mystical light, one could readily sympathize with his reverent pride and love for such a heritage. This modest gentleman in his conventional evening dress, sitting in the shadow of those mighty walls, had a background of power, distinction and heroic deeds which might well fill him with pride of race—a pride, which seems ignoble only to those who have no right to feel it. #### LAY SERMONS. 303 100

Have you ever considered, dear reader, what victory there is in surrender—in giving up your will to God's will? The result is momentous and immeasurable. It thrills eternity. water to boil he told many interesting things; how, during Cromwell's war, all those books had been carried at night to the dungeons below and covered with rubbish, so that in case the room was burned, they, at least, might escape. Then, unlocking a cabinet, he brought out an ivory box, which on opening disclosed a thin square of cambric, yellow with age. I took it in my fingers, but dropped it quickly enough when told it was the handker-chief of the Duke of Norfolk, who was executed for having befriended Mary, Queen of Scots. One who loved him had dipped this in his blood as it dropped from the scaffold. The thoughts which that bit of bloodstained cambric engendered, made me thankful for the peaceful security of that quiet room, and I sipped my team thanded appreciation of its warmth and safety.

The Duke then brought from a dis-that quiet room, and I sipped my tea with added appreciation of its warmth and safety.

The Duke then brought from a distant corner a number of curious old volumes, missals illuminated by the monks of the church below the castle walls. The leaves were of parchment covered with exquisite lettering, and borders of colored fruits and flowers in no wise dimmed by their great age.

We then left the circle of firelight to pass from one cabinet to another. There was a slipper of Queen Elizabeth's, which she had left behind her when on a visit—a daintily-shabby affair of flowered satin, in which she had doubtless danced "high and deposedly" in that very room with my Lord of Leicester, while her brilliant courtiers stood about in affected admiration.

Next to it lay the crucifix of martyred Queen Mary, encrusted with jewels and redolent of countless agonized prayers, sent before her execution to the Duke of Norfolk, who afterward lost his own life for having so faithfully served her.

On the wall hangs a chain corselet, sald to be that worn by Joan of Arc, and below it is the dagger drawn from Rizzio's breast when he fell murdered in the little room at Holyrood.

Over the fireplace hangs a superb portrait of the late duchess in court regalia—a brilliantly youthful figure, full of dignified charm. Before leaving Arundel I saw her boudoir in one of the castellated towers, from whose windows one catches a glimpse of the distant sea. Each object remains ex-of the good, of the right. It is a fur-ther rending of the dominion of Satan and the enlargement of the kingdom of God. It is a glorious victory for Him who died upon Calvary, that the world might be redeemed from the power of evil, and eternal alleluias ring through all the realms of the blest as it is accomplished. What beauty, what greatness, what grandeur there is in this surrender! Men stand upon the very heights of moral strength and spiritual supremacy, when they take their wills—the ruling force in human character, and lay them down at God's feet saying: "Not my will but Thine

And our heavenly Father appreciates this sacrifice, for when we do this He is ready to crown us His "children by

But in order for this complete surrender we must realize, first of all, our utter need of God's help to make us wholly willing to come to Him. The natural heart does not love God, nor is it inclined to seek Him. We must be willing to have Our-Father inchine our wills toward Him, asking Him to do it, to aid us in this surrender, which we would make of our whole being to Him. But God gives us all the credit of this surrender, when it is made, for He does not touch our freedom of action by inclining us toward Him. It is for us to make the final choice of good or evil, unhindered by any power, for the human will is the absolute and independent sovereign of character. It is this sovereignty of will that makes human action morally pleasing or displeasing to God. Man's personality rises from the existence of his will. Without that he would be a mere machine, acting only as he was acted upon; hence a creature without responsibility, free from obligation. But the possession of a will makes man "a being who has consciously an end and object of his own, and as such a person he is capable of seeking his own end, and of subordinating everything created and inferior to it, though he is made to find the true end of his own existence, only by seeking it in perfect colncidence with the great end."

He has been captive to sin, but with the surrender of his will to the divine will, he feels the galling chains drop from him, and grows exultant in the new spirit and life. He will recognize the great truth that "a supreme regard for God's will is coincident with his highest well-being; that his nature has been made to manifest God's nature, and his will to serve the divine will. To love and serve God, then, is to keep every separate part of our nature in harmony with every other part, and the whole in harmony with God. To be like God is to share this happiness. To sympathize with Him is to find perfection. Every part of man's nature, then, was meant to be perpetually crying out for the living God. And still the highest distinction we can think of is expressed when we say. "We shall be like Him," "we shall be satisfied when we awake in His likeness."

TRIBUTE TO THE HOG.

The Kansas Board of Agriculture Ascends Into Eloquence.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] Never did the "American hog" receive so grand a tribute as in the quarterly report of the Kansas Board of Agriculture. The secretary says the hog is a "debt-payer," a "mortgage-lifter" and the "buttress of prosperity." Moreover "high-class swine are unknown and impossible among low-class people. Kansas swine, coinage of Kansas grain and brain, met at Chicago in 1893 the world-beaters and beat them."

"Where corn and grass most abound there the hog is most profitably evolved and waxes fattest. In Kansas he finds his favored home—his El Dorado. Here he attains the qualities which make his flesh a delicacy sought of epicures in Occident and Orient, no less than a fit and stable ration for men of heroic undertakings, iron nerve, and cool brain, like those who at Manilia and Santiago fired the unerring shots that wrenched lose the props of a throne, revised the world's map, and replaced tyranny's flag with 'Old Glory.'" BIGGEST SPANISH CITY IN THE WORLD.

Buenos Ayres is a Spanish city. It is the biggest Spanish-speaking city of the world. It is almost twice as big as Madrid and three times as big as Barcelona. Its Spanish character, however, belongs to the past, and it is fast developing a municipal individuality of its own. It will always have the Spanish language, but the population will be a mixture drawn from the four quarters of the earth. Today more than half of the population is foreign and the city itself is fast losing its Spanish character. The houses on the new avenues, which have been recently made, are more like those of Paris than Madrid. The Avenida de Mayo is a wide boulevard, with an asphait pavement. The buildings upon it make you think of those of the Champs Elysée, and there is a total absence of the flat, low, one-story structures of old Spain. It is the same with some of the business blocks which have been erected since Buenos Ayres began its rapid growth. THE HISTORY OF BUENOS AYRES. lation will be a mixture drawn from THE HISTORY OF BUENOS AYRES.

The most of the buildings, however, are low. For a century or so there was not a two-story house in the city. The town was laid out in the Spanish style in rectangular blocks along narwith a capital of $50,000,000, but this was closed by the failures which startled the financial world and made the Baring Bros. tremble, its depos-itors losing $70,000,000 by its breaking. Buenos Ayres has change, where "The Argentine" is bought and sold in parceis, and where stocks and bonds rise and fall as Buenos Ayres thinks them good or bad. On this exchange more than bad, on gold dollars' worth of half a billion gold dollars' worth of stock was floated during the ten years ending in 1889. When the panic came 90 per cent. of the companies failed and most of the shares are now not worth 1 per cent. of their face value.

row streets. It was founded away back in 1535 by a Spanish freebooter, Pedro de Mendcza. He named it "Buenos Ayres." The words mean "good air," but Mendoza did not name "good air," but Mendoza did not name it thus because air here is especially good. It is not. Its death rate is high. More than a thousand people died here last month, and the average is over 33 per cent. Just now the fog over the city is as thick as that of London. For a long time the air was so bad that lockjaw was almost epidemic. It takes a boy's bare foot and a rusty nail to produce lockjaw in the United States. Until recently and a rusty nail to produce lockjaw in the United States. Until recently you could get it here by simply opening your mouth. No, Buenos Ayres did not get its name from its superfluous ozone. Mendoza, like Cortez, Pizarro and other adventurous Spanish cut through of his time had a Spanish cut-throats of his time, had a deep regard for the saints, and he named the city after the Virgin Maria de Buenos Aires, whose aid he had invoked for his expedition before leav-

In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries Asuncion, Paraguay and Cordoba, a day's ride by train west of here, were far better places than of here, were far better places than Buenos Ayres. The town long remained a settlement of mud huts, although lots 350 yards front and three miles deep could be bought for a suit of old clothes. In the seventeenth century some of the central blocks of the city were sold for a white horse and a guitar. When our Declaration of Independwhen our Declaration of Independence was signed there were only 37,000 people in this region, and only 3000 in Buenos Ayres. The colony, however, began to make money out of negroes, and chiefly out of negro slaves. The best families then lived in the the lived by the the lived by the lived by the state of the lived by the lived by the state of the lived by the lived in thatched huts, but they ate their meals from dishes of solid silver, being waited upon by their own negroes. When John Quincy Adams was President Buenos Ayres had 22,000 ing waited upon by their orgones. When John Quincy Adams was President Buenos Ayres had 22,000 people. During Gen. Grant's first term in the White House, it had less than 178,000, and when Cleveland began his second administration, six years ago, its citizens numbered 535,000. Its great growth has thus been within the past thirty years.

A CITY OF SHREDS AND PATCHES. Buenos Ayres is a queer city. A city made up of shreds and patches, both as to architecture and man. As to man, it has people of nearly As to man, it has people of nearly every race. Three hundred thousand of its residents are Italians, 90,000 are Spanish, about 30,000 French and the remainder Germans, English and Argentines. The Argentines proper do not probably number over 150,000, and they are the only real citizens, in the sense that they vote and take part in the government. The rest prefer to keep out of politics and the army, for the foreign resident here has every property right of the citizen, with none of his military obligations. ligations.

Most of the foreigners stick to their old nationalities, although some of them would not dare to go home to vote. The Argentine is one of the few countries which have no extra-dition treaties. Criminals from every-where have taken advantage of this, and it is said that there are more men living under assumed names here than in any other city in the world. This is especially so as to the emi-grants from Italy, and, until recently, it was so as to some of those from our country. our country.

A year or so ago, it is said, four Americans were chatting together in one of the cafes of Buenos Ayres, when three of the crowd began for some reason to jeer at the fourth. He grew angry, and said:

"Well, gentlemen, you may sneer at me if you please; but I want you to understand that there is at least one of the United States that I dare go back to without fear of the Sheriff. I know none of you can say as much." This, however, is rather hard on the Americans. Years ago, before we lost our merchant marine, the Americans were among the most prominent of the foreigners here, and those who have been coming within recent years are men of high standing. Some of them have large interests here, and at present the Americans as a class are much respected.

BUENOS AYRES FROM THE HOUSE. TOPS.

Architecturally Buenos Ayres is a patchwork city. I have rooms high up in one of its biggest hotels. They are Below and about us lies a vast, ragged plain of one and two-story houses, whose flat roofs are made of bricks, or brick, tites on corrugated views. or brick tiles or corrugated iron. Some of them rise high above the others, and the whole looks like a lot of great store boxes jumbled to-gether along narrow canons, which are the streets. Away to the south you see a few smokestacks, the masts you see a few smokestacks, the masts of ships and big warehouses. That is Barracas, the part of the city where meat, wool and hides are prepared for shipment to America and Europe. To the north there is a spot of green woods. That is Palermo Park, where all the swells go to ride and drive every afternoon. You may see a thousand carriages there at a time.

To the east beyond that thicket of

To the east beyond that thicket of masts and spars lining the docks, ex-tending on and on until they meet the horizon, are the muddy waters of the Rio de la Plata, which connects Buenos Ayres with the rest of the world. The river here is twenty-eight miles wide, and in the foggy, misty air we cannot see its opposite hanks. banks.

Buenos Ayres is only forty-eight feet above the Atlantic Ocean, and back, around and beyond it extends the vast plain of the valley of the river, as rich here as that of the Mississippi. It is cut up by railroads and spotted with farms, some of which support cattle and sheep in herds of thousands.

As you look more closely at the roofs below you you see that many of them surround little courts or pa-This is the Spanish style tios. This is the Spanish style of building. Those pipes are connected with the kitchens, not with the parlors.

THE PLAZAS.

There are a few open spaces in the city of roofs. These are the plazas or parks. There are twelve in the city, varying in size from four to twelve acres. That one near the river is the Plaza de Mayo. It is the ectwelve acres. That one near the river is the Plaza de Mayo. It is the ecclesiastical, governmental and financial center of the city. Upon it face the cathedral, the President's house. Congress, the courts and the Bolsa or stock exchange. Into it run some of the chief business streets, and from it to the west extends the Avenida de Mayo, the wide boulevard of which the people here are so proud, and at the other end of which the future capitol building of the republic is to stand. This avenue has already cost 10,000,000 gold dollars, and it will eventually be one of the grand streets of the world. The part of the city through which it goes was in the early Spanish days lighted with oil made of mare's grease. Now electricity gives the same locality its illuminating rays. illuminating rays.

A GREAT CATHOLIC CITY.

The Plaza de Mayo covers eight cres. The finest building upon it is the cathedral, which looks more like a government structure or an art gallery than a church. It covers more people. It is seldom full, however, Buenos Ayres is the largest Catholic city of the world. Ninety-six per cent. of all the people in the Argentine are Roman Catholics. Still, the men are not ardent church-goers, and the women who attend the cathedral do not usually fill it. There are in the city twenty-four Catholic churches. There are only four which are protest-ant. Protestants are freely tolerated, and one of these churches is the American Methodist Church, whose American Methodist Church, whose pastor is an Ohio man, Dr. Wûllam McLaughlin. It is well attended, being situated within almost a stone's throw of the cathedral, in the very business heart of the city.

A WORD ABOUT THE PEOPLE. The most interesting thing, however Buenos Ayres is its people write more of them in other letters.
They are like no other people in the world. I have always thought that New Yorkers, Bostonians and Chicagoans were about as conceited as to their own towns as any citizens I had ever met in my travels, but these Argentines cap the climax. Talk to a man in Buenos Ayres about his city and his head swells out at once Architecturally Buenos Ayres is a patchwork city. I have rooms high up in one of its biggest hotels. newspaper. He is a leading editor and literary man here. I referred to the above phase of the Argentine char-acter. Said he: "You are right about the Argentine self-esteem. I don't believe there is a man in Europe or America who could stir up the average person here by coming to visit us. I doubt if Li Hung Chang would attract notice in Buenos Ayres from anyone but the sellers of lottery tickets, who, you know, are after every new arrival. All we want to know is whether you speak Spanish and whether you are convinced that Buenos Ayres is the greatest city in the world."

I think Mr. Bullfin is right; but I think Mr. Builing is right; but still, these Argentines are not bad people, after all. They have a character of their own, and after associating with them for a while you find yourself doing as they do. At home I took my meals in good American fashion and was a plain, everycan fashion, and was a plain, every-day business man. Here I am satis-fied with coffee in the morning. I eat my breakfast at noon, and about 5 o'clock in the evening, rather to my own surprise, I confess, I find myself walking along the Calle Florida with the rest of the men, admiring the girls. I have been tempted a number of times to buy a ticket in the lottery, and have on three different days stopped on the steps of the stock ex-change, wondering if I could not make a pretty penny by going in and betting on the rise and fall of gold. I think if I stayed here I should become an Argentine boomer, and might—God forbid—absorb some of the Argentine character.

Is the First Man to Recover From Such an Injury to the Spine.

[Truth:] It is said that Edward Marshall's case is the first one on recover where a man has recovered from an injury to the spine where the vertebrae had actually to be taken away, leaving the cord exposed. Mr. Marshall received what at the time was considered a mortal wound, while a participant in the Rough Riders' first fight at Guasimas. He would have been a dead man many months ago if the wound had been an inch higher, but fortunately for him the hurt was directly below the point where all the great locomotor nerves pass from the body to become that great physical brain of ours, the spinal marrow. For over three months he has lain flat on his back, hanging onto life with a grim determination to get well, while he suffered excruciating agony with the great nerves throbbing, with fearful persistence, which in itself to an ordinary man of less grit and endurance, must have meant death. When I saw him a few days ago in his handsome room in St. Luke's, embowered in roses sent him by kind friends, he was happy in the thought that he could move both his legs, which a first had been so completely paralyzed that pins and needles stuck in the flesh produced no sensation. The other day this wonderful man was driven past his home in a carriage. Standing at the window above was a happy wife and a happier mother, who held her tiny burden close to the window, so that the father might see its dimpled cheeks. He could not go in and the mother could not come out, but it was a meeting which lovers may envy.

Practice makes perfect even in wrong-doing, and in the use of what seems to be very awkward means. A writer in the Boston Transcript says. "The Mikado" has proven its ability to withstand the has proven its ability to withstand the test of time in the way in which it has outlived the craze which attended its first production in this country. While other popular fads whose vogue was once equally great lie fathoms deep in the dust of oblivion, this exquisite masterpiece of Gilbert and Sullivan retains its high place in the realm of light opera, and its hold upon the affections of the people.

From spending quiet days in a Quaker home in Philadelphia and singing in the church choir on Sundays it is a long leap to the center of a comic-opera stage, but that leap has been made successfully by Adele Farrington, the beautiful prima donna of the Grau Opera Company. Miss Farrington is endowed not only with a naturally beautiful voice, but also with that gift which is of even greater value on the stage, personal magnetism. Whether her part be great or small, the center of attention is always this tall, beautiful woman, whose every movement is grace itself, and whose marked individuality would make the most unobtrusive thinking part stand out in strong relief.

viduality would make the most unobtrusive thinking parts are not in Miss Farrington's line, however. She is in her element as "Boccacio," or Angelo in "Amorita," for the role of a merry, independent young cavalier is her delight. So identified has she become with masculine roles that it seems hardly natural to see her on the stage in woman's attire. "Falka" gives her a chance to masquerade as a jolly schoolboy, but the superb free swing of her walk is hard to reduce to the infantile toddie necessitated by the clinging kimono of Pitti Sing. She has had a wide range of boy's parts, for after her debut in New York with Reed and Collier and a subsequent engagement in the original cast of "Miss Philadelphia," she took Louise Montague's place in Eddie Foy's company, playing the title role in "Robinson Crusoe." has apparently submerged the theatrical world, it is a healthy indication of the survival of a taste for artistic comedy wedded to beautiful, high class music, that "The Mikado" still excites the old enthusiasm. It is so exquisitely symmetrical in its construction that there is nothing lacking in the harmony of it as a finished work of art. The sparkle-that runs through all the music is fittingly matched by the quaint satirical conceits and bubbling fun of the libretto. One spirit of merry, audacious absurdity inspires the whole, and makes the opera a gem of the first water.

In the presentation given last week at the Burbank, there was nothing lacking in artistic effect. It was beautifully sung and acted by an unusually competent, well-trained opera company. The principal roles were all satisfactorily filled, and the ensemble work was worthy of the highest praise. So much is due to Manager Grau and his clever-company-of-singers, but no small part of the credit of the production falls to the share of the management of the Burbank, by whose efforts the opera was so artistically staged. The fact that the entire action calls for only one setting made it possible to lavish elaborate decoration upon that setting, and this possibility was used to such good effect that the proscenium framed an oriental picture,

The part of Dorothy Mayland, the actress, is taken by Nanette Comstock, and her study of it is a most excellent piece of work. The balance of the cast is made up of such well-known players as Charles Harbury, Carrie Behr, Edmund Lawrence, Adah Eckert, Ben Deane and Franklin Garland. The production which Mr. Litt has made for "Mistakes Will Happen" is a very elaborate one, as the company carry everything that is used upon the stage, even down to the smallest property. This will be one of the most interesting comedy events of the present season, and if it is possible to judge by the advance demand for seats, the engagement will be a most satisfactory one. a most satisfactory one

Owing to the great demand from the patrons of the Burbank and so many requests to the management, Manager Grau is compelled to repeat "The Mikado" for another performance, therefore this opera will be given for the last time tonight. It could have run the entire week to packed houses, but rather than to disappoint the public, Manager Grau stuck to his original programme, but will favor the public by giving a special request per-

A small host of new features figures prominently in the Orpheum's bill for next week. There are a number of acts held over that will add to the programme's attractiveness, and with the new people make up a rarely good entertainment, to all appearances at least. Fio Irwin, a sister of the celebrated May, and pretty nearly a twin in some points, is the "headliner." She was associated with May Irwin for several years in the pleces that gave the mighty May her fame, and has been won to vaudeville but recently. She is supported by Walter Hawley in a comedy conceit called "The Gay Miss Con," which is said to be cleverly written and to afford Miss Irwin abundant opportunity to sing the "coon songs"—without which an Irwin would be lost.

SOME FAMOUS BENEFITS.

A GOOD OLD STAGE CUSTOM BROUGHT FROM ACROSS THE SEA.

By a Special Contributor.

THE custom of giving benefits was brought, with many other good old custom and tradition to our theaters by the English actors who crossed the Atlantic to found the drama in the new world; which they did, despite the Puritans, at the first moment when our cities had grown large enough to support theaters

In the early days of the stock sys-tem it was frequently stipulated in an actor's contract that he should be permitted one or more benefits during his engagement. On the night when he took his benefit, all his friends ne took his benefit, all his triends were supposed to appear to purchase seats and do him honor. It became a test of an actor's popularity to draw a big house on the occasion of his benefit.

When an actor died, leaving a wife and children scantily provided, his

came not only an advantage but un

Frequently the sums realized were very considerable. The benefit given for the wife and children of Dan Bry-ant, the manager of the famous troupe of negro impersonators known as Bryant's minstrels, netted in all, including subscriptions and the receipts of certain minor benefits, the large amount of $16,163. Bryant was the first to organize a minstrel show. It was in his theater, for a "walk around" that Dan Emmett wrote the world frames air and words of "Diva was in the theat, for a want from the the world famous air and words of "Dixie's Land." Bryant's benefit took place on the 29th of April, 1875. On the 12th of February, 1877, Edwin Adams was tendered a benefit at the California Theater in San Francisco. Adams was the original in America of Robert Landry in the "Dead Heart," and of Ivan Khorvich in "The Sert." His last appearance on the stage as an actor was in May, 1876, when he played Iago to the Othello of John McCullough. His last appearance on the stage was on the occasion of his benefit. He was unable to act, but occupied a chair in the center of the stage. A poem and a speech of welstage. A poem and a speech of wel-come were read, to which he re-sponded. "Thereupon," says an eye-witness, writing of the scene, "there withing of the scene, there occurred a simple incident devoid of words that caused tears to flow from the actors as well as the audience. The song of 'Auld Lang syne' was taken up by little Alice Harrison, the company joining in the chorus, when, the singing Mrs. Judah the during the singing, Mrs. Judah, the oldest of San Francisco's actresses, and not then in good health, who was beebly standing with the rest, was led by Harton Hill toward Mr. Adams. The old actor rose and embraced and kissed Mrs. Judah and in his galant kissed Mrs. Judah and in his gallant way offered her his chair. She declined it with a simple movement of her hands, in motherly tenderness, pressed him to his seat again, and, taking her place behind him, wept bitterly until the curtain fell."

The benefit yielded Edwin Adams about $2700. He died in October of the same year in Philadelphia.

In the evening the curtain was rung up at 7 and did not fall for the last time until after midnight. John T. Raymond, John McCullough, W. Couldock, Clara Frank Mayo, C. Morris, Rose Coghlan and many others appeared. Brougham was prevented by illness from being present. Lester Wallack made an address thanking the people in Brougham's name. Later Wallack gave a matinée at his own theater which considerably increased the fund.

thousands, was invested as a fund for the benefit of Mr. Couldock. At any mention of famous benefits, the mind instantly reverts to the splendid tribute offered to Lester Vallack by his fellow-actors. This famous benefit took place in the Met-ropolitan Operahouse, in New York, the scene of the Abbey benefit, on the 21st of May, 1888. The custom-ary mixed performance was abandoned and the more dignified and suitable and the more dignified and suitable idea of presenting one play was re-solved upon. The play chosen was "Hamlet." What a cast! Edwin Booth, of course, appeared in the role he had so long made his own. Mme. Modjeska was the Ophelia, Rose Coghlan the player queen. Joseph Jefferson was the first grave digger. In other was the first grave digger. In other parts were Lawrence Barrett, W. J. Florence, Nat Goodwin and nearly every actor of distinction in New York appeared upon the stage, and many a star played super, perhaps not for the first time in their stage career. The benefit, which was immensely successful financially as well as in every other way was largely the result of the efforts of Augustin Daly and A. M. Palmer, to whom its or-ganization was due.

Between the second and third acts of "Hamlet," Mr. Wallack appeared on the stage and delivered a speech. It was his last appearance, his death occurring later in the same year. In 1890 a benefit was given to Mrs. Agnes Robertson Boucicault at the Fifth Avenue Theater in New York. Mrs. Boucicault appeared in a part she had originally created in one of her husband's plays. The receipts were $2100.

Again on the 11th of February, 1892, the Metropolitan Operahouse was the scene of a great benefit. This time Col. John A. McCaull was the one singled out to be honored by his fellow-managers and friends. The per-formance began with a minstrel show, then Scalchi sung, and Mrs. Agnes Booth appeared in a one-act play. Following this was the usual miscel-laneous programme in which Francis Wilson and all the actors in assisted. The total receipts bove $8000.

Among the most notable benefits of recent years was that tendered to Rose Coghlan, who had so often appeared at the benefits of others. Miss Coghlan's benefit is supposed to have realized between $6000 and $8000 and to have further attested her popularto have further attested her popularity with the public, who demonstrated a great interest in every detail of the affair. The Hammerstein benefit is even more recent, but it was not entirely successful owing probably to the factions that have probably to the factions that arisen to divide the theater in New York. It would be difficult as mat-ters stand to organize a great benefit York. like Wallack's or Abbey's at this time. as there is no manager or actor to whom the warring factions could look with complete confidence, unless it be to Mr. Jefferson.

The Press Club, the Chicago fire, the Poe statue, the Irish famine fund, the Johnstown flood, the earthquake sufferers, Mrs. Garfield, the President's mother, each and all have had their benefits, but these and their results cannot be recorded here.

CCCANS. MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

HE second of the series of symphony concerts, which was inaugurated a fortnight ago, will be given at the Los Angeles Theater Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. With their initial performance this season, Director Harley Hamilton and his men proved their capacity to do their full share in making these concerts a success artistically, and there is no reason, no excuse, for the public to fail in responding freely and spontaneously with their patronage, and their half dollars. It is not only a privilege, it is an obligation, which men, women, teachers and students must realize and give substantial proof that they do realize, if the series is that they do realize, it the series is to be continued. These symphony con-certs can and will be more than an enjoyable diversion. They are all that, but they are more, in that each one is a marked factor in the education of teachers and pupils of music, in the development of the best musical taste among laymen. As it is not necessary to wield the brush in order to be able to enjoy, intelligently, the art of painting; not necessary to be able to write books in order to understand them fully in reading them, so it is not necessary to either play or sing in order to appreciate in full measure the best in music. All that is necessary is to listen to it. Mark the word, listen. Not simply to go and hear with the ear, but to put oneself in a receptive ear, but to put oneselt in a receptive mood, and open the brain and the heart to the message of the music, using the organ of hearing only as a means to an end. It is so easy of accomplishment, and the result is more satisfying than it is possible to express in words.

Now, here is this band of musicians earnestly, conscientiously striving to do their part in providing what is not only beneficial to the individual, but to the city and its citizens. They give of their time, their strength, their nervous force, their artistic capacity generously in equipping themselves by rehearsals and study to meet the requirements of a symphony orchestra worthy the name; and it is no small task. All of them have their living to make; many have families depending on them. Why, then, with the supply ready at hand, is it not incumbent upon the laity to create a demand for that supply, to meet them half way by responding as generously with no effort beyond taking the trouble to go to the concerts; at most by denying one's self a cheaper form of amusement, or a trifle of some kind, that could not be as beneficial to the individual as any single symphony concert is bound to be, if attended in the Now, here is this band of musicians ment, or a trine or some kind, that could not be as beneficial to the individual as any single symphony concert is bound to be, if attended in the right spirit. Aside from the individual benefit and enjoyment, there is the reputation of the city to be thought of, which every men and woman, every boy and girl, should have at heart. To assist, in even so small a way in creating an art atmosphere in a place is as vital a necessity as that it should be well paved, well sewered, well lighted and well governed. These other things naturally must come first. They have come in Los Angeles, and now it is high time that some visible effort, some lasting move be made to create and maintain an art atmosphere here, all the more in that the natural advantages of the place are so superior.

It is an a cowledged fact that a permanent symphony orchestra is more beneficial. More wide-reaching in its results than any other one factor for musical development in any place. There are thousands of students of music here, hundreds of teachers. Let every one of the latter insist that their punits attend these concerts. Let every parent feel it a moral obligation to go him or herself and take the children; let every unattached man and woman make a strenuous effort to keep one afternoon in two weeks open for these concerts, as a moral obligation, first to the individual; second, to those with whom he or she has any ties or associations; third, in justice, simple justice, to the struggling orchestra, and fourth, for the sake of the reputation of the town. If such might only be the case, the Los Angeles Theater would be filled to overflowing and the financial success of the series assured instead of, as now, in imminent danger of being discontinued or the season at least cut short for want of actual funds to pay for hall rent, music, and the musicians for their very valuable services.

At the concert Tuesday, Miss Mollie Adelia Brown will be the soloist. Miss Brown's delightful and artistic work is too well-known to need more than the mention of her name. This is her second public appearance here since her return from extended study and successful professional engagements in the mention of her mention of her mention of her mention of her mention of public appearance here and sucreturn from extended study and sucreturn brilliant "Theme and Variations," a number eminently suited to her flexible, sweet soprano voice, and method. In coloratura she is at her best, and there is no doubt but that her contribution will be a valuable acquisition to the afternoon's enjoyment. The rest of the carefully-selected programme will include Kretchner's "Fabrice" march: the overture to "Der Wassertrager," by Cherubin!, Moskowski's "Maloguena," from "Boabdil;" Thomas's "Raymond" overture; and the symphony will be Haydn's fourth, in D minor, popularly known from a motive in the Adagio (first) movement, as "The Clock." Of the 800 compositions that Haydn left as his invaluable legacy to the world of music, and which include some 125 symphonies, but few have been treated in detail by his biographers, and unfortunately his fourth symphony is not included in the work of any available authority. But a few salient characteristics of the man may prove of interest to those who will be at the concert on Tuesday, in that they will give some clue to the meaning or actuating motive of the composition by which he will then be represented. represented.

Joseph Haydn, or Franz Joseph, ac-Joseph Haydn, or Franz Joseph, according to the baptismal register, was born on the night of March 31-April 1, 1732, in a small Austrian village, the second eldest of twenty children. His position in musical history is of the first importance. When considering the meager condition in which he found certain important departments, and the very fields he opened to his successors. certain important departments, and the vast fields he opened to his successors, it is impossible to overrate the effect of his creative powers. He has been justly called the father of instrumental music—more particularly the string quartetto and the symphony—for there is scarcely a department in which he did not make his influence felt. Starting from Emanuel Bach, he seems to have been forced between Mozart and Beethoven, for although Mozart commenced his symphony writing after Haydn, he reached his zenith before him, and his work was influenced by Haydn's early writing, as the latter's was, in turn, influenced by that of Mozart.

Adopting the sonata form, as scientifically illustrated by Bach, he introduced into it compositions for the orchestra and the chamber. He developed these into a completeness, a symmetry which have never been improved. Mozart may be richer, Beethoven more sublime, Schubert more luxuriant, Mendelssohn more orchestral and passionate, but Hayden has never been surpassed in his keen perception of the capacities of the instruments, his subtile distribution of parts, his variety in treating themes and his charmingly legitimate effects. In him genius and industry were happily united. With a marvelously rich flow of musical ideas, he clearly knew what he meant to do, and never neglected the just elaboration of each theme; he labored on it till it had shaped itself into perfect beauty. All his work is characterized by lucidity; he studied moderation, avoidance of meaningless phrases, and firmness of design. The subjects down to the smallest episodes are thoroughly connected; the whole conveys the impression of being cast in one mould. The originality of his themes and melodies, the clearness which markes his compositions makes them as interesting to the amnteur as to the artjest; and the child-like cheerfulness and drollery, charm away trouble and care. Of the symphony, he may be said with truth to have enlarged its sphere, stereotyped its capacities with the versatility of true genius. tifically illustrated by Bach, he introduced into it compositions for the or

He was the first to give the minuet form, and he established the allegro, adagio and finale movements. He broadened, arranged, and elevated the broadened, arranged, and elevated the first movement, gave it more fullness and meaning through the organic development of its own motive substance; deepened the adagio from a simple song to a complete, satisfying tone picture, and above all, by ingenious thematic treatment; and he produced in the finale veritable wonders of mind and life. The fourth symphony, that to be played Tuesday, was one of a series of twelve written for subscription concerts given in London in 1794, under the charge of Johann Peter Solomon, an evert violinist and noted concert director of and noted concert director

Mozart ever spoke of him, as "Papa Hayden," and the title, transmitted to posterity, admirably expresses the sweet, placid, gentle possessor was no less personally belowed than he was admired. His life flowed broad and unruffled like some great river, unvexed for the most part by rivalries, jealousies, and sufferings. He remained to the last the favorite of Vienna's imperial court, and when he died, May 31, 1809, princes

Moriz Rosenthal, the great Roumanian pianist, will be heard in Los Angeles on the evening of December 23 and the afternoon of December 23 and the afternoon of December 23 and the afternoon of December 23. Wednesday evening of this week J. T. Fitzerail received a wire from Rosenthal's manager, Henry Wolfsohn, closing the contract for the dates mentioned, and waiving the almost invariable guarantee. Los Angeles is therefore put "upon honor," as it were, let her see to it that she be not found wanting. This king among plano virtuosi was born at Lemberg, in Roumania, and at an early age gave evidence of his genius. His first teacher was Mikull, who presented him to the public when but 10 years of age, performing the most difficult music with success. Later on, when his family determined to settle in Vienna, Rosenthal placed himself altogether under the tultion of Joseffy. The work he did at that time would have wrecked the constitution of a strong man, for, besides practicing on the piano for six or seven hours each day, he was also a student of the University of Vienna, Philosophy and philology were the sublects that interested him most, and this interest is a proof of his keen and analytical mind. He passed his "maturity" examination and went to the lectures of Zimmermann, Brentano and Hansilck, obtaining the degree of M.A. with the greatest honors. Of his subsequent return 40 the concert stage in 1882, and his long line of unbroken successes in all parts of Austria, Germany, Russia and Great Britain, there is no need to dwell, as they are familiar subjects to all who follow the course of musical events. In 1888 Rosenthal gave over a hundred recitals in America with the most satisfactory results. But he was not then the finished artist that he is now. Always a master of technique, he has developed latent qualities of sympathy in touch and refinement in interpretation that have surprised even his most ardent admirers.

MUSICAL MELANGE.

Some roysterers wheeled into Broadway, New York, the other night, says Musical America, singing that well-known song, "We won't go home till morning, till daylight does appear." Curious that a band of dry-goods and bankers' clerks should celebrate a brief period of hilarity, exploited at the expense of an entire week's salary, by singing a song the air of which the Crusaders sang at the siege of Aore! "To what base uses we may return, Horatio!" Some roysterers wheeled into Broad [London Daily News:] Highly alarmist reports in the German papers of the health of Otto Hegner, the piano virtuoso, are set at rest by the announcement of his reappearance at the Crystal Palace shortly, he then playing Beethoven's piano concerto in G. Mr. Hegner is, in fact, in the best of health, and he has, we understand, just been married to a wealthy young lady at Montreux.

Here are two new Brahms anecdotes told by Ilka Horovitz-Barnay in the Deutsche Revue: A young Hungarian violinist, who was continually talking about his wonderful skill and great fame, had his fiatteries addressed to Brahms cut short with the brusque remark: "More finger exercises and fewer phrases, young man." A young woman who played the planoforte asked him as to the advisability of giving a concert in Vienna. "Are you all ready?" inquired Brahms. "Certainly, dear master; may I play something for you?"

"Yes sir."
"Pity; otherwise, I should have advised you not to give the concert."

It is said that Campanini was at one time a blacksmith; Wachtel, whose phenomenal high C we all remember, was a postilion in Southern France. Evan Williams is said to have stepped from a coal mine into fame. Ernst Kraus was once employed in a Munich brewery. Sig. Crepi was a "strong man" in a variety show, while Ernst Van Dyck, one of Grau's tenors who is with us this season, was once a newspaper reporter. The first condition of all these men was accidental. Later they found their true sphere just as Lincoln, who was a rail-splitter, and Garfield, who led mules on a tow path, found their true sphere when the nation put them into the White House.

[Musical America:] Just think of hose battalions of half-trained, halfstarved, half-exhausted American vol unteers, never before under fire, tramping up through the tropical bush where the land crabs were waiting to eat them, into the open, where the Mauser bullets were humming for which whether emotional or cosmical I which whether emotional or cosmical is where the land crabs were waiting to eat them, into the open, where the Mauser bullets were humming for them, and they—these queer, rough, strong-fisted Americans who postulated their own ability to smash any nation on earth—singing in chorus—what?—"War Hymn of the Republic?"—"Hall Columbia?"—"Star Spangled Banner?"—No. "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," also "Get Your Money's Worth." The writer of this article, "Our Soldiers' Songs," seems bilad to humors at least, of the huge American kind. Kingsley ought to have been at El Caney; he would have written something to match that bit in "Hypatia," where the Northmen in the

Among the recent additions to the new Library of Congress is a collection of music printed in various parts of the South during the civil war. Some of these songs are reprints from music preceding the war. "Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Still," "Goodby, Sweetheart," "Cail Me Not Back, From the Echoless Shores," are among the collection. There is the famous pathetic anthem, "Lorena," which had such a run. "Maryland, My Maryland" is in two forms, one lithographed handwriting on filmy paper and the other somewhat more ambitious, printed in Augusta, Ga., and certified to as being the "only edition that has the author's approval." The music of "Maryland, My Maryland, Certifies that it is "by a lady of Baltimore."

At every performance of Sousa's band, says W. A. Corey in Musical America, the requests that reach the conductor for encore numbers 'f complied with would treble the length of the programme. Some of these requests are particularly humorous and many of them have been treasured for their humorous value. On one occasion Mr. Sousa was handed a dainty note which said: "A society lady requests that you play the overture to Tannhauser as an encore." This was in the South and is in strong contrast to the characteristic bluntness of a western lover of melody who knew what he wanted and wasn't afraid to say so in these terms: "Damn Wagner. Play the Liberty Bell."

While playing in St. Louis, this note was handed to him: "Would it be asking too much if I requested you to play as an encore the beautiful opera of 'Martha?' I believe it is by Sullivan."

van."

In Pennsylvania came this anxious request: "I came forty miles over the mountains to see the man who makes $25,000 a yeer out of his compositions, Kindly oblige me by playing them all. I.T."

Kindly oblige me by playing them all.

J. T."

This one came from a young man fust aching for information; "Bandmaster Sousa: Please inform me what is the name of those two instruments that look like gas pipes?"

At an afternoon concert, Sousa was handed this note: "Dear sir: Please play 'Love's Old Sweet Song.' T've got my girl almost to the sticking point, and that will fetch her around sure."

This from a musically inclined member of the colored race: "A colored lady would like to hear a coronet solo by your solo cornetist." And here is another sample of the ingenious request: "A warm admirer of good music would like to hear the 'Maiden's Prayer' on your band."

During the present season Sousa and his band will play in every State in the Union, and possibly in some of the new war-won territory, a tremendous enterprise, and the record of the Sousa Band is a remarkable one, in that they have lost but one day's concert in seven years and that was when they were snow-bound between Milwaukee and Beloit.

James Huneker, in the New York Musical Courier, has this to say of some new compositions of Edward A. MacDowell: "Edward MacDowell was near the

some new compositions of Edward A. MacDowell:

"Edward MacDowell was near the sea last summer. His new op. 55, eight small pieces for piano, is simply saturated in the sea mood, for the little volume is but a sheaf of moods without sequence, yet bound together by a certain spiritual resemblance. These 'Sea Pieces' are short, often no more than two pages, but they are luminous with the poetry of large, saline spaces, of the line where sky and sea melt, of remote, implacable depths. The keynote is struck in the first number, "To the Sea," with its revocative 'Ocean, Thor' Mighty Monster.' It is the brooding, mysterious sea here, ea of 'undug graves,' and its bosom slumbers dreamfully. Like most of MacDowell's music, the imaginative element is strong in this proem. Without effort he has caught the vague and vast quality that is in Schubert's 'Am Meer,' but it is MacDowell's sea, rot Schubert's.

"In 'From a Wandering Iceberg' the composer gets a gilttering effect of calm that is almost hypnotic. There is a thread of human interest which grows until it sounds a faint note of passion. But the primary impression is whiteness, dazzling and serene. My favorite in the volume is 'From the Depths,' with the motto 'And Who Shall Sound the Mystery of the Sea?' Mr. MacDowell does, in this remarkable poem. There is a crisis here, which whether emotional or cosmical I cannot say. It recalls to me the long, low hum of some antique tragedy, where upon a bare rock and under sullen skies is enacted the tragedy of some strong heart. But all is so objective in the music that humanity and its throb seem an echo.

clamorer for the tangible in music. It suggests the sleep of the shadow, so delicate are its harmonic adumbrations. The set ends with a powerful piece of music, 'In Mid Ocean,' in which the dramatic element makes itself felt for the first. It is the ocean 'inexorable,' and the canvas seems too small for the picture.

"Mr. MacDowell is essentially a composer who works freely on large surfaces. Possibly because the narrative tone is employed, instead of the musing and philosophic, the composition sounds as if it might be further developed. But MacDowell is a master in the art of musical short-story telling, so there is nothing to criticise in the formal sense. The three remaining numbers are in a less epic vein fancy and lightness of touch.

"These eight 'Sea Pieces' are not easy, even in the technical sense. They require supple fingers, strong wrists easy, even in the technical sense. They require supple fingers, strong wrists and an unusual poetic sense. While I do not subscribe to the practice of affixing motices to absolute music, the titles in this case are so happy that it would be critical superciliousness to search for others. A book for the man and woman with musical imagination! The old Scotch in MacDowell peeps out in the 'Song,' and the general character of the architecthonic is Schumann or Grieg—an intellectual Grieg—rather than Chopin."

[Musical America:] An inspiration surely came to Sousa fifteen months ago when he named a new march "The Stars and Stripes Forever," for never did a musical composition receive a more appropriate or fortunate title. The composition itself and its title were the expression of the musician's patriotism on his return from a long European tour, with no thought that a war with a foreign power would shortly elevate his work to the dignity of a national air. At the surrender of Santiago, "The Stars and Stripes Forever" was the musical doxology of the impressive ceremonies attendant upon the lowering of the enemy's emblem and the elevation of the glorious American ensign. Every band in the army played the inspiring strains on the firing line and in the camps. The march was played at Ponce, Porto Rico, when the jubilant natives came out with their band to welcome the victorious troops under command of Gen. Miles. With stirring patriotic words written by Sousa, this melody has proven enormously popular as a song for the times. Stars and Stripes Forever," for never did a musical composition receive a

A great musical revival has struck Columbia University, in New York, says the Musical Age. This is all due to the influence of Prof. Edward A. MacDowell. The membership in the various musical organizations is larger than ever, the work well advanced for this time of the year, and the rehearlisals were never before so well attended. The chorus now consists of fifty men, and the Philharmonic Society has a full orchestra.

An Experiment in Charity.

T was the noon hour, and the clerks were hurrying out of the clerks were hurrying out of the stores for their hasty luncheon, when a pale, philosophical-looking girl stepped out of a book store in Wabash avenue and stopped to count her change. It did not take her long, for she found but 6 cents.

"That means no lunch," she thought with an amused smile, walking aimlessly down the street; but before she had gone a block a small whine attracted her attention.

"Please, miss, give me a penny?"
Looking down, the girl discovered an extremely dirty-faced boy with evidences of recently, eaten sweetmeats about his mouth.
"Er a nickel," continued the boy.

The boy hung his head a moment; then, deciding honesty the best policy, he answered:
"To buy a cream puff with."
"Here's a penny, and here is a nickel. It is all the money I have." she said: "and if you take the nickel I shall have to walk home."
The boy looked puzzled for a moment, then grabbed the nickel and ran as if to get away from his selfish little action. Looking after him with a thoughtful smile, the girl retraced her steps to the store. It was a beautiful day, and she lingered a minute on the step before going into her gloomy work.

"I believe I'm a fool," she murmured. "Why should I walk home just for a vain experiment? It is hard to teach unselfishness to a child who has 'just "rowed' in a world whose creed is self." But her thought were interrupted by a vociferous utterance peculiar to the small boy; and, turning, she beheld the object of her thoughts running toward her, his dirty little paw outstretched, in which lay the nickel, meaning car fare to her and cream puff to him. A flush of pleasure like a shadow at sunset overspread the girl's face as she said:

"Y u are the right kind of a biy, but wait—don't run away—I owe you a penny."

Rather sheepishly, the wait returned.

Rather sheepishly, the waif returned and, thrusting the penny which the girl handed him down in his dirty girl handed mm trousers, he said: "Say, I'm a-goin' to keep this here penny."—[Chicago Inter Ocean.

Why He Married.

N THE north of England, where rabbit coursing is much in vogue, swift, well-trained dogs often win large sums in prizes. It is, therefore, little to be wondered at that the owners of these animals should bestow ers of these animals should bestow so much attention upon them.

An old Yorkshire collier, well known for his success in the coursing field recently surprised all his mates by marrying a very unprepossessing woman. He had always been reckoned a confirmed hater of the other sex.

"Why has ta gone and got spliced, lad, at thy age?" one of his friends asked him.

"Oh, that's not much of a tale," answered the old man, stolidly. "I agree wi' ye 'at Betsy yonder is no beauty—if she had been I shouldn't have wed her. But there dog o' mine, he was simply pinin' for somebody to look after him while I was away at t' pit. I couldn't bear to leave him in the house by hissen, so I hit on the idea of marryin' Betsy. She's not handsome, but she's mighty good company of the dog!"—[Tid-Bits.

Prayed in Harmony.

A CURIOUS story is told in M.A.P. as to the way in which the sirdar dealt with a case of clerical intolerance during the Soudan campaign. The occasion was the memorable cere-mony which took place at Kharteum when the triumphant Anglo-Egyptian army crowned their campaign of ven-geance by celebrating the rites of Gor-don's funeral.

By common consent the various chap-

By common consent the various chaplains attached to Kitchener's forces—
Anglican, Methodist, Romanist, and so forth—had agreed, with one exception, to recite a specially compiled prayer during the services at the tomb. The one exception was a strangely obstinate cleric. Kitchener, hearing that that reverend gentleman in question had refused to join in reciting the prayer, promptly sent for him, and asked if the rumor which had reached him were true. "Certainly," was the cleric's uncompromising reply. "Very well, then," said Lord Kitchener, taking out his watch, "I give you just five minutes to consider whether you will join in reciting this prayer or not, and if you don't I shall march you down to Cairo under arrest." Before the five minutes were up the Rev. Mr had decided that to obey was better than sacrifice, when a man like the sirdar was concerned, and it is satisfactory to know that at Gordon's tomb, at all events, the representatives of normally warring sects were absolutely unanimous in their petitions to heaven.

An Historical Moment.

PROF. AEGIDI, who was for many years the chief of the press bureau, under Prince Bismarck, has lately published a reminiscence of the great chancellor which show how alert he was in drawing conclusions.

Before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war the Czar was with King William at Ems. They were together one evening, and Bismarck was standing at the other end of the room anxiously watching the Czar, whose more or less friendly attitude toward Prussia's policy was a matter of great importance.

portance. Suddenly the Russian Emperor's big dog, which had been lying silent under his master's chair, rose, prowled the room, stopped before Bismarck, looked at him, wagged his tail affectionately and licked the hand he held out toward it.

The Czar, who had attentively watched its movements, called out to

Bismarck:

Bismarck, who told Aegidi this story, added: "I felt relieved. That was an historical moment for our policy." It proved to him that he had, at least, not to count on Russia's opposition in the coming conflict.—[Youth's Companion.

A FTER Amherst College had been established and its first building erected, the institution was supported for many years by systematic and persistent begging, according to an

One Sunday the Rev. Dr. Parsons of Amherst preached at Pelham, a town not far from the college, and at the close of the sermon asked for a collection for the institution. The boxes were passed, and came back as empty as when they started. The subsequent proceedings are narrated in "The His-tory of Pelham."

Dr. Parsons, on his return to Amherst Dr. Parsons, on his return to Amherst on Monday, called on his old friend, Aunt Rene Cowles, and related his experience in Pelham. "Just think of it!" said he. "I went to Pelham yesterday, preached there morning and afternoon; and at the close of the second service I asked for a collection for our college. Can you believe it?—not a cent did the deacons get!" "Yes," continued the doctor, "didn't get a cent; but when I learned that no one had given a penny, I gave out Dr. Watt's:

The general was standing in the office of the Tampa Bay Hotel one evening, dressed in a plain business suit, when a tail, raw-boned private from the Fifth Maryland Regiment stroiled up to him and said:

"Say, partner, give us a light."

"I don't know, except that he is a gentleman," returned the Maryland boy.

"Well, I'll tell you who he is," said the porter, "and you won't feel so big when you know. It was Gen. Miles."

"The devil you say!" was the response as the soldier walked off in chagrin, awaiting his opportunity he stepped up to the general with a salute and said:
"General, I have to apologize for what may have seemed to you an impertinence, but I had never seen you before, and you wore nothing to indicate your rank, so I took the liberty of addressing you as I would any stranger, and I hope you will excuse me for it."

a long illness; that the woman was his wife, and that they were in desperate need of money.

"George Francis Train came along and sat down beside me on the bench. I knew him well, and told him about the young people and their troubles. Presently he went on his way, and I saw him go into a store on the south side of the square. A few minutes later he came back to the young couple. As he passed them a shower of gold and silver coin dropped from his pocket, directly at their feet, Jingling musically on the sphalt. Mr. Train walked right along, paying no heed. The young man sprang up and called Mr. Train's attention to his loss, saying, 'You've dropped a lot of money, Sir.' 'You're very much/mistaken, young man,' Train replied, and he walked rapidly away.

"The young people were utterly dumfounded, and, after they had gathered up the coins, seriously talked of turning the money over to the police. Fearing that they would really be so foolish. I went to them and advised them to keep the wealth, as the man who dropped it had a way of doing just such eccentric things, which he could well afford, as he possessed a great fortune. They left the square soon after with smiling faces.

"Train undoubtedly had gone to a store, obtained a lot of coin, cut the lining of his coat pocket, holding the gap together with his hands to keep the coin within until he reached the young couple, when he let go and the coin fell at their feet. And the carriage bowled along and left Dan standing there.

When they sat down to dinner, hungry after their long drive, Molly found at her plate a letter and a little package. They were from Dan, she knew his writing. She dropped them into her lap, her cheeks growing hot; and when Mr. Arnsworth asked her if she would like an olive, she answered with a tremble in her voice. She could not eat much. It was strange that a dinner at the West View should seem to her unpleasantly long, but that dinner did.

Esther and her mother were on the plazza with Mr. Arnsworth. Molly sat down with them; she laid an appealing hand on Mrs. St. Clair's.

"I—Mrs. St. Clair," she said, "I want to go home. You've been lovely to me, and it's been a beautiful time! But I want to go home. I must. I will tell you why. Do you know what I did this morning? Oh, Mrs. St. Clair! I saw Dan over home; he was coming from the Barstows with a pail of sour milk for his pig, and he had on his old clothes—and he did look funny—and I —I didn't speak to him. I was ashamed of him; I was glad you and Esther didn't see him; I didn't want Mr. Arnsworth to know he was my brother.

"And all the way back," said Molly, "you don't know heav! I felt I was a dreadfully sorry it seemed as if I couldn't stand it; you gon t know! Molly's lips quivered; and suddenly she laid her face against Mrs. St. Clair's arm and burst into tears.

Mrs. St. Clair put her arms around her. She did not speak, but there were tears in her eyes. As to Esther, she made no secret of the fact that she was crying in pure sympathy; and Mr. Arnsworth coughed several times, winked hard and looked off up the road. Mrs. St. Clair rstroked Molly's head.

Molly did not change her mind. She stuck to her resolution. "I think better of her for it, too," said Mr. Arnsworth. And the next morning he had one of his horses put into his single buggy, and drove Molly home, her trunk following in the stage.

Certafiny it was rather hard for her to say goodby to Mrs. St. Clair and Esther, and to the lovely West View: yet, when they were fairly off, the load began to lift from Molly's heert, and her spirits rose with every mile they made.

"Oh." Molly gasped, "oh!" And for some time that was every word that she could say.

Dan was the first object Molly saw, when they drove up to the rate. He was putting a new coat of raint on the porch railing: he had on his same old clothes, looking, indeed, rather the worse for the daubs of paint he had got on them. But Molly did not care for paint. Her mother came to the door, and she waved a glad hand to her—but she made a rush for Dan, and flung her arms around him, paint and all, and pressed her warm cheek to his. At his first sight of her a painful red had stolen into Dan's face; but, quickly melting, he threw an arm around her; he kissed her soundly.

THE DUSKY SNOWS, HOW THEY LOST AND WON A THANKSGIVING DINNER.

[BY A SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.]

The Snows were disconsolate. And this was no small matter—partly because of the large number involved, which was no less than ten, and part-ly because of the rarity of the oc-currence.

"Pap," otherwise Abraham Lincoln

Snow, lounging comfortably in an old. rickety arm chair, basked his bent, black form in the glow of sunlight which poured through the few remain-ing panes of the rag-stopped window. Not so his dusky brood. Part of Not so his dusky brood. Part of them were distributed around on what furniture the bare kitchen offered, and the rest were seated upon the floor. But the faces of all wore a look of the deepest dismay and sorrow, while the youngest pickaninny enlivened the occasion by his incessant howls.

"Well," began Sam, the eldest boy, from his unsteady seat on the kitchen table, "dis dun beat all I evah heard of! Thanksgiving day and no turkey, nor cranber sauce, nor no fixins', nor nuffin 'cept some cold taters and co'nbread, and ten chillens to gobble up what we hab got. What yo' think of that pop?"

"Well, Sam," the old man responded, leisurely, "that's not so bad as it might be. Yo' ma'll be home dis noon from her washing and rake up some sort of victuals dat's eatable."

"Huh," broke in Sukey, with an angry shake of her woolly head, "dem's grand victuals fo' Thanksgiving, ain't dey? Cold taters! Why we hab as good as dat ebry day."

"Now, Sukey, doan talk dat-a-way. De Lord'll provide fo' his chillens, and eben ef he doan dere's some good reason why."

"Yes, an' dere's oders besides de Lord dat ought to provide fo' der chillens," muttered Sam, as he ran to the window at the sound of an approaching vehicle. The rest of the children followed him to his post of observation and "Pap" faced his chair around for a better view.

"Dat's de cart ob dem new grocers up on Third street," volunteered Sam. Why, I 'clar! I dun b'lleve-yes, pap, he's stopping here."

"Pap," impelled by curiosity, arose and shuffled slowly to the door. As he reached it he was confronted by the occupant of the grocery cart, who bore a well-filled market basket.

"Is this where Mr. Snow lives?" he asked of the darkey.

"Yes, sah, Mistah Abraham Snow.

An' I's him, please."

"Abraham Snow; yes that was the name. Well, Mr. Snow, here is the bosket that was to be delivered. Good morning," and laying the basket down on the steps the young man got in his wagon and drove off.

For a few moments after his departive there was silence, while the children stared at "Pap" and "Pap" stared at the basket, and then there was a shower of questions.

"What did he want, pap,—what's dat he left on the steps? Is it for we-uns?—why d'd he leave it?" "Pap" degred no reply; he was still gazing thought.

"What did he want, pap,—what's dat he left on the steps? Is it for we-uns?—why d'd he leave it?" "Pap" delgned no reply; he was still gazing thoughtfully at the basket.
"Here, you Sam," he called out, "you come an' help me tote dis basket in. and de rest of yo' chillens jist keep out of de road."
With many humpings and gruntings

With many bumpings and gruntings the precious burden was at last de-posited upon the kitchen table.

"Now, chullens, you just keep shy of dat kitchen table till I set down an' res abit, an' den we'll look in de basket."

By the time that "Pap" was sufficiently rested to inspect the windfall the children were in a fever of curiosity, and he had to scatter them right and left before he could reach the table.

When the last wrapping had been removed and the children were bidden to "come and look," what was disclosed to their admiring view? An immense fat turkey, plenty of "cranber's" and crisp celery, rosy-cheeked apples, nuts, raisins, cans of mincement, potted chicken, and a great yellow rumpkin. For a moment there was silence, and then Sam expressed the feelings of all in an emphatic, "Well, I swan." "Fap" gravely regarded the puzzled faces around him, and then remarked: "Now, chillens, what did I tell vo!?

"Now, Sam, nebah you mind about dem grocers. The Lord dun choose His own messengers, an's not askin' us nuffin' bout it. Yo' ma, now, she's too liable to find dat man's got mo' to do with happening dan de Lori has. So if she dun ask you who brung dat basket, yo' jes' keep still an' let me convince her dat de Lord did it, an' it'll strengther her faith in Him pow'fully, chillens."

all!"

As Bridget ended and subsided, with a wail, into her ample apron there was a peal at the front door bell. Mrs. Snow ran to the door hersek in the hopes that it might be the grocer boy. When she opened it there, sure enough, were a boy and a basket—but such a long-legged, awkward negro boy, who shuffled uneasily from one foot to another as he inquired: "Is dis where de Snow's libs at?"

"Yes, my boy, and I am Mrs. Snow.

another as he inquired: "Is dis where de Snow's libs at?"

"Yes, my boy, and I am Mrs. Snow. Come in and tell me your errand."

And so Sam, for it was he, followed Mrs. Snow into the reception-room, and there, on the extreme edge of a highly polished chair, told his story. When he had finished, Mrs. Snow laid her white hand, with its gleaming jewels, kindly on the boy's shoulder.

"And so you went to the grocer's and inquired for whom the basket was meant, and then brought it to us. Well, my boy, I cannot tell you how much I admire yor mother for sending, and you for bringing, the basket. It has not only relieved cook and myself from an immense worry, but has discovered for me twelve people whom I can give a happy Thanksgiving. For you need not think." she continued, smilling brightly at Sam's look of astonishment, "that we are the only people whom that basket is going to benefit. For, if there is anything left of you after cook has suitably expressed her gratitude, you are going to carry home a great basket of good things and the promise of many more."

PREFERRED A SALARY.

[Manchester, Eng., Courier:] One of the brightest traveling salesmen in modern commerce was thinking seriously of going to war.

"You see," he was saying to an old military man whose stories of adventure and achievement had kindled his ambition, "I have had experience in every branch of trade that amounts to very much, except fighting. I have sold nails, barbed wire, cigars, dry goods, paper, paints, oils and a number of things. Now, it strikes me that I'd like to handle lead for the government awhile."

"You would have to undergo a good many hardships," remarked his friend.

Last year over six hundred little children were received at the shelter, all of whom had to be clothed and fed. The members of the league send their cast-off clothing, enough being recast-off clothing, enough being re-ceived to fit out the little inmates, without the funds of the society being touched.

The little girls are all trained in domestic service and the boys learn some trade; but it is not all work and no play, for very frequently a treat is prepared for their entertainment. Not long ago the girls had an egg race, while the boys had a sack and potato

There is a feast for the children and much dancing of the high-land fling, the reel o' Tulloch and strathspeys, with prizes for the best performers.

This is always a red-letter day at the home and some of the children try to make an extra long one of it, by rising as early as 3 o'clock; they are, however, promptly sent back to bed until a more reasonable rising hour Lady Clementine Hay is still a very young girl, not yet twenty years old, and a good share of her time, money and thought are devoted to the league

LONG, LITHE DIANAS. STYLES FOR THIS YEAR GIVE THEM THEIR INNINGS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] NEW YORK Nov. 22.-So far as we NEW YORK Nov. 22.—So far as we have gone into the season it is evident that black is hardly, at least for younger women, cutting any figure at all. It seems only used here and there to strengthen the dazzling contrasts of greens, blues and yellows. Six out of every eight dancing and dinner costumes hook or button up in the rear, and some sort of flap trimming is let down over the back, so as to successdown over the back, so as to successfully imbue the uninitiated beholder with the idea that the wearer was born

After all, the trains have not developed well. Dowagers do drag about in the salons well folded draperies, rein-forced underneath to give an idea of forced underneath to give an idea of body and interlining, but the trains the other women show are really no more than flat, extra long flounces of chiffon that tog out behind, not too tidily, from three to eight inches. How the lively belies will ever foot it, in waltz or polka, in their new frocks, is a problem, for what with skirts at the knee not two yards wide and flounces falling on the floor all about, anything more reckless than a slow, careful promenade seems to threaten destruction.

Undisputably, on a tall, slim, well-built woman this style of costume is most attractive and one of the goods worn very much, because of its capacity for taking admirable straight folds, is Liberty velvet in color pink, lemon yellow and sea green. The velvet is exceedingly soft and is lined, usually, with China silk or crepe de chine, and however it may be trimmed the orthodox woman is sure to wear one or two pink or white or vividly red camelias directly in front of her corsage. The unfailing camelia is an artfully-made silk flower, accompanied by two polished-looking dark green leaves; the leaves are allowed to rest against the wearer's white chest, to show how dark one is and how fair the other.

It is perfectly evident why long sleeves are the mode for the evening. In order to achieve sufficient slenderness to enable herself to wear these new gowns every woman has reduced herself until her arms are too lean to bear exposure, though Mrs. John Jacob Astor, for example, is so round yet slender that, saving her evening glove, her arm is slaways quite bare. She is one bear exposure, though Mrs. John Jacob Astor, for example, is so round yet slender that, saving her evening glove, her arm is always quite bare. She is one of the women who can wear a perfectly plain velvet, hooked up behind, cut square in the neck, short in the sleeve and the bright beauty of the velvet and the symmetry of her outlines all unrelieved save by a few folds of coral chiffon over the bust and shoulders and a white camelia high on the left breast. Mrs. Astor is one of the women who rarely wears more than two colors at a time, and those always distinctively evening shades.

Apparently she does not approve of the chromatic effects in yellows, greens and blues, beginning with a deep tone near the foot and shading out palely at the shoulders. If any color is run after this winter for evening wear it is yellow, for if you select the right tint or tone of yellow, whether you are blonde or dark, pale or rosy, you can wear it. Canary wing is a variation in the palest degree that takes pinkish lights under the gas and is much affected by the brown eyed, blonde skinned girls who put knots of turquoise antique velvet here and there, or veil a black crepe with the cloud like golden tissue. Women who, have oriental coloring will not hesitate to put the warmest orange chiffon over a petticoat of pomegranate silk and then on this drape a long overdress of tea colored lace, brightened with gold spangles.

Among pretty oddities in evening sleeves are tight satin arm bags that come to the elbow; there they turn back a deep jeweled cuff, while from this point to the wrist extends a rucked white chiffon swathing that drops clear over the knuckles. Another variety is the sleeve to the elbow, letting fall thence long flounces always to the knee. Narrow black velvet ribbons as often encircle the arm here, and dangle their loops and ends amid the meshes of the flounce. Hugging the arm tight to the hand then goes a sleeve of white lace, to be finished by a satin cuff in fine slender points, that fall over or back from the hand like petals of a flower.

There is no rule to set forth concerning the shaping out of a décoleté bodice. Only women with such faultlessly lovely shoulders as Mrs. George de Forest or Mrs. Potter Palmer can cut all the dress away squarely over chest and shoulder blades. A pretty style has come to pass, and a benevolent one, too, of treating the shoulders of an evening body with lace points and letting the points converge at the throat into a jewel collar, or lie in bands over the shoulders, or otherwise admirably veil a too aquiline bone, bridge a hollow or break a bad line. The cut out embroidery done in lovely colors on net and muslin, the beautiful, pearl jet and spangle passamenteries are all serviceable for trimming up in this wise some old black silk or satin evening waist and thereby giving a thin woman the effect of a décoleté waist with none of its drawbacks.

It is sad-to relate that on the whole this end of the century has nothing characteristic in the way of hair dressing to show. Our great-grandchildren will never hark back to 1898, as we do to 1798, for some lovely style to adopt with a fancy dress or borrow an idea from us. Go to the theater or opera if you like, for even bonnets are no longer de rigeur, and you will be sure to observe that the rule of head dressing is "go as you please." Three horizontally fixed rear puffs is still a good way for doing the hair for the street, though the majority of women prefer to roll up the length of their tresses in a heavy long lump and fasten that as low as possible on the neck. With some women this bag of hair lies even It is sad to relate that on the whole out on the shoulders, and with a long short-toothed comb, that crosses the base of the head behind the ears, everything is somehow made fast. These combs are nothing more than the old round pompadour combs put to a new use.

One drawback to his head-dress, as adopted by day, is that it can rarely be kept tidy; it is ludicrous with the new hats and the natural hair grease rubs off on the shoulders of the gown.

In the evening it is very pretty, for a mass of bright black, yellow or brown hair down on white shoulders is becoming to most women, while some of these combs are topped with brilliants, and at either end the jewels form a sort of rosette, or two big glittering buttons behind the wearer's ears. Not a wisp of a bang is seen feathering out on any thoughtful white forehead, and only one new hair ornament is talked about. This is a little jeweled chain about eighteen inches long, having a fuchsia in diamonds or a daisy at either end. The chain is meant to be woven among the coils of hair, and the flowers of brilliants peep out at any point desired.

Over in Paris, where Mrs. Pell recently gave to her friends in the smart American colony, a splendid dinner and dance, a number of these hair chains were worn. Some of them were draped over the coiffure, were punctuated with small jeweled flowers at every inch or so were a chain of small carved gold bells that tinkled musically at every movement of the head they adorned.

A pure slate blue is the color of the sea lion skin from which the small traveling bags, shawl straps, etc., are made, and it is mounted in blue steel or enameled in silver. Stout, round wooden bars, covered with sea lion skin, made fast with gold-headed nails, are the most novel umbrella handles in the market. Sea lion, like alligator skin, improves in tone by use, but to give even a slight description of the varieties of handles offered for umbrellas would verily be to mention full 500 sorts of materials and shapes.

Young Mrs. Howard Gould, for instance, has a score of remarkable jade, enamel, leather, gold, ivory and gun metal handles that she screws off and on, one or two favorite silk rain protectors, as the color of her gown or the preferences of a moment may dictate.

A hat with a fur brim may sound weighty, but it is pretty for all that, especially if the fur is chinchilla and the crown is a flat Holbein affair pressed back on one side by a huge rosette of white feathers. That at least is one type of the headgear that has a following just now. A great display is made in the shops of tiny toques twisted up out of a half-yard of blas velvet and absolutely nothing more. The velvet is usually of the most daring color, or shaded like a rainbow, and has two tall rabbit-ear points springing up in front.

The worthy guinea hen makes the most hay in the autumn sunshine, for we now have hats, the crowns or brims of which are made of the pretty speck of feathers. Brims are sometimes appropriately faced with this barnyard plumage, and there is, by the way, a deal of emphasis laid on facings of the hat. The milliners have persuaded many customers to have a narrow line of scarlet spangles run in under the brim and just in front next to the hair. By this device, the hat-makers say, a warm red light is reflected on the cheeks just under the eyes, thereby greatly adding to the brilliancy of the latter. Blonde women face their hats with turquoise blue chenille lace, and sallow women take a dash of pale pink under the brim, and all these devices are said to be actual helps to beauty.

Any woman, say the wiseacres, looks the better for wearing white or cream white tulle next her face, and acting on this suggestion every woman who studies her appearance wears a tulle stock and a big tulle bow under her chin. Some of them button up their black, brown or dark green cloth walking coats to not only a tulle collar, but a small tulle dicky that spreads down below the bow. They get by this means the same crisp charm of linen, with none of its harshness, for in cold weather linen is a cruel trial to the tender fiesh of feminine throats. Tulle bows and stocks are not, after all, so fragile as they sound, and not a woman that wears them but adds something to her looks—by their ald. The newest ribbon collar is without a bow, but has a jeweled clasp instead. It winds twice about the neck and fastens in front, the two parts of the clasp being sewed to the ends of the ribbon. The clasps are either, of real jewels and precious stones, or clever and almost as serviceable imitations.

What some of the new overskirts look like is suggested in the accom-panying pictures this week. The gowns that are coupled together show first a costume of rich red Nassau cloth, having a polonaise of velvet in a deeper tone, and the pointed front of deeper tone, and the pointed front of the polonaise overlaid with gray Russian lace. The sleeves are also treated with lace, while a full jabot falls over the bust. The companion dress is a wool bengaline in Lincoln green, worm with a redingote overskirt of figured French fantasie. The walst has tucked green silk sleeves, and yoke and/a tiny pocket of lace falling over the lower figured half of the body. The braided gown is elaborated in grav Ottoman cloth, striped in a narrow and widely-set figured band, and the second picture shows a theater dress of moired satin upon a rosy lilac faced cloth skirt. The satin drapery is edged and figured with jet, and the same scheme of decoration is repeated on the walst.

A group of ball gown bodies is given the second series of pictures. Each in the second series of pictures. Each of these elaborates in detail the fact set forth above, that few women would any longer cut their gowns according to court regulations, that is, open and unrelieved from shoulder to shoulder. Lace treatments are popular and pretty, and by any one of these sketches an old walst would not only be renevoated, but given a decided air or novelty.

ERASING EXTRA FAT. USES OF A MUSCLE POLLER IN MAS-SAGE AT HOME

Healthy human flesh is not so solid so obstinate, nor so quick of growth that it cannot be successfully checked or removed without injury to-the wellbeing, spirits or good looks of its pos-sessor. On exactly the same principle any fairly wealthy person can acquire hard flesh by other means than eating cream tarts and abstaining from exercise. This will be cheering news per-haps to many thousands of American women who for comfort's or vanity's sake heartily deplore the fact that only by the sweat of the brows or by monkish abstinence have they hitherto been able to keep their pounds in proportion to their inches.

The pleasant assurance comes from an American man, who says this desired equilibrium can be certainly maintained and neither dieting nor tromendous manual labor need be the means resorted to. Dieting has been faithfully tried and it has always proven as injurious as it is ineffective, while physical exercise is all very well in theory, but there are mighty few busy women who can or will take enough of it or follow severe athletics persistently enough to overcome the inclination toward the formation of adipose tissue.

Now, what this man says and speaks by the book, is that all superabundant

Now, what this man says and speaks by the book, is that all superabundant flesh arises from some effect in the method by which the sadly overtaxed American stomach makes use of the foods put in it. As a race we eat rather fattening foods on the whole, and the weight and bulk produced from them is not actually hard, close-knit flesh, but an ever thickening coat of such loose fat as is found overlaying the bodies of fowls and animals penned and fed for fairs and markets.

Given the proper encouragement this debilitating growth deposits its fat cells in the muscular tissues, and so weakens the sinews that exercise is difficult and exhausting. It is all very well to tell a large woman to bend over and touch her toes 100 times every day, to lie on her back and kick her heels in the air, but in her valiant efforts to do it she is most likely to strain her feeble muscles and so exhaust and deplete her strength on the first few trials that only an iron resolution can carry her through.

A NEW KIND OF MASSAGE.

A NEW KIND OF MASSAGE.

After all has been done and said, there is only one way of overcoming this degeneration into fat, and that is by massage. With a Swedish rubber, who solentifically understands her profession, fat can be dissipated. But a scientific Swedish masseuse is a luxury only the wealthy can enjoy, so the refuge for ninety and nine wothe refuge for ninety and nine wooden, who hitherto have borne their fat as best they might, is to buy a little appliance called a massage roller, and go at the business of fat-reduction themselves. A massage roller is a very innocent-looking utensil for the great work it performs of bringing figures into bounds. It consists of four solid wooden wheels, about as big as Mexican dollars, revolving on a small wooden bar. By a handle fastened to a tight frame, the wheels are pushed about on the principle of a lawn roller over the grass, and every one of the wheels is bound with a rubber band.

Applied in the right spirit, this little ippraction, that will fit into a skirt pocket, will develop all the virtues of

dumbbells, Indian clubs and a bicycle rolled into one, chiefly because it acts with rapidity and invariable efficacy, and no particular effort or will strength is required to keep it in operation. The object of its use is to secure exactly the same effect on the fatty tissues and the muscles as the hands of the skilled masseuse, with the blessed difference that no particular skill necessary in its employment, and on experimenting with it the general effect will be found superior to the labor of the human hand.

As a rule with women, fat grows here and there over the body without reference to symmetery or comfort. It collects on the hips, shoulders, upper arm or bust, about the abdomen, chin and often either above or below the knee. A fat woman is bound in the course of time to grow round-shouldered, the whole abdomen protrudes, the chin hangs like folds of a curtain, on the chest. This is of course due first to the weight of fat and again to the fact that the fat cells enter and weaken the muscles. the muscles,

HOW TO USE IT.

Armed with a muscle roller the indi-vidual cursed with flesh will in the morning, after her bath, slip into her wool or cotton underclothing and roller in hand attack her enemy. Back and forth over the hips, up and down she will run her roller. This she can do till the hips cry out for mercy, for at pre-liminary use of the roller it will see the hips cry out for mercy, for at preliminary use of the roller it will seem to bruise the flesh and excite the languid muscles like a first game of golf or a long horseback ride. Next she can attack her upper arms, running the roller from elbow to shoulder and never across the muscles, for the advantages of the roller is that it increases the circulation, excites the muscles to effort and brings a hard, even pressure on the deep tissues, and not merely on the surface of the skin. As a matter of fact the rubber wheels excite no surface friction at all; roll them up the arm and easily as you do it you will feel them down to your very bones while the skin itself is scarcely disturbed.

Herein lies the prime virtue of this tool. If you ask a masseuse to treat

Herein lies the prime virtue of this tool. If you ask a masseuse to treat you for flesh she will try to dissipate the fat cells by kneading and pounding. She must exert her efforts to get beneath the skin, and that is what the roller does all the time. It goes right at the muscles and sends the fat cells flying. They cannot form, neither can they exist under the rotation of those rubber-tired wheels.

If a woman proposes to use the roller rubber-tired wheels.

If a woman proposes to use the roller to best effect she should buy and hang up in her room a diagram of the direction of all the muscles in her body and whatever point in her frame she proposes to reduce it is wisest always to learn the course of the muscles there, rolling them as they run. To knit up the muscles of her abdomen she will treat herself up and down each side of it and night and morning run her roller as often as a hundred times in one spot.

delicious glow of circulation will be set up that not even the most experi-enced masseuse could bring about. HELPS DIGESTION AND CIRCU-LATION.

But the muscle-roller, like all good things, does not serve only one pur-pose. Its chief mission is to dissipate fat, but as well it aids in preventing fat from forming. Used upon the stomach and abdomen, it sets all the organs of digestion and assimilation to doing their full quota of work, and not to flinging off into fat all the matter. ter it is too lazy to turn into hard flesh, bone, blood and muscle. It is a very torpid liver, indeed, that dis-not to flinging off into fat all the matter it is too lazy to turn into hard flesh, bone, blood and musele. It is a very torpid liver, indeed, that discrete doses of a roller cannot imbue with a due sense of its duty, and once blessed with an all-around, conscientious liver, a woman can count on a rosy, smooth skin, an even temper and such an amount of energy as she never knew before.

The judicious use of massotherapy exerts on this much-abused organ exactly the same effect as a day at hard manual labor, for if there is one element in the human body that responds to the touch of the little wheels it is the muscles. Next after the muscles, the blood is most sensitive to this influence, and when these two forces can be made to work healthily the body can easily be run like a well-oiled machine.

When beginning the use of a roller a woman should take the circumference of her hips, and week by week indige of their shrinkage by her tape measure. When she is satisfied that she is getting the best of her flesh there, let her buy a new roller, having only three wheels, and begin to roll away her chins and take the wattles out of her neck. With the same roller she can reduce her bust measure by half a dozen inches, but this labor must be done by regulations, not in the least difficult to understand nor so complicated that to follow them will take any valuable time from her pleasures and duties. To lay a hand-kerchief over the neck or cheeks and exercise the roller carefully will not only pull flesh off from a fat face, but put it on a lean one, and in the beneficent act it flattens out deep lines, discourages wrinkles and stirs up an energy in the blood that is wholesome and beautifying.

As further aids to her comfort and what is just as important to a woman, her good looks, the roller is almost indispensable. When, because of too much brain work or too deep indusered in social frivolities, insomnia, instead of sound sleep, sits on one's pillow, when nerves get the upper hand and a sort of debility proceeds from cold

So much can be said for the roller as applied to feminine needs. A man can get as much benefit from a two-handled affair, with twelve rubber-banded wheels ont it, and if his wife can, with her roller, keep her figure within any bounds she pleases, he can serve himself equally well, and by use of a roller counteract the effects of his sedentary office life, his rich dinners and his lack of opportunities or energy for the athletics that go to make a well-proportioned figure.

A Coming Apricot Producer.

ALIFORNIA produces, in an average year, about 1200 carloads of dried apricots, of which about onefifth are produced in the seven southern counties. Throughout a large portion of these counties there has been no disposition to increase the acreage for three or four years, but while other portions of Southern California have been lying on their oars, Ventura county, without advertising the fact extensively, has been quietly getting in its work, and throughout the Santa Chara River Valley and the Upper and Lower Ojai valleys an immense acreage is coming into bearing. The fruit is grown without irrigation, and to this fact is due a great fall below a normal crop. Last Year the county produced 125 cars of dried apricots, and this year, under favorable conditions, it would probably have produced 250 carwould probably have produced 250 car-loads, though it has turned out but seventy-five carloads. Those who are in a position to know claim that within years Ventura county will produce 500 cars of dried apricots per year, or more than all Southern Cali-fornia at present.

At the same time, the county will greatly increase the production of peaches. The present production of the State is about 1000 carloads of dried fruit, of which 200 carloads are credited to the seven southern counties, and Ventura county will probably add 100

Crediting the county with 12,000 tons of dried apricots and peaches, at 5 cents per pound, would give a revenue of $1,200,000 from those two fruits, llable to be increased in case the growers produce fruit suitable for canning purposes.

Asphalt Paving.

SPHALT paving has been intro-duced in Redlands. The Facts of November 17 says:

"The first asphalt paving ever put down upon the streets of Redlands was laid today by Bent & Scheerer, contractors, who are putting in the crosswalks. The first crossing laid was on Water street on the east side of Orange street, between the Baker House and the Chittenden Block. If this style of paving comes into general use in Redlands, as in some other Southern California cities, it will be interesting to have a record of the first use made of it in this city." down upon the streets of Redlands was

Arizona Coal Fields.

HE coal field on Deer Creek, in the eastern part of Arizona, the open-ing of which has been talked of for the past twenty years, have at last bees thrown open to occupation, hav-ing been thrown open to occupation, having been segregated from the San Carlos reservation. The Phoenix Gazette of November 16 says:

"At the Land Office at Tucson today the strip of land known as the Deer Creek coal fields, cut from the San Oreek coal fields, cut from the San Carlos Indian reservation, will be open to occupation, and locations of mineral claims thereon may be filed. Within the territory known as the coal fields, besides valuable deposits of coal, there are large deposits of valuable mineral—gold, silver, copper and lead. These deposits in many places crop out in large ledges for miles, A great many locations have already been made and held, some of them for two years, the owners patiently remaining with them, awaiting the final segregation of the strip, so that development might be begun and capital interested in that work.

"The copper locations on this strip have attracted special attention, and it is confidently believed that there are copper mines in the coal fields district which will develop into a copper camp equal to Clifton, Bisbee or Globe. This copper belt is located twelve miles south of the San Carlos agency, from which point there is now a crude waron road. The line of the Gila Val-ley, Globe and Northern Railway passes San Carlos, and from that point a branch railroad could easily be built to the new district, which will, of course, be done with the develop-ment of the district.

"Wood and water are both abundant in the coal fields district, and thereby the reduction of mineral will be at a minimum cost, and if the coal deposits are developed the cost of mining in this district will be a trifle of what it is at present in Arizona, while coke for smelting purposes has to be transported across the continent.

doubt this new mineral district will at once become prominent among mining men, and the conditions there are certainly very inviting for safe investments. The development of this district means another new home market for the products of the farms in this valley—hay, flour, barley, poultry, dairy products, etc.

"Among those who are now interested in claims in the coal fields district are W. J. Parks of Solomonville, who went there more than two years ago: J. N. Porter, B. Jones and Alex Hunt of Geronimo; J. J. Bull and Frank Weightman of Pima, and E. T. Ijams of Safford."

Prosperous Orange County.

HE Santa Ana Blade recently con-tained the following encouraging information regarding the outlook in Orange county:

"Now that the time has arrived when the business of 1898 has been about disposed of, it is natural that those hav-ing an interest in this section of the country and in Orange county in par-ticular should look about them and in-vestigate as to the prospects of the

"The whole of the State of California "The whole of the State of California, and the southern portion in particular, has just passed through a season of unprecedented drought, and the consequent shortage in hay and grain crops has had an appreciable effect on the prosperity of the country, but as the year draws to a close a careful consideration of existing conditions make it plain that we are by comparison much better off than for the past three or four years. The Santa Ana Valley, and, locally, Orange county, is, to begin with, blessed even under extraordinary conditions, with an adequate gin with, blessed even under extraordinary conditions, with an adequate water supply, sufficient not only for the successful raising of fruit and nuts, but for the production in abundance of alfalfa, pumpkins and root crops, by which the great dairy interests are also sustained.

"This, so far as irrigable lands go, places this section out of danger, even though we were to be treated to a repetition of last season's experience, and the prediction of those who are most deeply interested justify the belief that the lands dependent on natural moisture, for successful cultivation, will amply reward the labor of the husbandous the seminar assents.

"That this view is indulged by the majority may be easily ascertained by the expressed opinion of the bankers and other business men of this city, whose lessening or increasing volume of trade is a sure index to the success or failure of their patrons, the farmer.

"A Blade representative recently in-opinion of the prospect for the immediate future.

"The one condition, however, in the general summing up, is that we shall have rain, but as it is taken for granted that that condition will be fulfilled, the prospect is unanimously admitted to be most satisfactory.

"Outside of the good to be done the roads throughout the country, there has as yet been not much need of rain except to start the feed and thus help out the cattle and sheep men, but even those who are engaged in that industry will not suffer should the rains come within the next five or six weeks. The best crops this part of the county ever knew, according to the acreage, was in 1883, when the first rain of the season came only on January 25, and while we should neither want nor expect the flood that followed, still it illustrates the old adage that 'all signs fall in a dry year."

"Let us, therefore, look confidently forward to the future, and just so surely as we have been promised a seedtime and harvest, just so surely we shall have it, and the present promise is that both shall be record-breakers in Orange county for 1899."

Lake Hemet Water.

O NE of the irrigation enterprises that has done well during the past dry season is that of the Lake Hemet Water Company. The Riverside dry season is that of the Lake Hemet Water Company. The Riverside Press of November 18 says:

"The company has sold during the past season to the Florida people nearly $1000 worth of water, besides furnishing water to all its patrons to the full extent of their obligations—i.e., one inch to eight acres; and as there was watered from their reservoir 75 acres of oranges, 50 acres of garden, 10 acres of nursery, 725 acres of deciduous and olive trees, 204 acres of alfalfa and 505 acres of potatoes, it will be seen that there has been some water used in Hemet this year. At the beginning of the season the water in the reservoir stood at 100ft, 7in., and at the close, November 15, there was 73ft, 1½in. of water in the reservoir; so it will be seen that even with the minimum rainfallthis winter Hemet will not suffer for the want of water next seesuffer for the want of water next sea-

San Diego Wharf Improvements

THE United States Union of Novem ber 18 says:

General Superintendent Engineer Perris and Superintendent Beamer of the Santa Fé road arrived from Los Angeles yesterday afternoon

Beamer of the Santa Fé road arrived from Los Angeles yesterday afternoon in two private cars, for the purpose of deciding upon the improvements to be made to the Santa Fé wharf, and the amount of trackage necessary to handle the business that will be done in this city by the Santa Fé in connection with the new steamship line. General Manager Nevin had intended to come with the other officials, but was detained at Los Angeles.

The officials made a careful survey of the steamship end of the Santa Fé wharf during the afternoon, also in specting the yards as far down as Twenty-second street. Superintendent Wells, who is very affable and inclined to give the public all the information possible concerning the, extensive improvements to be made here, said last night that at least three miles of trackage would be laid in this city, in addition to that already laid. This will accommodate about 500 freight cars, and will necessarily require more engines in the yards here.

"We must make these improvements on a good scale," said Mr. Wells, "in order to accommodate this steamer is to be here in January. The wharf is about completed, only twenty-three piles remaining to be driven. The warehouse on the southern end of the wharf will be 46x350 feet in size, and will, I believe, be constructed of corrugated iron. But the details of this work will not be decided upon until our return to Los Angeles tomorrow morning. There is a good deal to be done, and work will be pushed forward rapidly."

A Deep-well Pump.

A PUMP, of which great things are claimed, is the invention of P. K. Wood of this city. It is known as Wood's deep-well propeller pump, and may be seen at No. 203 North Main

This pump is a novelty in pump-making, and is destined to revolutionize irrigation, as well as being a first-class mining pump, for with this pump a solid column of wet sand without water was raised out of a well from a depth of 120 feet, a feat unparalleled in the history of pumping. It has no equal for pumping muddy water, such as is met with in pumping tailings. This pump is a novelty in pump-mak-

San Joaquin Ranch.

HE Santa Ana Blade of November 17 had the following in re gard to the cultivation of the big San Joaquin ranch during the coming

"The farmers on the San Joaquin ramch are making active preparations for seeding this season and in many instances much plowing has already been done. Should the rains come at the right time it is confidently expected that the coming crop will be a phenomenal yield as the land has been practically summer-failowed by being allowed to rest from crop raising for the past year.

"In 1892, it will be remembered, exactly similar conditions obtained throughout this county as we have had to face for the past year. The year 1892 was about as dry throughout Orange county as 1898 has so far been, but the following year, 1893, will be long remembered as one of the best crop years Orange county ever knew. However this prediction based on past experience may turn out, the fact remains that all those leasing large tracts on the San Joaquin are busily engaged in plowing in preparation for seedtime, and in most cases the work has well progressed toward completion.

"J. W. King, who for the past eight years has farmed extensively on the San Joaquin ranch, is well satisfied with the prospects, and is showing his faith by his works. Mr. King farms 2100 acres and has for the past few weeks had six six-horse teams steadily plowing. He will increase the force as the season advances, and be prepared to take advantage of the most favorable opportunity for planting. Mr. King believes that there is a certain time to sow and where the derstood that the larger farmers, such as J. W. King, will plant a certain acreage each year. This year Mr. King will have 100 acres in beans, the lima and "blackeye" being the varieties chosen, and from past experiments Mr. King is satisfied that this bean crop will be as profitable as any to be handled.

"Sugar beets are also grown to come extent on this big ranch, and under fairly favorable conditions have given satisfaction."

siderable talk about town in regard to making a movement in favor of local improvement. The excitement attending the election postponed action until last week, but a number of our citizens have now associated themselves together in an incorporated company, the purpose of which is to encourage and foster any enterprise which will tend to the improvement of the city. The purposes of the company, as given in the articles of incorporation, which were filed last Saturday, are:

"First.—That the name of the association shall be the South Pasadena Improvement Company.

"Second—That the purposes for which it is formed are to carry on the business of purchasing, taking, holding, selling, hiring and renting real estate; constructing dwelling-houses or other buildings on its own or other property; negotiating sales, purchase, rentals and hirings of real estate; acting as agent for fire, life, health and accident insurance companies in soliciting persons to take out insurance therein; acting as agent in renting, hiring, caring for and leasing real property, and carrying on all other things necessary and incident to the carrying out of the purposes heretofore enumerated.

property, and carrying on all other thinks necessary and incident to the carrying out of the purposes heretofore enumerated.

"The amount of capital stock is fixed at the sum of $10,000, divided into 1000 shares of $10 each. The stockholders are: J. H. Goodrich, Kenyon Warren, M. B. Reid, J. A. Wood, J. B. Soper, A. Walker, H. J. Cone, R. B. Stephens. M. E. Keith, A. Gramshausen, W. H. Kilborn, S. M. Woodbridge, J. H. Jacobs, Alexis Hinckley, G. W. Wilson, W. B. French, G. W. Wyche, J. J. Young and John Sharp.

"The directors are: J. H. Jacobs, W. H. Kilborn, H. J. Cone, G. W. Wilson, Kenyon Warren, R. B. Stephens, J. A. Goodrich.

"A meeting of the directors was held last Saturday evening, and the organization of the company completed by the election of the following officers: President, G. W. Wilson; vice-president, H. J. Cone; secretary, R. B. Stephens: treasurer, First National Bank of Pasadena.

"J. A. Goodrich was appointed a committee to draw up bylaws for the company, to report at a meeting of the directors to be held tomorrow (Friday) evening.

"It is designed to erect an office building at once, which will be made the headquarters of the company, and where its business will be transacted. It will probably be located on Mission street, next door to the postoffice."

Santa Barbara County Lemon Ranch,

had to face for the past year. The year 1892 was about as dry throughout Orange county as 1898 has so far been, but the following year, 1893, will be long remembered as one of the best crop years Orange county exhibited to past experience may turn out, the fact remains that all those leasing large tracts on the San Joaquin are busily engaged in plowing in preparation for seedtime, and in most cases the work has well progressed toward completion.

Mr. King farms 2100 acres and has for the past few weeks had six six-horse teams steadily plowing. He will increase the force as the season advances, and be prepared to take advantage of the most favorable opportunity for planting. Mr. King believes that there is a certain time to sow and when that time arrives he will be ready for it.

"There will be about 35,000 acres under cultivation this season on the San Joaquin, mostly devoted to wheat and barley, although there will also be planted quite an acreage to beans.

"It is understood that one of the lease conditions is that rotation of crops shall be practiced by the tenders, although there will also be planted quite an acreage to beans.

stage of development, from the embryo flower buf to the fruit ready for curing. Mr. Higgins and Lucien have recently invented a new cultivator especially adapted for working under the low-hanging branches of the trees, so the ground, clear up to the trunk, will be cultivated as thoroughly as that between the rows, without breaking the branches or injuring the fruit. "But the chief feature of this ranch is the admirable system of irrigation from wells that have gradually been evolved. In the valley, especially in this portion of it, it is an impossibility to secure water from the streams for irrigation purposes. But nature has been kind, and about thirty feet below the surface, in this locality, artesian water may be secured in comparative abundance. Many farmers beside Mr. Higgins have taken advantage of the knowledge of this underground flow with most satisfactory results. In different parts of the ranch twenty-six wells have been sunk, at a comparatively small expense. These wells, by an elaborate system of pipes, have all been connected with a duplex pump with a capacity of 500 gallons a minute, which sucks the water by its numerous arteries from the ground and empties it into another line of six-inch pipe, where the same pump, by a reflex action, distributes it ever the entire ranch. The average monthly output from the wells for the season, which has been one of unusual drouth, has been about four million gallons monthly.

"While walking alvent the ranch the visitor will occasionally notice bigmouthed hydrants projecting from the ground. These are the hydrants of the line that conducts the water. In proper places it is discharged into wooden flumes, where it is carried to various parts of the orchard and let out through holes in the flume into furrows between the trees. In direct contrast to many other growers, not an ounce of spraying mixture is used on the place, and there is not a lemon tree to be seen that is infested with the black scale. Mr. Higgins had faith in the ability of the Australian lady bug to cope with this pest, and the insects have well repaid his trust.

"The past senson the price of lemons has been considerably higher than for years, and profits to California growers, in great part due to coöperation through the lemon exchange, have more than doubled.

"For fancy lemons $5 was paid this year, for second quality $1.50, and, for third $3 per 100 pounds, respectively. In 1825 the price of lemons went up to $10 in the East, and the best that was paid growers on this Coast was $5 cents per pound. This year lemons are selling at $6 for best grades, and the growers get 5 cents for best and 3 cents for poorest grades. This change for the better is due to cooperation by means of the exchange.

"What would the lemon-growers receive this year. Mr. Higgins, if the exchance did not exist?"

"Two cents or less, was the answer. "The writer asked in about what preportion the California crop of lemons stood to the total consumption in the United States. 'About one lemon to a box,' said Mr. Higgins, and he produced figures to demonstrate his assertion. If this is really the case, there undoubtedly is a great future ahead of this industry, if freight rates come down sufficiently to permit California to compete with Europe for the eastern market, or if the population of the Coast keeps on increasing as it has in the past twenty years."

Summerland Wharf,

C UMMERLAND, in Santa Barbara county, is getting to be a busy place. A writer in the Summer-land Advance has the following in re-

"Our new Summerland pler is one of the most frequented places in town. It is now fast drawing to completion, and soon steamers and vessels will be stopping here. Throngs of people daily promenade its deck, and people daily promenade its deck, and fishermen are as thick as bees in summer. Six-horse teams still continue carting lumber and piles to the farther end of the pier, while workmen are there pounding and hammering away, putting on the finishing touches. Everybody is astonished at the rapidity with which the work is being carried forward. The wilderness of derricks which line the shore there, also the long line of derricks on the wharf, give the town the appearance of a large shipping mart."

The building, appliances and collection will pass into the possession of the city next year, the deed so providing having been on file with the county records for several months,

"In refitting the room, and in purchasing casts, Miss Blake has already whose education and usefulness have

"The art room, as it will be called, has walls of terra cotta, and is finished in redwood. Everything is in keeping with the purpose of the room, even to the wrought-iron and irons, which are most artistle and striking. Massive redwood benches for the accommodation of visitors have been provided. It is a miniature of the great art museums of the East, and Santa Barbara may well be proud of the beginning.

"The casts are from Caproni of Boston, the greatest dealer in works of art in America."

Ocean Communication

THE Redondo Breeze says:
"J. C. Elliott of Santa Monica is build ng a sixty-foot gasoline launch at Terminal Island with an expected speed of fifteen knots an hour. The lounch will be supplied with extr powerful engines which have been espe cially constructed for the purpose of speed. This fast craft will be used to run from Terminal Island to Santa Monica, via Redondo, and it is thought the fare will be $1 round trip, from Los Angeles by way of any of the norts. This is an excellent idea and will undoubtedly prove a success."

Tobacco Culture.

A CCORDING to the San Diego Tribune, tobacco culture on the San Pasqual ranch near Escondido is proving satisfactory to the pro-moters of the enterprise:

"C. H. Hill is enthusiastic over the quality of the tobacco raised there and experts are of the epinion that the leaf is the best which has yet the raised in San Diego county. Sumatra and Havana tobaccos have been raised on the ranch, the latter appearing to be the best adapted for manufacturing purposes, although the veins of the Sumatra leaf are very fine.

"It is desired to plant 100 to 150 acres of tobacco on the San Pasqual ranch next season, and the continuation of the successful experiments already undertaken there ought to be the means of inducing capital to engage extensively in this profitable industry. The best of the product is worth at least 35 cents a pound."

Artesian Water.

THE Ventura Signal, in a recent issue, published the following account of the development of water on the Dixie Thompson bean ranch:

"The first artesian water this side of the Santa Clara River has been found on the Dixle Thompson place, near the lower rench-house. They have been hauling water in that vicinity for thirty

'Chamber & Witham, the Hueneme expert well-borers, are the men who made the lucky find. They put down a 2-inch hole 417 feet and have been rewarded with an immense flow of good water. The stream is raised thirty-five feet above the surface. To say that Jim Swett is happy is putting it middly.

thirty-five feet above the surface. To say that Jim Swett is happy is putting it mildly.

"The success of this experiment is valuable, too, in the fact that it demonstrates fully the possibility of artesian water this side of the Santa Clara River. Other land-holders will no doubt try for the valuable fluid and get it."

Santa Fe Oil Wells.

MPORTANT developments are expected at the Santa Fé oil wells. Orange county. The Anaheim Plain aler of November 12 contained the following:

"President C. P. Ripley, General Manager W. G. Nevin and Chief En-gineer Perris of the Santa Fé were at Richfield Tuesday on a visit which promises to prove of very great importance.

"The party came down on a special arriving about 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. From Richfield, a line recently surveyed from the railroad station to the oil wells, was gone over, the party being out about two hours, when return was made. It is believed the building of a branch line from Richfield station to the oil wells had been decided upon.

"This branch, if built, will do away with necessity for the pipe line it was recently proposed to build from the oil wells. That there will be great development in the field within the next six months does not admit of question, and there is every reason to believe that the Santa Fé would make a big strike by putting a branch direct to the wells. But there is further reason for belief that the road will build. As well as the other advantages to be gained, with a branch line once completed to the oil field, the way through La Habra Valley would be easy and but a step removed. A growing trade and rapidly-improving country awaits tapping here. The way on to Whittier and thence to Los Angeles would also be opened.

"From Richfield station to the oil wells, right-of-way for the proposed new branch has been secured. The La Habra Valley right-of-way has also been secured. It is almost certain that the road will be built. The visit of the officials Tuesday was final, and decision will probably be given out very shortly. President Ripley expressed himself as pleased, and there is no doubt but that he looks on the branch plan with favor. Should building be determined upon, work is likely to commence very soon and Richfield will be a busy center for a time, at least. The pipe works resumed operations there Wednesday, and have prospects ahead for a good run. Oil is moving lively, and all around things are brisk."

The following from the Fallerton Tribune gives some interesting information on conditions in the Santa Féfield:

"Reports from the Santa F

mation on conditions in the Santa Fé field:

"Reports from the Santa Fé oil wells are very encouraging. These wells are, combined, producing an average of 400 barrels per day. In some of them they are down 900 feet, but in the thirteen-inch well they started lately they will go down 1200 feet, so as to prospect the lower strata.

"The tabulated reports furnished to the company of the output of some of these wells present some features as interesting as they are peculiar.
For instance, well No. 2, the figures show that between August 1, 1897, and November 20 of the same year, a period of four months, the average daily yield was twenty-five barrels.
During the following months the average daily yield of the well rose to twenty-eight barrels. In the Februsry following it was forty barrels; in March, forty-five barrels; in April, fifty-two barrels, and in May the yield increased to sixty barrels aday. That, up to that time, was the maximum average yield, and then it began to decrease, and so rapidly that the average yield for July following had fallen off to twenty barrels a day.
August showed a slight increase. It was soon learned, however, that the decrease was partly due to the sas pressure being so great as to blow the well full of sand. The fact having been determined, the tools were sent down, the well cleaned out and deepened in feet, when to the agreeable surprise of all the well again went up to and passed its previous highest record. Its yield in September showed a maximum of 160 barrels in one day, with an average for the month of seventy barrels a day. During last month the reports show that from the list to the 21st, inclusive, the highest yield in one day was 122 barrels, with an average for the twenty-one days of sixty-one barrels."

Profitable Peat Land.

T HE Santa Ana Blade says: "Some idea of the possibilities of farming in California and es-dally in Orange county may be pecially in Orange county may be gathered from the fact that at the peat lands it is reported that celery growers have got this season as high growers have got this season as high as from $100 to $125 per acre for their crop, the buyer to take all risk from now till time of shipment. In some instances the same land this season has produced a five-ton crop of hay per acre, which at present market price, $18 per ton, aggregates the snug little sum of something like $200 per acre for each acre thus cultivated. If the peat land farmers don't wear diamonds soon, it's not because they cannot afford them."

IN TRIBUTARY TERRITORY.

Arizona's Capitol,

ROM Phoenix, it is announced that the plans of J. R. Gordon of San Antonio, Tex., for the proposed Arizona State House, have been adopted by the Capitol Commission. Otto P. Kroeger, a Phoenix architect, who has associated with Mr. Gordon, said to a

Orchilla.

NIGEL STEWART of London, has been in San Diego for several days, on his way to Magdalena Bay. Lower California. The San Diego Union recently had the following in regard to an enterprise in which Mr. Stewart is intrested:

"Mr. Stewart is interested in a syn-dicate which has practically closed a deal whereby it becomes owner of the vast property formerly held by the late Mr. Hale of San Francisco, who made a great deal of money out of the orchilla industry in years past. The purchase includes a strip of land 450 miles long on the coast, and extendmiles long on the coast and extend-ing Sixteen miles into the interior, with Magdalena Bay situated about in the center, north and south. Valuable fishing concessions also go with in the center, north and south. Valuable fishing concessions also go with the land.

"The principal capita" ist connected with the syndicate is N. E. Reed, an American, who formerly lived in Philadelphia, now of London. Mr. Stewart has already inspected the property and will again visit the lands, this time in company with Mr. Edwards of New York, and two Scotch mining experts, who will examine the onyx, the copper and other mineral deposits on the lands. While the deposits are known to be rich, it is probable that the syndicate will devote its attention chiefly to a revival of the orchillations, which since the death of Mr. Hale has been allowed to become unprofitable. Mr. Hale for a few years made something like $200,000 a year by shipping orchilla to England. "Orchilla," said Mr. Stewart to a Union reporter, "is a very valuable product, and I am surprised that Americans, who are so, businesslike in most respects. did not buy up those lands and develop the riches which exists there. Still, it is in England that the best success has been achieved in the preparation of dyes. Generally, you Americans excel in manufactures, but your dyes do not have the fast qualities which have made the English dyes celebrated the world over. Orchilla is very valuable in England on account of its superiority as a mordant, and we shall ship large quantities of it to Yorkshire.

"I should prefer to ship it to the United States, but there is really no sale for it in America, as compared with the demand in England. Still, we expect to do a good business through this port, for we shall develop our possessions there on a good scale at as fast as possible. #### Kern County Citrus Fruits,

"The first orange shipment of the season from the Porterville country was made October 27, and shipments are now being made at the rate of three cars a day. Citrus fruits are in the market earlier from there by several weeks than from Southern California. Portions of Kern county have the same kind of soil and similar climatic conditions, and these fruits might easily be made the leading products of the county. One of the prettiest orchards to be found is situated in the mountains above Woody and is the property of Joseph Werringer. In it are orange, lemon, lime, peach, pear and apple dans above woody and is the property of Joseph Werringer. In it are orange, lemon, lime, peach, pear and apple trees. The orange and lemon trees are fit full bearing and loaded down with fruit, a living witness to the adaptability of Kern county to their growth. This orchard has never been injured in the least by frost, although it is much higher than the valley where heavy frosts are of frequent occurrence. This is no doubt owing to its being well protected on all sides by high hills. A considerable portion of the acreage in the foothills of this county is in what is known as the 'thermal belt.' where soil and climatic conditions are unsurpassed for the production of citrus and deciduous fruits."

stories comes, laden with the breeziness that makes their author dear. Two of them, only, are in Harte's earlier yein, the others being vagrant sketches suggested by his travels and acquaintance with many types of society. "See Yup," the inscrutable, is one of those mys-terious, far-seeing Chinese, whose seriousness and cunning calculation even Harte was never able to fathom, versed as he is in the intricacles of the "heathen Chinee." "Uncle Jim and Uncle Billy" represent that phase of pioneer character so lovingly and uniquely interpreted by this prince of uniquely interpreted by this prince of western writers—the phase that shows itself in loyal friendships, in patient endurance and in generous sharing of both gold and emotions when a "strike" makes one man fortunate

The cheerfulness of Harte's work is a thing to rejoice in. There is pathos and tragedy, too, but always relieved by a glimpse of fine feeling, a generous impulse or some retrieving gleam of humor that saves him from gloomy pessimism and puts the "high accent of tragedy" away.

There are German, English, Western-American and Spanish types in these sketches, all well drawn and full of Harte's sympathy with unsual moods and comprehension of motives. Like everything else from his pen, these stories are sure of friendly welcome.

conventional articles to be found within the Cornhill's covers. It deals with the small miseries and resentments which most boye can remember to have struggled with, and is as faithful to boy nature, though not so picturesque, perhaps, as anything of Mr. Kipling's or William Allen White's. There are two other stories in the November number, one by Fred M. White, the other a sketch in broad Lancashire by Orme Angus. Only the first part appears in this number, but the story promises to be a strong study of a rude but admirable character. There is also a chapter of "More Humors of Clerical Life," by Stewart F. L. Bernays.

A quaint "Dutch Boatman" by Nico Jungman is the Studio's November frontispiece, and the other pictorial supplements are "The Dreamers," an auto-lithograph by George McCullough, two reproductions in colors of paintings by the Japanese artist, Kawanabé Kiosai, and "Les Trois Freres," from a painting by Mlle. O. Roederstein. The leading article is a description of Sir Edward Burne-Jones's Cupid and Psyche frieze at Palace Green, six Illustrations accompanying the paper. Prof. William Anderson makes a study of the work of Kawanabé Kiosai, with abundant examples of the painter's art to point his observations, and there are six very charming drawings from the sketch-book of Tony Grubhofer. The departments of studio talk and original design are, as always, full of novel and beautiful suggestions.

The Independent for November 17 is a "book number" devoting twenty-two pages to a classified selection of the best books published during the past twelve months. Agnes Repplier writes a characteristically chatty and enjoyable paper on Byron. Theodore Roberts has a story, and Fudor Jenks asks plantively "Where Shall We Write?" asserting that the library is the last place in the wrold for inspiration, where the author is surrounded by great books which have said the things he wants to say with such greater superiority that the contemplation of them makes him weakly impotent.

in nineteenth-century England. Byron is not one of the half-dozen poets of all time—Homer, Virgil, Dante, Shakespeare, Milton and Goethe; but no other poet ranks so near them. And this, Prof. Trent assures us, is the general verdict of the critics, though they have not attached sufficient importance to "Don Juan" as a basis for this verdict. Prof. Trent says (The Forum, October:) "The great poets, 'not of an age, but for all time,' have all left masterpieces in which their genius has taken a long and sustained flight—masterpieces each in its way unapproachable. Has Byron left any such? He has, in 'Don Juan,' and its pendants, 'Beppo' and 'The Vision of Judgment.' These great poets are, to be sure, vastly inferior to 'The Divine Comedy,' 'Othello,' and 'Paradise Lost,' but 'Don Juan,' at least, is akin to them, in being a work of sustained poetic imagination, perfect of its sort, unapproachable, and perennially fresh. It voices its author and his age: it is sui generis, the greatest of humorous epics, couched in a style that could not be changed except for the worse, and unique in its combination of wit, humor and satire with a genuine and rich vein of romantic and descriptive poetry. It is, in my opinion, the single sustained work of poetic imagination produced in nineteenth-century England that keeps a level flight, the only one written in a style and verse form as absolutely appropriated by vits author as English blank verse is by Milton, the Latin hexameter by Virgil, and the romantic Alexandrine by Victor Hugo. I will go further and say that, to me at least, it ds the single long poem in English since 'Paradise Lost' that grows fresher. with each reading, and that gives me the sense of being in the presence of a spirit of almost boundless capacity. If this spirit does not soar into the heaven of heavens, it at least never falls to earth (save from the boint of view of morals.) but preserves a strong and middle flight."

George M. Fortescue had opened a packet of letters containing the secret of Junius, and had for family reasons destroyed those letters, disregarding Lord Grenville's instructions that the name of Junius should be publicly revealed. The son-in-law of Mr. Fortescue says in "Notes and Querles:" "In the autumn of 1864, soon after Lady Grenville's death, when Mr. Fortescue came into possession of Dropmore, I had the privilege of assisting him in looking through Lord Grenville's papers preserved at Dropmore, an interesting but laborious task which remains fresh in my memory. I found in a cabinet dispatch-box a large packet apparently of papers closely sealed with these words on the cover, "To be destroyed on my death," in Lord Grenville's handwriting, with his signature and sealed with his seal. There was no date of any kind on the packet. I brought it to Mr. Fortescue, who had never before seen it. He said, after some deliberation, that he did not feel himself justified in disobeying Lord Grenville's explicit direction that the papers should be destroyed on his death, though the packet was then and there burnt unopened. Mr. Fortescue's impression was that they might have alluded to Junius. So far as I am aware this was the only sealed packet found among the papers and destroyed. I have heard Mr. Fortescue allude to it on several occasions."

We may be sure that she never entered on the systematic study of old literature, noting down by the way "stunning words" to use in poetry. The brother was always an artist, but he had in him also a little of the artisan; the sister simply uttered the ecstacy which she felt. Independent of all material surroundings, she could kneel and worship in Christ Church, which has now received her memorial—in that grimy, sham Gothic, gray brick church standing in the dismal, narrow square.

"As literary material he used his own experience, his observation of the types then comparatively unfamiliar in the world of letters—the 'Georgia Cracker,' the country judge, the lawyer, the client, the traveler, who were all real people to this genial author, and became hardly less real, through his powers of description, to readers all over the country. It is almost impossible to realize now how strange these types appeared only a score of years ago. 'Old Mark Langston,' 'A Tale of Duke's Creek,' followed the Dukesborough Tales,' and, like them, was a vivid picture of country life in Georgia. Then we had 'Two Gray Tourists;' and them as the product of excursions such as most literary workmen undertake at one period or another of 'their careers, 'A Biography of Alexander H. Stephens,' and 'A History of English Literature,' produced in conjunction with Dr. William H. Browne, of Johns Hopkins University. Subsequent years brought more stories to Mr. 'Johnston's admiring readers; to the writer himself the same years brought anxiety, the loss of some of those who were nearest and dearest, and a failure in strength that his friends marked after the death of his wife. Among so many products of a hand that gained skill from the use which never wore out the distinctive charm it is hard to particularize; but, perhaps the 'Ogeechee Crossfirings' may be mentioned as an example of his later manner."

Poets Who Will Live.

An English critic, writing in the London Spectator, observes that it is possible to guess with some exactness the probable position of three out of four chief poets of the Victorian age. "Whether Tennyson, who threw back with almost the clearness of an echo the troubles and aspirations of his time, will untimately keep the place given him by his contemporaries is somewhat doubtful. Setting aside his lyrics, any of them of quite supreme quality, we find in the general body of his work too little, perhaps, of that primitive force, that world-outlook which alone enables verse to sustain the slege of time. But be this as it may, Tennyson has certain definite and obvious qualities of poetry which can be appraised and valued. The same remark applies to Swinburne. If he lives ultimately, it will be by a lyrical tempestousness and sheer mastery over words, rather than by the interpretation of life either contemporary or general. Arnold has touched on vital issues of his time with a gentler, and even surer, voice than Tennyson; but it must be admitted that he, too, lacks something of primitive force, and his range is somewhat narrow for that of a great single. Briefly, then, it is possible to single out certain sallent points which make for or against the immortality of the three boets named." When he approaches Browning the critic becomes uncertain of his ground. "This poet," he says, "for many years neglected by all but a few, lived to graso a fame almost equal to that of Tennyson. Indeed, at one period it was doubtful whether he had not eclipsed his rival to some extent, in the opinion of 'those who know,' At the present moment, however. Tennyson seems to have reasserted his supremacy altogether, and Browning is not a name to thrill and hearten with anything of its former power. Browning's success, so far as it was popular, may to a large extent be ascribed to that love of answering a riddle or guessing an acrostic which is natural t

'I give,' he continues, 'a few verses, which may serve as a sample of the kind of version I would recommend.' We all recollect the famous verse in our translation: "Then Satan answered the Lord and said. Doth Job fear God for naught?" Franklin makes this, 'Does Your Majesty imagine that Job's good conduct is the effect of mere personal attachment and affection?" I well remember how, when I first read that, I drew a deep breath of relief and said to myself, 'After all, there is a stretch of humanity beyond Franklin's victorious good serse.'"

By Rev. Charles Elliott St. John,

of these moods one cannot be nobly and continuously happy in this perplexing world. What faith is in all thinking, that duty is in all action. Duty is a far-reaching law, truly more like a path than like a sudden demand upon one. It is a great thing to be always ready for any sudden calls of unforeseen obligation, but a greater to walk day after day, year after year, in the unending path of simple duty. the unending path of simple duty. Dogged, plodding faithfulness is the mainstay of the world.

You will see that I think of obedience to duty as a part of the strength of life—not as a kind of slavery. Were one simply bound by the force of public opinion, or thrust onward by inherited tendencies of race or family, or controlled by hard conditions of each controlled by hard conditions of earn controlled by hard conditions of earning a living, he might hate all that and commiserate himself as a slave.
But the man of faith is governed by a law which he neither hates nor shuns. And while the doing of one's full duty is an almost impossible task, yet the persistent attempt to fulfill it is most satisfying, as well as strengthening. It is thus that we "go from yet the persistent attempt to fulfill it is most satisfying, as well as strengthening. It is thus that we "go from strength to strength."

We are aiming at achievements, but the bath of duty is a long and slow series of petty préparations. We long to wear the crown of victory, but life keeps us still at the struggle against defeat. We yearn for a rest and a play time. but the burden of our cares and house and interests is not for a moment taken away. Any step onward, be it timed or herolc, falls into this unavoidable path of duty.

Does it seem hard that life is one long period of preparation, for you hardly know what vague ends? A great musician holds hundreds of listeners spell-bound by the magic of his art. He moves them to exalted fancies, to reverence, to passion, to tears. For an hour he is the master of their emotions, and to a thoughtless observer this may seem to be the only true life. "This is what I want," the untrained boy will say, "to be a master over human spirits, and to be it now!" But the long years of dilligent training through which the master singer or player went—were they not life? Standing, violin in hand, ready to make it express his deepest feeings, the musician is not more loyal to duty than he was all through the slowly moving period of his education. He could not now meet the conspicuous duty if he had not pressed on so long in faithfulness to the tedious duties of preparation. No good book, or influential editorial, or useful sermon comes at haphazard from the idle pen. No stately building rises by guess work. No merchant holds his own by luck. There is nothing good done in the world save as the culmination of long discipline, and if any one thinks that this is cruel, he has not yet rightly estimated life or penetrated its design.

For, in truth, life is all preparation and discipline, So far as we can trace

Now it is a most desirable thing to have a bright and happy youth, but a very ignoble thing to become a mere pleasure-lover. The trouble with such young persons is that they have a mistaken idea of where the real glory of life lies. They are watching for conspicuous things, immediate and stratling successes, forgetting that a deeper merit lies with the steady life of quiet doing of duty, which alone upholds more showy deeds.

There are just enough exceptions to

There are just enough exceptions to this slow-moving law of duty to upset the heedless young minds of whom I am speaking. Every now and then some man whose life has seemed all wasted in sin and weakness steps forth as under a divine inspiration, and does some heroic deed. With no apparent training the rascal or the fool becomes a patriot, freely sacrificing himself for his country, or the giddy woman takes up unselfishly some burden of living in hardship. Human life is noble at heart, and these unforseen outbursts of glorious power in the lives of ordinary men show us what unsuspected depths of heaven are in our very midst. These bright exceptions to the steady law of life are the romance of life, and romance will not harm anyone who remembers that it is not the whole of life, not the real path of life and duty. Exceptional times do not come to the majority of mankind. They who dream of adventures seldom encounter any. So that, notwithstanding the romances we see or imagine, the plain path of humble duty remains our greatest opportunity. Therefore let no youth make the serious mistake of waiting for easy victories and exceptional opportunities, and so miss the path of duty and success altogether.

The simple tasks of the day we live in are the latest and highest call it is possible far us to hear as yet, and faithrulness in these provides a perfect joy and a further progress. The worth of life is to be measured, not by the magnitude of its enterprises, but by the nobility of its motives. If you have perfect trust in God and a clear conscience your modest path of duty is equal in worth to the broadest high-way of conspicuous fame.

There are two ways of entering into success, and they give very different kinds of success. The ome is the selfish

There are two ways of entering into success, and they give very different kinds of success. The one is the selfish way. Choosing this, one sets before himself a certain standard of prosperlty and says: "I shall be happy when I have attained that degree of wealth, influence, knowledge, skill, or fulfilled ambition." And the other is the noble way of faith and faithfulness. Relying upon the wise goodness of God, one sets before himself the present state of his affairs and of the world, and says: "By the grace of God I will meet these duties truly: I will bear these burdens manfully; I will live this day as if it were the whole of life and I could have no joy save such as I wreet out of this narrow day by faithful obedience to the highest that I know." Which of these two aims involves the finer sort of success? By your answer to that question men know your present worth as a man.

To him who lives and works with full trust in God life is rct narrow and hostile. Every moment of every day stands before him like an open door. It has a chance for him to go on about some duty which God has given. It is true that some unfortunate souls are heavily handicapped from birth. They inherit weak wills, gross appetites and inefficient bodies—and the finest heroism in the world is that displayed when such persons conquer their weaknesses, and live nobly by their trust in God. Now, if the sous that had so much against them by inheritance have been able to tread the path of duty, surely every other person can do the same. All the wrecked lives you have known have failed because they were not true to duty. They were weak in the moment of temptation because they had never trained their wills to honor the claims of duty. They were shiftless in the day of opportunity because they had developed no sense of obligation in regard to their use of time. Such persons would be simply objects for pity, if life provided them no way of reformation. But the open door waits before each one of the weak and the miserable as before every other mortal. It is man's constant privilege to submit himself to ennobling influences to drop all selfishness, meanness, hardness and doubt. More and more he can lift himself into a conviction of the importance of life, and of his life in particular, a conviction of God's direct interest in his affairs. That is the universal open door.

importance of life, and of his life in particular, a conviction of God's direct interest in his affairs. That is the universal open door.

Once step through that open door, once advance into the broad, free heaven of trust in God, and the first result in your life will be that you wilnever again regret that life is a path of duty. If you are not already happy, it will at that time burst upon you that the path of duty contains all of the worthy joys of life. In that path alone can you find complete happiness, permanent success, and full answers to your heart's deepest desires.

But these are only incidental results, the little things that are naturally added unto you after you have grasped the sublime ideal of treading the path of duty willingly and happily simply because it is the right way for your life to go. You do not hear the great artist complain of the years of work it took for him to learn to paint, nor the great scholar regret the long period of his early education, nor any one who has done anything, great or good say he begrudges the labor it cost him. It is enough of joy to be able to do grand things. Greatness is the being ready to act when action is needed. When any soul is thus perfectly adjusted to his faith in God on the one hand, he easily adjusts himself to the turbulent world on the other, and so goes on to tread the path of duty with the living God in his heart.

The beginnings of such true greatness stand before you like an open door. You can be great in little affairs, great in your acceptance of your work, great in your acceptance of your work, great in your acceptance of your restment of your friends, great in hough long years of patient readiness to do whatsoever thing God requires of you. Your greatness, your manly or womanly independence, lies not in being your own master, but in choosing rightly the spirit in which you will live, the law which you will obey. They alone are free, glad, eager and victorious souls who choose to trust in God.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

[Judge:] The little Zion congrega-The church was a smaal wooden build-ing, heated by stoves and lighted by kerosene lamps placed in brackets along the walls. But a time came when along the walls. But a time came when the members of the flock began to see the need of improvements. The younger members in particular objected to the scanty illumination. The Baptist church across the way had a beautiful chandelier, and why should not Little Zion have one, too? So the young people appealed to the pastor, and he brought the matter before the congreation at the next business meeting.

"I have been requested," he said, "to speak to the congregation about the purchase of a chandelier for our house of worship. I am sure it will only be necessary to mention fliss, as you can all readily see that a handsome chandelier would be both useful and orha-mental. Now, who will start a subscription for this purpose?"

"Deacon Barlow," he said, "you are the richest man in the congregation. I am sure you will not refuse to give $5 for such a praiseworthy object."

Uncle Si hesitated a moment, and then pulled out a huge leather wallet and extracted a $5 bill from its interior. "I hain't got no objection," he' remarked, "to givin' $5 to'ards gittin' a chandelier, but what I want to know is who's goin't to play the dum thing."

MISS BOUCHER.

It may interest the admirers of Dickens to know that I once had personal association with his character of Miss Mowcher, the little dwarf in "David Copperfield." This was at a school known as Pelham Priory, near New Rochelle, in Westchester county, N. Y. Forty years ago it was the most unique educational institution of its kind in this country.

It was the custom on long winter evenings to have us gather in the gold and white drawing-room with whatever fancy work we pleased, and hear some one of the sisters read aloud a favorite novel. "David Copperfield" had lately delighted our souls, and ton held us at the dinner table a little longer than usual to make the following announcement:

"To those who have lately been interested in 'David Copperfield.' I wish to state that his model for Miss Mowcher, the dwarf, will soon be with us. I have letters from England stating that she has recently sailed and brings me letters of introduction from my family there. Her real name is Boucher, and the very hard times in London this winter have compelled her to come to the United States for work. She will give lessons in lacquer inlay, hair work and wax fruits and flowers, and those who wish to join me and my sisters in a class will meet me in the music-room after dinner and put down their names. In due course of time Miss Boucher arrived, and it is needless to say that every young girl in that school put her name down as a pupil. Her work has long since gone out of style, for no one now wears hair rings or bracelets or permits wax fruit or flowers upon mantel or pier table, but I have no doubt that the dear little old woman lingers lovingly in the memory of those left of us who knew her forty years ago.

She was broad and squat and dumpy, just as she is represented in the pictures of the time, with the same overshadowing bonnet, deep black bag and bobbing umbrella—"the glantess," as Steerforth designated her when he introduced her to Daisy. She delighted to tell of how the great master first saw her coming out of a hair shop in London, and then and there laid siege to her as his model for the part. Jumping upon a table, "it was just this way he drew me," she would say, "when he depicted me as dressing Steerforth's hair and making mental comments on the 'Little Em'ly.' I was willing to pose purely for the glory of being put in a book, but he would not consent to that at all, and always slipped something into my hand at parting, for he knew the times were hard. Yes, we were all a race of dwarfs, as he calls us there—father, mother, brother and sister—but we none the less made an honest living. He used to read me that part where I come in the book, and I just got to think I was some way mixed up with Emily Steerforth, Rosa Dartle and old Peggotty, and that they were real people after all. But I wish you'd have known him as I did, not through his books, but dodging about the alleys and docks, getting up chats with the funniest people, and crossing with coin the palms of the ne'er-do-weels, just to hear 'em talk. He almost kissed me when he ran across me, for I was the very person of all others he wanted to put right in that place. Lor' sakes! I never minded his making fun of my duck legs and bobbing umbrella."

A strange sight it was on one of those cloudy winter afternoons to see the little dumpy figure mounted upon a table, and a lot of girlish faces looking up at her with breathless interest, hands suspended over bubbling wax or brushes poised in the finishing bloom of a rose, peach or a gaudy passion flower.

Her First Appearance.

"The biggest hit that ever I made in my life." said Blanche Bates the other day. "occurred in Australia, when I was so Mtile that I was not aware of my tremendous success. My mother was, however, and so was the audience, likewise the management, for they had to ring down the curtain to restore order.

"All that I know of it comes in a reminiscent way from my mother, who never hears the most romantic of Shakespearian dramas mentioned without feeling again the mortification of that scene of her young motherhood, which was not intended for the public's entertainment or pleasure. Our family history records it, and I've no doubt of its truth, that at this particular period I was teething; that I was frestul and that I was unweaned.

"The play was 'Romeo and Juliet' and the stage was set for the balcony scene. The nurse had kept me in the dressins-room in the early part of the evening, and finding that I could not be quieted she was allowed to bring me to my mother, who was seated on an improvised bench upon the balcony. concealed from the view of the house by a vine-trelised wall.

"The audience was intensely interested in Romeo's pleadings and his romantic love, which came to a climax in the most unexpected manner. Either the stage carpenter was unusually careless, or the super' who stumbled against the railing was exceedingly awkward-in all probability both-be that as it may, the front of the balcony came tumbling down, disclosing a most incongruous stage effect.

"There sat the 'fair shy Juliet' with her baby at her breast, while the lovelorn Romeo had to cut his scene, for the audience howled and howled until the curtain came down. Moreover it was impossible to bring the audience back to pathos and tragedy for that night was turned into comedy.

"I have frequently had to suddenly recover from a fainting fit or death scene to walk off the stage—"if the man on the curtain happened to go to sleep'—but about the funniest thing that ever occurred while waiting for the curtain to go down happened up north-in 'The Last Word' performance.

"It was in the scene closed by a plano recital of Mr. Roberts. The curtain stuck and Mr. Frawley told us to walk off the stage. We all walked of except Roberts, and I frantically beckned him to come off. I gesticulated wildly, and soon had an answer from poor Roberts, ellivered in an awful stage whisper, 'Stop that man's playing down front and I'll come off.' Roberts's plano was a dummy and the orchestrapianist was furnishing the music. It was very funny, and we all enjoyed the joke hugely."

Phenomenon Explained by the Presence of Much Arsenic on Board.

[Philadelphia Times:] The German bark Zion, which arrived at this port recently from Fowey, England, brought a rather peculiar cargo. It consisted of 1800 casks of china clay, but in addition there were on board 300 casks of arsenic. This part of the cargo had a of 1800 casks of china clay, but in addition there were on board 300 casks of arsenic. This part of the cargo had a remarkable effect on the crew.

The fact that arsenic as well as strychnine helps the formation of adipose tissue when taken into the human system in minute particles is well known, and both drugs have become favorite tonics for convalescents. On board the Zion the men slept very near large array of barrels containing the drug. They were stored in the hold near the forecastle, and partially exposed to the rays of the sun, which streamed in through the open hatch. When only about a week out from port one of the crew mentioned to his mess-mates that a peculiar and indescribable odor was corsing from the casks containing the drug. It was not long after their attention had been called to 't that they all noticed the same thing, and, strange to say, noticed it all the more forcibly a week later. Several of the German tars became aware of the fact that they were filling out their clothes to a much greater extent than when they shipped. Many others, as days went by, became abnormally stout, in yast contrast to the former slim appearance which many of them presented before the land was left. One man gained, it is said, twenty-five pounds. Others were affected to a less extent. But the aggregate weight put on by the entire crew was little less than four hundred pounds.

Several of the sailors are known here, and they are said to be scarcely recognizable when contrasted with the old days. The entire sudden taking-on of avoir-dupols is attributed to vapor, which, generated by the action of the sun on the casks, was inhaled by the seamen as they slept, and acted in precisely the same manner which it does when riven as a tonic in a prescription. Capt. Hammes, who slept aft in the vessel, entirely removed from the arsenic, does not show any effect of the inhalation.

RIPPLES OF MIRTH.

[Indianapolis Journal:] "I played poker with an Indian once," said the Cheerful Idiot.
"Beat him?" asked the unsuspecting shoe clerk boarder.
"He took my last Chippewa," said the Cheerful Idiot.

[Washington Star:] "I must congratulate you," said the very intimate friend, "on the manner in which you guided this campaign."
"Well," said Senator Sorghum, "to tell you the truth. I didn't guide it much. I simply hung onto the rems and let it run."

[Chicago Tribune:] "The case against you is perfectly clear," said the judge. "You stole a parkage out of an express wagon. It was found in your possession. On beig opened it was found to contain campaign circulars. The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the county jail sixty days."
"Your honor," protested the prisoner, "considerin the ralue of the goods can't you make it one day fur stealin and fifty-nine days for bein a durn fool?"

[Chicago News:] "That wood scene in the third act of your opera seemed so natural that I imagined I could actually hear the bears growling," said the Western man to the theatrical

"Some of them have't been paid off for six weeks."

[The Independent:] Old Gentleman (dictating a indignant letter)—Sir: My stenographer, being a lady, can not take down what I think of you; I, being a gentleman, can not think it; but you, being neither, see easily guess my thoughts.
